Congressional Quarterly services are primarily for newspapers and broadcasters at standard rates based on circulation and radio time rates respectively. Services are also available at standard rates to other media such as general magazines, forums, and publications of all political parties, civic groups, educational groups, veterans organizations, trade unions and trade associations. A school and library rate provides no publication or broadcasting rights. Written or oral use, direct or indirect, is reserved for current clients who pay for such rights in their regular editions, broadcasts, newsletters, bulletins or other releases. Special permission must be obtained before CQ may be used in special supplements, hand books, etc. Congressional Quarterly sources must be indicated if lack of credit jeopardizes any part of copyrights to any of its material.

Congressional Quarterly reserves second and subsequent rights in its services. Hence clients are not entitled to use back CQ material in any way that would cause Congressional Quarterly News Features to lose its rights and values in its own material. Non-clients wishing to quote or use material from any of its services must obtain written permission from Congressional Quarterly News Features, 1156 Nineteenth Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Policy Statement . . .

"By providing a link between the local newspaper and Capitol Hill we hope Congressional Quarterly can help to make public opinion the only effective pressure group in the country. Since many citizens other than editors are also interested in Congress, we hope that they too will find Congressional Quarterly an aid to a better understanding of their government.

"Congressional Quarterly presents the facts in as complete, concise and unbiased form as we know how. The editorial comment on the acts and votes of Congress, we leave to our subscribers." Foreword, Congressional Quarterly, Vol. 1, 1945—Henrietta and Nelson Poynter, Editors.

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

What Is CQ?

Special Features of CQ Almanac

How to Use CQ Almanac

What Is Congressional Quarterly?

Congressional Quarterly is the term used to designate all the services performed by Congressional Quarterly News Features, a private enterprise devoted to producing penetrating articles and complete, authentic reference data on Congress.

These services include: Special stories and features for newspapers; a current reference document on Congress, CQ Weekly Report; and the permanent reference volume, Congressional Quarterly Almanac.

Congressional Quarterly is designed to help newspapermen and the public check on the Congress of the United States, one of the most complex organizations in the world whose official documents each year contain millions of words, weigh hundreds of pounds and occupy several yards of bookshelf.

Until Congressional Quarterly began publication in 1945, there was no way for an editor or an interested citizen to find out about Congress and his own Representative and Senators without great expense.

Congressional Quarterly is the only news bureau devoting exclusive attention to the United States Congress. Reproduction and quotation rights are reserved for its editorial clients, which include daily newspapers, magazines, radio broadcasters, and publications of trade associations and unions.

Congressional Quarterly's staff organizes and indexes the vast stream of material pouring from Capitol Hill, from day to day, in session and out. Every week it reports to editors in CQ Weekly Report and at the end of the year it compiles the story of Congress in Congressional Quarterly Almanac.

To make the material easier to use, CQ has divided it into eight broad subjects, or categories—Agriculture, Appropriations, Education and Welfare, Foreign Policy, Labor, Military and Veterans, Miscellaneous and Administrative, Taxes and Economic Policy.

Every record vote is published. These are checked off on charts, with the Members of Congress listed by states.

CQ is complete in that it summarizes every public bill acted upon by either house. A summary of "Bills Acted On" accompanies each categorical section of the Almanac. In addition, a synopsis of debate and amendments and their disposition are given on all major bills.

All public bills introduced, including those acted upon and those which received no action, are summarized in "Bills Introduced." The bills are listed under the names of their sponsors, alphabetically within categories.

Editorial Policy

Congressional Quarterly is non-partisan and unbiased. It is complete, concise and convenient.

CQ Almanac

The Congressional Quarterly Almanac tells the story of Congress for the year. It is a condensation of acts, amendments, committee activity, debate, hearings, investigations, vital statistics on lawmakers, lobby activity, party policies and votes. It is organized into easy-to-find forms, whether you want to know the provisions of a major law, the story on a controversial investigation, or the first name of your Senator.

Individual Voting Records

Congressional Quarterly keeps individual voting records on every Member of the House and Senate on all roll-call votes. Blank forms for recording the votes of Members of the 79th through 84th Congresses are available to CQ clients. They can be filled in from CQ material, or CQ will complete them on assignment.

CQ Weekly Report

The story of Congress as it unfolds from day to day is told in the CQ Weekly Report, which chronicles floor action and debate and rounds up committee activities and hearings. CQ Weekly Report charts every record vote and summarizes bills acted on and bills introduced. Its coverage also includes:

News Features — Three exclusive stories, each spotlighting a major trend, situation, or political development on the Congressional scene.

Pressures on Congress — A continuing story of the forces exerted on Congressmen, presenting summaries of the legislative programs of key organizations on important bills and problems. The Weekly Report also lists lobbyist registrations, salaries and expenditures.

Congressional Quiz — A weekly question-and-answer feature putting the news in a nutshell.

Capitol Quotes — A resume of statements by Congressmen and public officials, gleaned from newsletters and speeches which are overlooked by other news media.

Political Notes — A continuing survey of political pressures and personalities, campaigns and elections, as they affect Members of Congress. Another feature, State Roundup, highlights the political picture on the state level.

Analysis of Issues — Background stories on an issue scheduled for early action, designed to give context to the news by detailing past votes, bills involved and arguments of Congressmen pro and con.

Week in Congress — A sprightly summary of the week's events giving the top news in capsule form. During the session, another feature, Summary of Legislation, traces the progress of major bills.

Index — A quarterly, cross-referenced cumulative index providing a quick means of relating past events to new action as it occurs.

At the end of the year the Weekly Report and its indexes are replaced by the Congressional Quarterly Almanac, which organizes the past year's material by subject, instead of chronologically, for permanent reference.

Special Features of CQ Almanac

VOTING RECORDS

Voting Charts — A complete record of every Member's stands on all roll-call issues. Members' names are listed alphabetically within states (or within major cities); party designations and, for House Members, Congressional district numbers are listed; a breakdown of the vote at the top of the chart shows how Republican and Democrats divided on each issue. Roll call numbers given are CQ's; they are not the same as those in the Congressional Record. For voting charts, arranged chronologically, see pp. 115-35 (Senate charts) and pp. 136-65 (House charts).

CQ Poll — Congressional Quarterly's unique poll of Members of Congress who failed to take a stand on significant roll-call votes. Members who were absent are sent ballots asking how they would have voted. CQ Poll results are incorporated in the CQ Almanac voting charts (see above).

(Note: Because of responses to CQ Poll, CQ voting charts occasionally differ from voting records in the official Congressional Record. In addition, they sometimes vary for another reason: A Member may rise days or weeks after a roll call and request that the record be corrected to show that he voted another way. If there is unanimous consent, and there usually is, the change is made in the text of that day's Record; but no change is made in the original tally of votes until the bound volumes appear a year later. CQ Almanac voting charts incorporate all such changes.)

Key Votes — The year's 16 most crucial roll calls, and how every Member voted. For a quick survey of each Congressman's recorded stands on these top 1955 issues, see pages 48 ff.

Historic Votes of Past Years — For assembled key votes by Members of the 81st Congress on historic issues from 1919-1944, see CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, pages 100-116. For collected key votes from 1945-1951, see CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pages 722-743.

LOBBY ROUNDUP

Pressure Groups — The neglected phase of the story of Congress: Organizational stands, opinions, recommendations on pending measures. For summarization of how the lobbies fared in 1955, see page 672; for more detailed information about lobby stands on specific issues, see committee "Testimony" accompanying each major legislative story and the "Group Stands" section at the end of many stories.

Lobby Registrations —Lists of lobbyists who register, the organizations they represent, their legislative interests, salaries, expenses, previous registrations, etc. Congressional Quarterly has listed registrants since passage of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act. For the first year of operation, see CQ Almanac, Vol. III, 1947, page 759; for subsequent registrations, see each succeeding Almanac; for 1955 listing arranged by fields of interest, see page 683, this volume.

Lobby Spending — Analysis of lobby expenditures, including a listing of the top spenders, as reported under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act. (For 1954 and first-half 1955 analysis, see pages 678 and 680.

Lobby Law Ruling — For analysis and text of the 1954 Supreme Court decision upholding the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, page 674.

CQ FEATURES

Elections — For final figures on the 1954 mid-term elections, reported spending by political committees, campaign contributions, plus preliminary political data on the 1956 Presidential election, see pp. 709 ff.

President's Boxscore — Mr. Eisenhower's legislative program and how it fared. For a detailed analysis of 207 Presidential requests in 1955 and their progress through Congress, see page 56.

Investigations — For CQ's annual report on the scope, cost and outcome of Congressional probes, see page 495.

Membership Committees — For listing of Members of the 84th Congress, membership turnover, and Congressional committees, see pages 16 ff. For each individual Member's committee assignment, see that Member's name in the Index.

Seniority — Listing of Members according to seniority ranking, which determines each Congressman's committee assignments, chairmanships and other perquisites. For seniority ranking by parties in the 84th Congress, see page 18.

Ages, Professions — For essential personal facts and figures, experience of each Member of the 84th Congress, see charts pp. 24-26.

How a Bill Is Passed — For an explanation of the complex legislative process, from the introduction of a bill to its final enactment into law, see page 94.

Glossary of Congressional Terms — For definitions of key parliamentary words and phrases, see page 96.

Nominations — For action taken on President Eisenhower's key 1955 appointments, see pages 665-70.

VOTING YARDSTICKS

Congressional Quarterly offers exclusive statistical analyses of roll-call voting, presented in Member charts and graphics. These analyses show: the measure of support each Member gave to the President; his support of the majority of his own party and the bipartisan majority; and his voting participation record. The regular yardstick features are:

Eisenhower Support — How frequently each Member voted "for" and "against" the President on roll-call tests of Mr. Eisenhower's legislative program and leadership. See pages 66 ff. for analysis of 1955 Eisenhower-issue roll calls, showing: Individual, state and party scores; President's victories and defeats; and role of Democrats and Republicans in supplying winning margins.

Party Unity — The frequency with which a Member voted in agreement with the majority of his own party on roll calls which split Republicans and Democrats along partisan lines. See pages 74 ff.

Opposition to Party — How often a Member voted in opposition to the majority of his party on a Party Unity Vote. See pp. 74 ff.

Bipartisan Support and Opposition — Frequency of votes in agreement with, and opposition to, the bipartisan majority on roll calls on which majorities of both parties voted together. See pages 81 ff.

Voting Participation — Frequency with which each Member voted. See pages 86 ff.

On The Record — How often each Member voted, entered into "live" pairs, announced his stand, or answered CQ poll. see pages 86 ff.

How To Use CQ Almanac

To Check A Congressman . . .

1. To gauge his activity, locate his name in the Index. Here are listed Congressional subjects and actions in which he played a signal role. Turn to the page indicated after each citation beneath his name in the Index.

2. For a quick survey of his voting on the crucial issues that were before the first session of the 84th Congress, check for his name in the charts entitled "Key Votes of 1955," pages 48 ff.

3. For a complete record of his voting in any comprehensive field—such as Labor or Foreign Policy — check the roll call list given on the first page of each legislative category and then turn to the vote charts indicated. CQ lists every record vote for every Member of Congress. All voting charts should be checked for a Congressman's complete voting record in 1955.

4. To determine how often he supported or opposed President Eisenhower's legislative proposals, as measured by his stand on selected Eisenhower-issue roll-call votes, see the "Eisenhower Support" charts, pages 71 ff.

5. Check the Party Unity charts, pages 78 ff. The number of times he voted with a majority of his own political party, and the number of times he opposed it, are tabulated there on a percentage basis. The Bipartisan Support charts (pages 83 ff.) indicate his support of bipartisan measures.

6. The frequency with which he registered no stands on issues that came to a roll-call vote can be determined by reference to his percentages in the Voting Participation and On The Record charts (pages 90 ff). These give the percentage of times he actually voted, or otherwise announced his stand publicly, or answered the CQ Poll.

7. Check the bills he introduced. To do this, refer again to the Index. Bills he introduced will be listed under his name, together with the general field to which they pertained. For a summary of the bill's purpose, and the name of the committee to which it was referred, turn to the "Bills Introduced" pages at the back of the book and locate the Congressman's name under each of the categories in which he submitted legislation. His bills are listed with his name.

8. Check his past record. Key votes for 1954 are in CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp 32 ff.; those for 1953 are in Vol. IX, pp. 74 ff. and those for 1952 in Vol. VIII, pp. 55 ff. The most significant roll calls for 1919-1944 start on page 100 of Vol. V, 1949. Key votes for 1945-1951 are in Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 722-743. Further details on a Congressman's action in the 79th to 84th Congresses will be found in Almanac Vols. I-X.

9. Finally, evaluate your Congressman's activity in relation to his opportunities. For example, note his committee positions, his seniority, and the data on his age and profession.

To Check A Bill . . .

CQ Almanac offers these four main paths for checking legislation:

1. Bills introduced
2. Bills acted on
3. Public laws
4. Legislative section text

Bills Introduced — Every public bill and resolution introduced during 1955 is listed in subject categories by name of sponsor. For listing and detailed explanation of how Bills Introduced are organized, see page 558.

Bills Acted On — Every public bill and resolution which was reported from committee or acted on by House or Senate is listed at the end of the appropriate legislative subject category (e.g., Agriculture, page 189; Labor, page 326).

Public Laws — All public laws of 1955 are listed in numerical order and described briefly on pages 104 ff.

Legislative Section Text —The legislative history of major bills, arranged by category, is presented at length in the following general sequence:

The bill's number, significant dates in its passage through Congress, final public law number.

Summary of the bill's primary purpose and most notable provisions.

Detailed analysis of provisions, in its final legislative stage.

Background and history of issues involved, keyed to previous Almanacs for past developments.

Relation to the President's program — his requests, pronouncements.

84th Congress: Organization, Officers . . .

The first session of the 84th Congress convened Jan. 5, 1955, with the Democrats taking over control after playing a minority role for two years.

It marked the second time since the Civil War that the Democrats had controlled both chambers of Congress while a Republican sat in the White House. President Eisenhower's only GOP predecessor to face the problem was Rutherford B. Hayes in 1879-81.

Four Democratic chief executives have had to work with Republican-controlled Congresses. In 1947-48, Harry S. Truman was faced by a GOP-controlled House and Senate in the 80th Congress. Other Presidents with the same problem were Woodrow Wilson, Grover Cleveland and Andrew Johnson.

Party Ratios

In the Senate, Democrats initially had a one-vote margin over Republicans, 48-47, with one Independent, Sen. Wayne Morse (Ore). The margin was increased to two when Morse announced Feb. 17 that he had joined the Democratic party.

The House Democratic margin when the session opened was 231-203, with one seat, that held by the late Dwight L. Rogers (D Fla.), vacant. It was filled by Rogers' son, Paul, Jan. 11, bringing Democratic membership to 232.

No deaths or resignations occurred while Congress was in session in 1955. (See Membership Changes below.)

A comparison of party ratios between convening of the first session of the 83rd Congress and adjournment of the first session of the 84th Congress:

	Senate			House

Senate Organization

As the first Senate business Jan. 5, Vice President Richard M. Nixon administered the oath of office to 34 Senators who had been elected Nov. 2, 1954. Four others, who took the oath during the Senate's November, 1954 session considering censure of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), were not re-sworn.

Nine of those sworn in Jan. 5 were "freshmen" Senators: Gordon Allott (R Colo.), Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.), George H. Bender (R Ohio), Clifford P. Case (R N.J.), Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.), Patrick V. McNamara (D Mich.), Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa), Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) and Strom Thurmond (D S.C.).

For advantages in seniority, Thurmond was appointed Dec. 24 to fill the unexpired term of Charles E. Daniel, who resigned Dec. 23, and Curtis was appointed Jan. 1, 1955, to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Hazel Abel, who resigned Dec. 31. The terms of Daniel and Mrs. Abel would have expired with the swearing in of the new Senators.

The next order of business was the election of a president pro tempore. Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) succeeded Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) to the post. The nominating resolution offered by Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Tex.), was adopted by voice vote (Democratic voices). An amendment offered by Sen. William F. Knowland (R Calif.) to nominate Bridges was rejected by voice vote.

Party Officers

The following served in 1955 as officers for the majority party in the Senate:

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Majority Leader, Chairman of the Democratic Conference, Policy Committee, and Steering Committee

Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- Majority Whip, Chairman of the Campaign Committee

Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.) -- Secretary of the Democratic Conference

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Chairman, Democratic Patronage Committee.

For the minority party:

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Minority Leader

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- Minority Whip

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- Chairman of the Republican Policy Committee

Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.) -- Chairman of the Republican Conference

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Secretary of the Conference

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- Chairman, Committee on Personnel (patronage)

John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- Chairman, Committee on Committees

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- Chairman, Campaign Committee.

POLICY COMMITTEES

Senate Republicans Jan. 11 voted to expand their Policy Committee from 12 to 23 members. Sen. Bridges became chairman succeeding Homer Ferguson of Michigan, who was defeated for re-election, Sen. Millikin said the primary purpose in expanding the Committee was to include in the policy group all 17 Republican Senators who would face re-election in 1956.

Members of the Committee were Millikin, conference chairman; Bridges; Knowland; Saltonstall; Young; Bricker; and Sens. Aiken (Vt.), Bender (Ohio), Bennett (Utah), Bush (Conn.), Butler (Md.), Capehart (Ind.), Carlson (Kan.), Case (S.D.), Cotton (N.H.), Dirksen (Ill.), Duff (Pa.), Hickenlooper (Iowa), Kuchel (Calif.), Smith (Maine), Smith (N.J.), Welker (Idaho) and Wiley (Wis.).

Members of the Democratic Policy Committee, in addition to Chairman Johnson, were Sens. Green (R.I.), Hill (Ala.), Kerr (Okla.), Murray (Mont.) and Russell (Ga.) and ex-officio members, Clements and Hennings.

. . . Party Ratios, Membership Turnover

House Organization

First order of business in the House Jan. 5 was the election of a Speaker. Sam Rayburn (D Texas) was chosen by a 228-198 roll-call vote. (See story, p. 389.)

Rayburn administered the oath of office en masse to all House Members and Delegates who were present. The House then adopted by voice vote a Democratic resolution naming the Clerk of the House, Sergeant at Arms, Doorkeeper, Postmaster, and Chaplain.

Party Officers

The following served in 1955 as officers of the majority party in the House:

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- Majority Leader
Carl Albert (D Okla.) -- Majority Whip
Paul Brown (D Ga.) -- Chairman, Democratic Steering Committee
John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- Chairman, Democratic Caucus
Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- Chairman, Democratic Committee on Committees
Michael J. Kirwan (D Ohio) -- Chairman, Democratic National Congressional Committee.

For the minority party:

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. -- Minority Leader and Chairman, Republican Policy Committee and Committee on Committees
Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.) -- Minority Whip
Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- Chairman, Republican Conference
Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.) -- Vice Chairman, GOP Conference and Chairman, Republican Congressional Campaign Committee
Richard H. Poff (R Va.) -- Secretary, GOP Conference

POLICY COMMITTEES

Members of the House Republican Policy Committee were Martin and Wigglesworth (Mass.), Cole (N.Y.), Fenton (Pa.), Kean (N.J.), Reece (Tenn.), Miller (Md.), Jenkins (Ohio), Halleck (Ind.), Bennett (Mich.), Byrnes (Wis.), Cunningham (Iowa), Miller (Neb.), Budge (Idaho), Mack (Wash.), Scudder (Calif.), Reed (N.Y.), Phillips (Calif.), and Scott (Pa.). Ex-officio members were Reps. Hope, Poff, Simpson, and Arends.

Included on the House Democratic Steering Committee (counterpart of the Republican Policy Committee) were Brown, chairman; Thomas J. O'Brien (Ill.), vice chairman; Rooney, secretary; and Reps. Fallon (Md.), Morgan (Pa.), Williams (N.J.), Chatham (N.C.), Garmatz (Md.), Rivers (S.C.), Boykin (Ala.), Morrison (La.), Spence (Ky.), Polk (Ohio), Dingell (Mich.), Blatnik (Minn.), Wickersham (Okla.), Kilday (Texas), Mahon (Texas), Fernandez (N.M.) and Sheppard (Calif.)

Turnover in 1955

In its first year, the 84th Congress lost three members by death:

Rep. Dwight L. Rogers (D Fla.) on Dec. 1, 1954. (Although his death occurred before the 84th Congress convened, and he was not sworn in, Rogers was considered a Member by virtue of his election.)

Rep. John D. Dingell (D Mich.) on Sept. 19, 1955.

Rep. Vera D. Buchanan (D Pa.) on Nov. 26, 1955.

No Member resigned in 1955.

Comparison with previous Congresses indicated that the 1955 loss was less than the average of recent years. A Congressional Quarterly survey showed an average of 16.2 lawmakers died and 11.8 resigned during the two-year span of each Congress since 1945. More died (an average of 5.6 Senators and 10.6 Representatives) than resigned (3 Senators and 8.8 Representatives).

During the 83rd Congress, nine Senators, eight Representatives, and one House Delegate died. The 82nd, 81st, and 80th Congresses each had 16 of their Members die in office. Fifteen Members died in office during the 79th Congress.

While death touched the 84th lightly in comparison with recent Congresses, the 84th was less fortunate with respect to serious illness.

Among Members sidelined for lengthy periods were Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) and Senate Majority Leader Johnson, who suffered from heart conditions, and Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.), who missed much of the session because of an operation.

NEW CONGRESSMEN

In a special election Jan. 11, 1955, the late Rep. Rogers' son, Paul G. Rogers (D), was elected to fill the vacancy in Florida's 6th District. An army veteran and lawyer, Paul Rogers was 33 when elected.

John D. Dingell, Jr. (D) was elected to the House to succeed his father in a special election Dec. 13, 1955, in Michigan's 15th District (Detroit). The new Congressman, a veteran, lawyer, and former county official, was 29 when elected and would be the youngest Member of the 84th Congress when sworn in.

Seniority

Senate rank is generally determined according to the official date of beginning of Member's service -- Jan. 3, except in the case of Members appointed or elected to fill unexpired terms, when date of appointment or certification or swearing in determines rank.

If Members are sworn in on the same day, those with prior political experience take precedence. Counted as political experience, in order of importance, are Senatorial, Gubernatorial, and House service. Information on prior experience is given below only when it affects a Member's seniority. Dates following names refer to beginning of present service.

Seniority

House rank is generally determined according to the official date of beginning of Member's service -- Jan. 3, except in the case of Members elected to fill vacancies, when date of election determines rank.

If Members enter House on the same day, those with prior House experience take precedence. Information on prior experience is given below only when it affects a Member's seniority. Dates following names refer to beginning of present service.

84th CONGRESS -- HOUSE: Ages,

As of adjournment of first session August 2, 1955.

This chart lists the Membership of the House for the 84th Congress, first session, as elected Nov. 2, 1954. Column 1 shows the age of each Representative as of Dec. 31, 1955; column 10 shows the Representative's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 18.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Representative, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

Professions, Veteran Status, Seniority

For changes following that date see page 17.

This chart lists the Membership of the House for the 84th Congress, first session, as elected Nov. 2, 1954. Column 1 shows the age of each Representative as of Dec. 31, 1955; column 10 shows the Representative's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 18.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Representative, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

84th CONGRESS -- SENATE

Ages, Professions, Veteran Status, Seniority

As of adjournment of first session August 2, 1955. For changes following that date see page 17.

This chart lists the Membership of the Senate for the 84th Congress, first session, as elected Nov. 2, 1954. Column 1 shows the age of each Senator as of Dec. 31, 1955; column 10 shows the Senator's unofficial seniority within his party based both on years served and prior political experience. (For explanation of how seniority is achieved, see p. 18.)

Check marks (√) in columns 2 through 9 indicate prior profession(s) of each Senator, and whether he is a veteran. See Chart Key (at right) for description of each numbered column. Summary shows number of persons with experience in indicated profession, with breakdown by party.

SENATE COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of members of the 15 Senate standing committees, their subcommittees, and the Senate Select Small Business Committee. The list is complete as of April 8, 1955.

In each column, Democratic members are listed on the left, Republican members on the right. Members are listed in the order of their committee seniority.

Each committee's name is listed in CAPITALS, and is followed by a brief description of its jurisdiction. Subcommittee names are underlined.

Symbols show where standing committee members serve ex officio on Appropriations subcommittees:

* Ex officio members.
 Ex officio members on diplomatic and consular items.
 Ex officio members on Post Office items.

HOUSE COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of members of the 19 House standing committees, their subcommittees, and the House Select Small Business Committee. The list is complete as of April 8, 1955.

In each column, Democratic members are listed on the left, Republican members on the right. Members are listed in the order of their committee seniority.

Each committee's name is listed in CAPITALS, and is followed by a brief description of its jurisdiction. Subcommittee names are underlined.

Ex officio members are marked by an asterisk (*).

JOINT COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of the six major Joint Congressional Committees and their Subcommittees. The list is complete as of April 8, 1955.

Joint Committees are set up to examine specific questions, and their existence may be continued or terminated as the need exists. Membership is drawn from both chambers and both parties. When a Senator serves as chairman, the vice chairman usually is a Representative, and vice versa.

For each committee, Democratic members are listed on the left, Republican members on the right. Members are listed in the order of their committee seniority.

Each committee name is listed in CAPITALS, and is followed by a brief description of its jurisdiction. Subcommittee names are underlined.

Other joint committees are those on the Disposition of Executive Papers, Library of Congress, Printing, Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration and Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures.

RECORD OF 84th CONGRESS

Democratic-Controlled Congress Works Amicably with GOP President; Major Issues Deferred Until 1956

The 84th Congress moved smoothly through its first session in 1955. Professionals were solidly in control. They turned out large quantities of legislation with a minimum of noise and fuss.

Democrats controlled the House and Senate by narrow margins. Although the White House was occupied by a Republican, the session was not notable for partisan clashes, but the Democrats squeezed close to maximum power out of their majority position. The House leader Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas), had been a Congressman since 1913, ranked first in seniority in his party. Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) was starting only his second Senate term.

Few milestones were erected. Showdowns on major issues were deferred to 1956, an election year, as Congress concentrated on routine legislation. In preliminary skirmishes, the protagonists maneuvered for favorable position on the big issues to be decided in 1956.

Major legislative achievements in 1955 were the three-year extension of reciprocal trade agreements law and revamping of the military reserves program. Sporadic flare-ups occurred, but they generally concerned peripheral issues like pay for postal workers.

PRESIDENT'S PROGRAM

President Eisenhower submitted 207 legislative requests to Congress. He won approval of 96, or 46.3 percent. In 1954, when the Republicans controlled Congress, 64.6 percent of Mr. Eisenhower's requests were granted.

Many of the 1955 requests remained alive for Congress' second session and stood a good chance for approval in 1956.

On roll-call votes, the Republicans outscored the Democrats -- 63 percent to 54 percent -- in supporting the President's position when he took a stand. But Democrats backed him more consistently -- 70 percent to 59 percent -- on foreign policy.

 One before and two after session.*

President Eisenhower asked Congress to appropriate $55,200,782,229 in new money during 1955. Of the total, $54,219,606,036 was for fiscal 1956, ending June 30, 1956, and $981,176,193 was to supplement fiscal 1955 appropriations.

Congress cut the requests by $2.1 billion, appropriating $53,124,821,215 -- of which $52,199,015,915 was for fiscal 1956, and $925,805,300 was for fiscal 1955.

An additional $7,162,000,000 was budgeted for fiscal 1956 permanent appropriations, requiring no Congressional action.

The $2.1 billion cut from requests during the 1955 session compared to $2.6 billion cut in 1954 and $4.6 billion cut in 1953, when Republicans controlled Congress.

Issues Deferred

Excise and corporation-income tax rates were extended one year, to April 1, 1956. Administration forces defeated a Democratic proposal to cut individuals' income taxes. Speculation began on chances for tax reduction in 1956.

PRICE SUPPORTS

The House passed a bill to restore rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity for five basic farm commodities. No concerted effort was made to force a showdown in the Senate, although hearings were held in preparation for 1956. Democrats blamed the decline in farm prices and income on flexible price supports, which were pushed through Congress by the Administration in 1954. The Administration contended flexible supports would help agriculture to prosper with a minimum of reliance on federal aid and controls.

HIGHWAYS

Both parties favored expansion of federal aid for construction of highways, but dispute over financing methods blocked action. The Administration recommended financing through special bonds exempt from the federal debt ceiling. House Democrats proposed to raise gasoline and other highway-user taxes to place construction on a pay-as-you-drive basis. The Senate passed a road-building bill without specific provisions for financing. The House rejected both the bond and pay-as-you-go plans.

SOCIAL SECURITY

The House overwhelmingly passed a bill to liberalize Social Security by paying Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits to disabled workers, lowering the eligibility age for women, extending coverage to most professions, and raising the tax rate. Senate action was deferred to 1956.

SCHOOL AID

President Eisenhower proposed a temporary program of federal aid for school construction, deferring long-range plans until after the November White House conference on education. Democrats criticized the program as too small, and offered more extensive plans.

Hearings continued through most of the session. An aid bill -- larger than the Administration program -- was reported to the House July 28, too late for floor action in 1955.

Foreign Policy

Bipartisan agreement prevailed generally on foreign policy in 1955. Relatively little criticism was directed at the Administration, although Congressmen of both parties warned against too much "softness" in relations with the Communists. They expressed skepticism about Communist avowals of good will and peaceful intentions after the Geneva conference of the Big Four heads of government.

Congress authorized the President to use armed force to defend Formosa, the Pescadores, and related positions from attack by the Chinese Communists. The Communists had threatened to invade Nationalist-held islands near the China mainland. Controversy arose over whether the U.S. should try to defend these "off-shore" islands, although there was general agreement that Formosa and the Pescadores should be held. Amendments to restrict the resolution's scope, excluding the off-shore islands, were rejected. Later, tension eased.

The Senate ratified the Mutual Defense Treaty with Nationalist China and the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty. Also ratified were treaties restoring sovereignty to West Germany and Austria, and providing for West Germany's accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

RECIPROCAL TRADE

Congress extended the reciprocal trade law for three years, to July 1, 1958, with authority for additional reductions of tariffs. Amendments to the law were designed to afford U.S. industry increased protection against competitive imports.

Attempts to impose import quotas on crude and residual oil were defeated. Instead, the President was authorized to impose quotas on any commodities imported in such quantity as to "threaten to impair the national security."

FOREIGN AID, REFUGEES

The President's request for $3.3 billion in foreign aid funds was trimmed to a $2.7 billion appropriation.

Proposals by the President and by others to liberalize the immigration and refugee-relief laws received only perfunctory attention.

ARMED FORCES

Democrats criticized Administration cuts in military manpower and arms, contending that pressure to balance the budget was endangering national security. The President's views prevailed, although Congress appropriated more money than he had requested for the Marine Corps. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson impounded the extra funds.

The military and doctors draft laws were extended, and a bill to strengthen the military reserves was enacted. Incorporated in the reserve measure was a program to train youths for six months, after which they would serve in reserve units for 7½ years. The President had requested additional compulsory features. Action on the reserve bill was delayed by controversy over an anti-segregation amendment, which finally was omitted.

Domestic Issues

Congress enacted a compromise omnibus housing bill which authorized construction of 45,000 units of public housing by July 31, 1956. The Administration had called for 70,000 units over a two-year period. The Senate originally voted for 135,000 units a year; the House originally voted to authorize no public housing.

POWER AND WATER

The power issue was dramatized by controversy over the Dixon-Yates contract to build a generating plant at West Memphis, Ark. The plant was to feed power into the Tennessee Valley Authority system to supply Memphis, Tenn.

Supporters of TVA wanted TVA, rather than private industry, to operate the generating plant. The Administration refused to budget for increased TVA power capacity. The Dixon-Yates contract was canceled when the city of Memphis decided to build its own power plant. Later, the contract was ruled illegal because of "conflict of interest" on the part of a Budget Bureau consultant.

The Senate passed but the House deferred action on bills to authorize construction of the Upper Colorado River water and power project. The Fryingpan-Arkansas project in Colorado was approved by a Senate committee but was not cleared for floor action in the House. A development project on California's Trinity River was authorized.

LABOR

The minimum wage was raised from 75 cents to $1 an hour -- 10 cents higher than President Eisenhower had recommended.

Proposals to amend the Taft-Hartley labor law were not pressed.

HEALTH

Federal handling of tests and distribution of Salk polio vaccine was criticized. Congress appropriated funds for grants to the states for Salk inoculations, forbidding a means test such as the Administration had recommended.

Health insurance proposals made little progress. The President submitted miscellaneous requests to establish and reorganize federal health programs, but action on most was deferred. Appropriations for medical research and hospital construction were increased.

PAY RAISES

Congress raised its pay scale to $22,500 a year. Pay for federal judges and certain other officials also was raised.

The longest, loudest battle of the year erupted over pay raises for postal workers. Congress upheld the President's veto of an increase averaging 8.59 percent. The President signed a bill providing an average 8 percent raise, although he had requested an increase averaging 6.5 percent. His request for higher postal rates was ignored.

Civil service workers received raises averaging 7.5 percent.

ATOMIC SHIP

Congress rejected the President's proposal to build an atomic-powered "peace ship" to dramatize the peaceful potential of nuclear energy.

NATURAL GAS

One of the year's biggest lobby fights failed to pay off. The House passed a bill to exempt gatherers and producers of natural gas from federal regulation, but the Senate did not act.

STUDY COMMISSIONS

The Second Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government submitted the last of its reports. Many of the Commission's recommendations were controversial. The report on power -- critical of large-scale federal generation -- set off the strongest criticism.

The Commission on Intergovernmental Relations also reported.

Congress established a Commission on Government Security to study federal security programs.

STATEHOOD

Hawaii and Alaska again failed to win statehood. A bill to admit both territories to the Union was killed by the House. Separate bills were not reported from committee.

ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Congress repealed a provision of law which made soil conservation payments conditional on a farmer's compliance with acreage allotments.

The Senate rejected a House bill to increase cotton acreage allotments, mainly in the Southeast. Rice acreage also was increased -- and curbs placed on cuts in rice allotments -- and recalculation of burley tobacco marketing quotas was ordered. The tobacco bill permitted cuts in acreage allotments.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Congressmen introduced more than 100 bills on civil rights, but they were pigeon-holed as the courts took the lead in dealing with minority rights. The Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation in schools was the subject of extensive debate, but no Congressional action. Anti-segregation amendments to major bills were rejected.

RUBBER PLANTS

Congress approved sale of federal synthetic rubber plants to private industry.

ANTITRUST LAWS

Antitrust criminal penalties were increased, and the federal government was authorized to sue for antitrust damages. Hearings were held on a bill to allow the courts discretion in awarding civil antitrust damages. The House passed and a Senate committee reported a bill to control bank holding companies. A bill to curb bank mergers was reported to the House.

SMALL BUSINESS

Congress extended the life of the Small Business Administration and increased its lending authority.

CUSTOMS SIMPLIFICATION

The House passed but the Senate did not act on a bill to simplify customs regulations.

WOCs

Congress enacted restrictions on employment of WOCs, personnel working for the federal government without compensation. Democrats had warned of possible conflicts between the private business interests of WOCs and the federal interest.

DEBT CEILING

The ceiling on the federal debt remained at $281 billion as Congress extended for one year the 1954 increase above the permanent limit of $275 billion.

Investigations

Emphasis in committee investigations shifted away from communism and subversion to more traditional subject matter. Investigators set themselves up as watchdogs of a variety of government operations and as trouble-shooters seeking facts on problems ranging from juvenile delinquency to unemployment.

Democrats controlled the committees. Many of their investigations probed for soft spots in the Republican Administration. They prepared to exploit their findings in the 1956 campaigns. Republicans accused some of the probers of smear tactics.

As of Aug. 22, committees had launched 116 investigations. The leading topic was military programs -- the focus of 24 probes. Communism and subversion came second, with 16 investigations, followed by 13 studies of business and businessmen.

Most of the Democrats' biggest potential campaign issues were well represented on the investigation agenda. They challenged Administration cut-backs in military spending, charged that the Republicans were running the government for the benefit of big business, criticized subordination of public power to private projects, and contended that Administration agricultural policies were impoverishing farmers.

Congress made $6,114,133 available for investigations, and Senate and House committees reported spending $1,148,003.54 of the total during the first six months of the 84th Congress.

Allegations of unfairness in past investigations led to tightened committee operating rules.

No investigation matched the drama and publicity of the 1954 investigation of charges and counter-charges hurled by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) and the Department of the Army.

Perhaps the most spectacular investigation of 1955 was the probe of Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott's business interests. He resigned.

Investigations of the Dixon-Yates power contract also hit the headlines. Democrats started by criticizing the proposal as an attack on the Tennessee Valley Authority, then challenged the way it was prepared. Memphis, Tenn., which was to receive the power generated by the Dixon-Yates plant, decided to build its own generating plant, and President Eisenhower canceled the contract. Investigation continued into possible conflicts of interests in formulation of the contract.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) investigated the stock market, despite warnings that the probe might shake public confidence. He characterized his committee's study as "friendly."

Other committees looked into corporate mergers and the growth of big business, in the context of examining the antitrust laws. After adjournment, a case study of General Motors was undertaken. The Interior Department's power policies also came under scrutiny.

Federal handling of Salk polio vaccine was investigated in a gingerly fashion.

Personalities clashed when Edward J. Corsi's employment as a consultant on refugee problems was terminated. His charges against the State Department's operation of the refugee relief program led investigators to study bottle-necks.

The House Un-American Activities Committee and Senate Judiciary Internal Security Subcommittee continued their investigations of communism and subversion. Sen. McCarthy's Government Operations Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, under Democratic chairmanship, delved briefly into the field of security but devoted most of its energy to other matters. The federal employee security program was investigated in an attempt to refute Republican charges of Democratic softness on communism.

CQ's Annual Selection

16 KEY VOTES TESTED FIRST SESSION ISSUES

Congress covered a lot of ground in 1955. To place the session's activities in perspective, Congressional Quarterly chose 16 roll calls -- the year's Key Votes -- which shaped up as most significant.

Senate and House split on personal income taxes, but the Senate finally prevailed. The House approved a Democratic plan to cut taxes $20 for each taxpayer and dependent, rejecting a motion to kill the reduction. The Senate rejected the cut when it was offered as a floor amendment. Later, the House gave in.

President Eisenhower beat back a direct challenge on postal pay when the Senate sustained his veto of a bill to raise pay an average 8.59 percent. Mr. Eisenhower eventually accepted a compromise 8 percent raise.

Highway expansion was blocked for the year. The Senate rejected the Administration's plan to finance construction largely through special bonds, and passed an expansion bill which left financing indefinite. The House rejected the bond plan, but also turned down a "pay-as-you-go" bill.

UPPER COLORADO ACTION

The Senate voted to authorize a big power and water project in the Upper Colorado River Basin, but the House did not act on the bill.

Housing passed through a complicated maze. The President requested 35,000 units of public housing a year for two years. The Senate received a committee bill authorizing 135,000 units a year, and rejected an amendment to cut the program to the Administration's request. The House knocked out all public housing. The compromise authorized 45,000 units for one year.

The House voted to restore rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity for five basic farm crops. Flexible supports had gone into effect Jan. 1, 1955. Senate action was postponed.

A big lobby struggle wound up for the year with House passage of a bill to exempt producers and gatherers of natural gas from federal regulation. The Senate did not act.

STATEHOOD FAILS

Statehood legislation failed again. The House killed a bill that would have admitted Hawaii and Alaska to the Union simultaneously.

The Senate increased another appropriation -- for foreign aid -- but in this case to restore funds cut by the House in the face of Administration objections. The final compromise appropriated $2.7 billion, compared to the $3.2 billion requested.

Congress extended the reciprocal trade program, enacting a bill generally in line with the President's requests. The House rejected a motion to add "protectionist" provisions. The Senate rejected an amendment which would have deleted milder "protectionist" provisions acceptable to Mr. Eisenhower.

Senate Key Votes

Here, in the order in which they occurred, are the nine Senate roll calls selected by CQ as the Key Votes of 1955. The numbers correspond to those in the accompanying table. In all instances, "yea" votes are cited first.

1. Formosa Resolution -- In January, President Eisenhower asked Congress to pass a joint resolution authorizing him to use U.S. armed forces to protect Formosa, the Pescadores and "related positions and territories." The latter were presumed to include the islands of Quemoy and Matsu, located a few miles off the coast of mainland China. Before passing the resolution, the Senate Jan. 28 rejected, 13-74, an amendment to confine the President's authority to the protection of Formosa and the Pescadores. Party division: Democrats, 12-32; Republicans, 1-42.

2. Income Tax Cut -- An Administration bill extending for one year existing excise and corporate income taxes was amended by the House to include a $20 tax cut for individuals--an item opposed by the President. Faced with Senate opposition to the $20 cut, Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) offered a substitute which would have extended excise and corporate rates 27 months, while retaining the tax credit for individuals. This the Senate rejected March 15, 44-50. Party division: Democrats, 43-5; Republicans, 1-45. Later the Senate voted to eliminate the $20 credit.

3. Upper Colorado -- With Administration backing, the Senate April 20 passed, 58-23, a bill authorizing a $1.1 billion reclamation program in the Upper Colorado River Basin. Party division: Democrats, 31-15; Republicans, 27-8. However, the House failed to act on the measure.

4. Reciprocal Trade -- A bill to extend for three years the (reciprocal) Trade Agreements Act, passed by the House, was amended by the Senate Finance Committee, which added, among other items, the following provisions: To require immediate publication of Tariff Commission findings in escape-clause proceedings, to permit use of escape-clause if imports "contributed materially" to a threat of serious injury to a domestic producer, and to permit one segment of an industry to seek escape-clause protection. A move to strike these three provisions from the bill was rejected May 4 by the Senate, 21-67. Party division: Democrats, 21-21; Republicans, 0-46. The Senate thus retained provisions intended to make it easier for domestic industry to obtain relief from foreign competition.

5. Postal Pay Veto -- President Eisenhower May 19 vetoed a bill giving postal workers an average 8.59 percent pay increase, and urged a lower figure. The Senate May 24 voted, 54-39, to override the veto, but the roll call fell eight votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override. Party division: Democrats, 46-2;

Republicans, 8-37. Later Congress passed and the President signed a bill providing an 8 percent pay increase.

6. Highway Program -- The Senate Public Works Committee rejected the Administration's plan to finance a long-range highway program by bonds, and reported instead a Democratic-sponsored "pay-as-you-go" program to be financed by appropriations. Before passing the bill, the Senate May 25 rejected, 31-60, a move to substitute the Administration plan. Party division: Democrats, 1-47; Republicans, 30-13. Later, the House killed both plans.

7. Housing Program -- President Eisenhower asked Congress to authorize construction of 35,000 public housing units a year for two years, but the Senate Banking and Currency Committee reported a bill calling for construction of 135,000 units annually until the 810,000 total authorized in 1949 was reached. The Senate June 7 voted, 38-44, to reject an amendment substituting the Administration-backed limit of 35,000 units per year for two years. Party division: Democrats, 6-35; Republicans, 32-9.

8. Defense Appropriations -- In requesting $32 billion for the Defense Department, President Eisenhower incorporated plans to cut back the number of men in uniform in all services except the Air Force. Before passing the appropriation, the Senate June 20 agreed, 40-39, to amendments to add $46 million to provide for 22,000 more Marines than the President wanted. Party division: Democrats, 37-2; Republicans, 3-37. Later, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said the $46 million would be impounded pending "another look."

9. Foreign Aid -- The President originally requested $3.5 billion for foreign aid in fiscal 1956, later cut this to $3.2 billion. The House July 11 voted $2.6 billion. The Senate July 22 voted $3.2 billion after agreeing, 50-38, to a committee amendment to add $420 million to the amount allowed by the House for military assistance. Party division: Democrats, 21-23; Republicans, 29-15. Sum finally agreed to by both Houses was $2.7 billion.

House Key Votes

Here, in the order in which they occurred, are the seven House roll calls selected by CQ as the Key Votes of 1955. The numbers correspond to those in the accompanying table. In all instances, "yea" votes are cited first.

1. Reciprocal Trade -- A key roll call came on an unsuccessful attempt to limit the President's trade pact powers. A bill to extend the (reciprocal) Trade Agreements Act for three years retained the escape clause giving the U.S. Tariff Commission authority to recommend changes in agreements to relieve domestic industries injured by tariff concessions, but permitting the President to accept or reject such recommendations. Prior to final passage, the House Feb. 18 rejected, 199-206, a motion to send the bill back to committee with instructions to make Presidential compliance mandatory, except when national security is involved. Party division: Democrats, 80-140; Republicans, 119-66.

2. Income Tax Cut -- President Eisenhower asked Congress to extend for one year existing excise and corporation income taxes, but Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee tacked on a provision (opposed by the President) cutting individual income taxes by $20 for each taxpayer and dependent. The House Feb. 25 rejected, 205-210, a motion to send the bill back to committee with orders to delete the $20 cut. Party division: Democrats, 16-205; Republicans, 189-5. Later, the Senate rejected the cut, and the law as finally enacted made no change.

3. Farm Price Supports -- In 1954, Congress, at President Eisenhower's request, voted to switch from "fixed" to "flexible" price supports for basic farm crops. Previously, the government guaranteed, as a minimum price, 90 percent of parity. (At 100 percent of parity, prices received by farmers keep pace with prices they pay.) The "flexible" system involves a sliding-scale, ranging from 82.5 to 90 percent in 1955, and from 75 to 90 percent in 1956. In 1955, Democrats introduced a bill to restore "fixed" price supports at 90 percent of parity. The House May 5 passed the bill, 206-201. Party division: Democrats, 185-29; Republicans, 21-172. The Senate did not act on the bill.

4. Statehood -- President Eisenhower in January urged immediate statehood for Hawaii (traditionally Republican), eventual statehood for Alaska (traditionally Democratic). Democrats backed a bill granting statehood simultaneously to both territories. The House May 10 adopted, 218-170, a motion to send the bill back to committee -- in effect killing it. Party division: Democrats, 105-107; Republicans, 113-63.

5. Highway Program -- The Administration asked Congress for a long-range national highway program to be financed by 30-year bonds, but the House Public Works Committee reported a "pay-as-you-go" bill calling for $12.4 billion in new gasoline and other taxes to finance the program. After defeating a move to substitute the Administration bond plan, the House July 27 voted, 123-292, to reject the "pay-as-you-go" bill, effectively killing any highway program in 1955. Party division: Democrats, 94-128; Republicans, 29-164.

6. Natural Gas -- In the face of strong claims that it would lead to higher prices for consumers, the House July 28 passed, 209-203, a bill to amend the Natural Gas Act to exempt producers and gatherers of natural gas from federal regulation. Party division: Democrats, 86-136; Republicans, 123-67. The Senate failed to act on the bill. The House-passed bill was similar to one passed by Congress in 1950 but vetoed by President Truman.

7. Public Housing -- House Democrats drew up an omnibus housing bill embodying President Eisenhower's request for 35,000 public housing units per year for two years, but including other features opposed by the Administration. The House July 29 voted, 217-188, to substitute a stripped-down bill with no public housing provision, after GOP leaders argued this was necessary to win a satisfactory compromise with a Senate bill calling for 135,000 units per year. Party division: Democrats, 66-152; Republicans, 151-36. Final compromise bill provided for 45,000 public housing units for one year.

EISENHOWER BOXSCORE

President, "At Bat" Before 84th Congress 207 Times, Received Approval of 96 First Session Requests

President Eisenhower, who batted .646 on his 1954 legislative program, slipped to .463 in 1955.

Congressional Quarterly tabulated 207 Presidential requests to the Democratic-controlled 84th Congress, which adjourned its first session early Aug. 3. Included were 31 requests denied by the 83rd Congress and resubmitted to the 84th.

Of the 207, Congress approved 96, or 46.3 percent. In baseball terms, that's a .463 batting average for the session.

Congress rejected another 14 requests, or almost 7 percent of the total submitted. Partial progress in one or both chambers was recorded for 51 requests, while two suffered setbacks in one chamber but were passed over in the other. No action was taken on 44 requests.

In contrast, the Republican-led 83rd Congress in 1954 dealt as follows with Mr. Eisenhower's 232 legislative requests: Approved 150, or 64.6 percent; rejected 49, or 21 percent; and failed to approve 33, or 14 percent.

CQ'S STANDARDS

CQ's Boxscore is based solely on specific requests for legislative action -- or inaction -- submitted by the President, so does not include requests from Administration subordinates. When Congress modifies a Presidential proposal, the resulting compromise is weighed to determine whether, on balance, it strikes close enough to the mark to count as favorable action.

Not all Presidential requests were equally important. However, major proposals generally incorporated several specific points, all tabulated as separate requests. Thus the Boxscore carries an automatic, rather than arbitrary, weighting.

Mr. Eisenhower scored best on Military and Veterans' affairs. Congress granted 18 of 27 requests, or 67 percent; rejected four and failed to approve five.

The President's Foreign Policy requests were the most numerous. Of the 51 in this category, Congress approved 32, or 63 percent; rejected two, and failed to approve 17. Prominent among the last were 10 revisions asked in the Refugee Relief Act of 1953.

OTHER RESULTS

Congress approved 21 of 40 requests dealing with Taxes and Economic Policy, rejected three, and failed to approve 16.

Miscellaneous and Administrative affairs accounted for 41 requests, of which Congress approved 15, rejected three, and stalled on 23.

Of 36 requests in the field of Education and Welfare, Congress approved six, rejected one, and failed to approve 29.

Seven requests dealt with Labor, five with Agriculture. Congress granted one of the former, three of the latter; rejected one and none; and passed over five and two.

As usual, Congressional action in the closing weeks of the session boosted the President's overall batting average by a large margin. On June 29, CQ s Presidential Boxscore showed only 26 percent of 200 legislative requests entered at that time as having been approved.

'54 PROGRAM HEAVIER

The final Boxscore indicates that the Democratic-controlled 84th Congress gave the President less of what he wanted in 1955 than did the GOP-managed 83rd Congress, either in 1954 or 1953. In the earlier year, Congress approved 72.7 percent of Mr. Eisenhower's 44 recommendations, making the composite score for the two years of the 83rd 65.9 percent.

These figures, however, do not reflect the relative importance of requests accepted or rejected in any of the three years. Mr. Eisenhower proposed little in the way of major legislation in 1953, recommended a great deal in 1954 (when he outlined the main features of his Administration's program), and proposed somewhat less in 1955.

Major Presidential victories in 1955 appeared to include the three-year extension of the reciprocal trade program, strengthening of the military reserves, one-year extension of excise and corporate income tax rates without a cut in individual income taxes, and enactment of pay raises for Congressmen, federal judges, civil service and postal employees, and members of the armed forces.

REJECTED REQUESTS

Among Mr. Eisenhower's requests which were rejected or passed over were the following important items: A 10-year, bond-financed highway program; a $1.1 billion Upper Colorado River reclamation program; statehood for Hawaii; revisions in the Refugee Relief Act; a health reinsurance program, and a plan to stimulate school construction.

All of these subjects were expected to be in line for renewed debate and action when the second session of the 84th Congress reconvened in January, 1956 -- 10 months before the Presidential election.

Comparison of Republican and Democratic legislative achievements began soon after adjournment. President Eisenhower expressed satisfaction with 84th Congress action on foreign policy, but contended the Republican 83rd did better on domestic affairs. Democrats maintained that the domestic record was good, too -- and would have been better if GOP Congressmen had cooperated more.

Fact Sheet

BOXSCORE TRACES 207 PRESIDENTIAL REQUESTS

Congressional Quarterly analyzed every 1955 message and public statement by President Eisenhower while the 84th Congress was in session. He made 207 specific legislative requests. Congress granted 96 of them, for a first-session batting average of .463. CQ's Boxscore pinpoints the fate of the President's program.

The President's program and its success and failure at the hands of a Democratic-led Congress set the stage for debate in the 1956 election campaigns. President Harry S. Truman made capital of the "do nothing" Republican-led 80th Congress when he barnstormed to victory in the 1948 Presidential election.

CQ's analysis of the Eisenhower legislative program at the end of the 1955 session showed:

- 96 Presidential requests approved by Congress.
- 14 finally rejected.
- 16 passed by one chamber and pending in the other.
- 35 received action by House or Senate committees.
- 2 set back, but pending in one chamber.
- 44 left at the post but still alive for possible action in the second session.

In the final weeks of the 1955 session, Congress speeded work on pending legislation, and the President's Boxscore reflected increased activity. As early as May 8, Congress had approved only 13.7 percent of the President's program.

Legislation pending when the first session adjourned was still alive, could be brought up for consideration after the 84th Congress began its second session in January, 1956.

EISENHOWER, TRUMAN BOXSCORES

In 1954, when the second session of the GOP-led 83rd Congress adjourned, the President had achieved a .646 batting average on his 232 legislative requests of that year. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 37ff.) The figure, although eight points below his 1953 average, was far higher than Harry S. Truman chalked up in any year from 1947-52. Truman never reached the 50 percent mark in that period.

Because the President's legislative programs were broken down in greater detail in 1954 and 1955, Boxscores of earlier years are only roughly comparable. Boxscores on Presidential legislative programs, 1947-54:

	Proposals Submitted	Approved By Congress	% Score
Eisenhower:
1954	232	150	64.7%
1953	44	32	72.7
Two-Year Total	276	182	65.9
Truman:
1952	86	30	34.9
1951	57	23	40.4
1950	86	38	44.2
1949	68	30	44.1
1948	81	37	45.7
1947	86	41	47.7
Six-Year Total	464	199	42.9

NOTE: Scores through the years are only roughly comparable. Before 1954, Presidential requests were grouped into relatively broad categories.

Key

President Eisenhower's legislative requests were made in speeches, statements, letters, and messages to Congress. A symbol in parentheses following each request indicates its source. (Treaty requests are followed by the date the request was sent to the Senate.)

Legislative Requests

Mr. Eisenhower's legislative requests were broken down into CQ's regular subject categories. Excluding Appropriations, they are:

Agriculture
Education and Welfare
Foreign Policy
Labor
Military and Veterans
Miscellaneous and Administrative Taxes and Economic Policy.

These major categories were divided into sub-categories.

The President's legislative requests:

Agriculture

1. Authorize payments to state extension services to conduct pilot programs or render aid to low-income farmers. (A, V)
2. Raise loan authorization of the Farmers' Home Administration and permit it to make loans to low-income and part-time farmers unable to obtain credit elsewhere. (A, V)
3. Keep 1954 flexible supports farm law in effect. (A)
4. Adjust drought aid to local conditions and prescribe more equitable state-federal sharing of costs. (A)
5. Extend the Mexican Farm Labor program. (G)

Education and Welfare

HEALTH

*1. Authorize a "reasonable capital fund" to reinsure private health insurance plans. (J)
2. Establish a mortgage loan insurance program for private construction of health facilities, limiting insurance to less than loan's face value and limiting an insured mortgage to less than property's full value. (J)
3. Authorize federal-state matching funds for medical care of public assistance recipients in the existing four categories (aged, blind, disabled and children). (J)
4. Set federal share at 50 percent, up to a maximum derived by multiplying $6 a month by the number of adults on the public assistance rolls, and $3 a month by the number of minors on the rolls. (G)
5. Provide separate funds for extension of federal-state programs serving mothers, crippled children, and children requiring special health services. (J)
6. Authorize funds for special projects to develop better medical care techniques for such persons. (J)
*7. Unify Public Health Service grants-in-aid in one program. (J)
8. Establish separate funds for the extension and improvement of existing state health services. (J)
9. Authorize funds for special projects to develop improved techniques. (J)
10. Strengthen grant-in-aid program for the improvement of mental health. (J)
11. Authorize new program of grants for projects to improve the administration and care in mental institutions. (J)
12. Authorize a five-year program of federal grants to state vocational education agencies for training practical nurses. (J)
13. Authorize the Public Health Service to provide graduate and training programs in public health, including mental health. (J)
14. Set up PHS training programs in specialities for graduate nurses. (J)
15. Improve survivor benefits of the PHS Commissioned Corps. (J)
16. Improve the status of the PHS Commissioned Corps. (J)
17. Remove termination date of Water Pollution Control Act. (J)
18. Strengthen the Water Pollution Control Act. (J)
19. Provide increased appropriations for PHS research into air pollution. (J)
20. Amend the pure food and drug laws. (A)
21. Raise the U.S. contribution to the UN-World Health Organization. (J)
22. Authorize grants to the states for distribution of polio vaccine to needy children. (U)

EDUCATION

1. Authorize three-year, $750 million program for federal purchase of school bonds issued by communities unable to sell such bonds "at a reasonable interest rate." (K)
2. Authorize federal support, matched by the states, of a lease-purchase plan in which state school building agencies would build schools and rent them to school districts until the principal and interest were repaid and the districts took title to the buildings. (K)
3. Authorize appropriations to build up an initial reserve fund in each state building agency equal to one year's payment on principal and interest on bonds issued. (K)
4. Authorize three-year, $200 million program of grants-in-aid to impoverished school districts, limited to amounts sufficient to enable such districts to issue bonds or participate in the lease-purchase program. (K)
5. Authorize federal payment of half the administrative cost of state programs designed to work out long-term solutions of school financial problems. (K)

Ground Rules for CQ's Eisenhower Boxscore

Only specific requests for legislative action submitted by the President himself were tabulated for the Boxscore. Requests submitted by his subordinates were not tabulated unless Mr. Eisenhower, also, specifically asked Congressional action. For example, the President asked Congress to enact a program to aid low-income farmers and transmitted for Congress' information a detailed program formulated by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. Since Mr. Eisenhower did not specifically endorse Benson's program, the detailed provisions were not tabulated for the Boxscore.

Because requests for ratification of treaties carry over from one Congress to the next (unlike other legislative proposals, which must start from the beginning in a new Congress), CQ listed all unratified treaties sent to the Senate by Mr. Eisenhower from 1953 on.

Almost all appropriation requests were excluded because they are a yearly occurrence and provide the funds necessary to carry out the regular functions of the government. But CQ included a few appropriation requests submitted in special messages to Congress (rather than in the Budget or in supplemental appropriation messages), and requests for funds for programs that were not permanently authorized (e.g., international relief programs). All authorization requests were included.

Excluded from the list of legislative requests were:

Measures that the President endorsed but did not request.

Proposals advocated by officials of the executive branch but not specifically by the President.

Suggestions that Congress consider or study particular topics, without Presidential requests for specific action.

Nominations.

Although the number "207" is a fair tabulation of Presidential proposals, it is necessarily somewhat arbitrary. Legislative requests can be grouped, and therefore counted, in many ways. Congress does not always vote "yes" or "no" on a Presidential proposal. In classifying compromises as favorable or unfavorable, CQ weighed the good and bad features -- from Mr. Eisenhower's point of view -- to determine where the balance lay. For example, the President asked for postal pay raises averaging 6.5 percent. The House committee approved 7.6 percent, and CQ counted this as favorable action because the President indicated in a letter that he could accept this figure. But the House voted more than 8 percent and the Senate 10 percent. These actions were charted as unfavorable, because they exceeded Mr. Eisenhower's outside limit.

Not all the President's proposals were equally important. Attempts to weight them would be arbitrary. A rough, automatic weighting results from the fact that major requests usually have several points. Some programs may be overweighted; detailed dissection of requests was necessary to permit an accurate check on action. CQ weighed compromises to determine if the result was closer to approval or to rejection of the request.

For detailed ground rules and definitions, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 42-43.

EISENHOWER SUPPORT

President's Backing in Congress Dropped in 1955, Democratic Average Climbed, Still Trailed GOP

Congress supported President Eisenhower less enthusiastically during 1955 than during 1953-54. But Members of both parties still voted in agreement with the President's position more often than they opposed him on roll calls providing clear-cut tests of support for his program and leadership.

Republicans backed Mr. Eisenhower more consistently than Democrats, but their Eisenhower-Support scores dipped below the 1953-54 level. Democrats, meanwhile, raised their scores, narrowing the gap between the two parties. On foreign policy roll calls, Democrats outscored Republicans. Votes on domestic affairs brought out Democratic opposition.

The President won 75 percent of the 1955 roll-call tests, compared to 83 percent in 1953-54. He was most successful in 1955 votes on foreign policy, a field in which he won 95 percent of the tests.

How President Fared

Outcome of the 93 Eisenhower-issue roll calls of 1955, and the 198 of the 83rd Congress, 1953-54:

	1955	1953-54
President's victories
Senate	44	103
House	26	61
President's defeats
Senate	8	23
House	15	11
Victories in which Democrats supplied winning margin
Senate	39	87
House	26	34
Victories in which GOP votes were adequate
Senate	5	16
House	0	27
Eisenhower-issue votes on which % of Democratic support was greater
Senate	14	22
House	25	14
Eisenhower-issue votes on which % of GOP support was greater
Senate	30	98
House	15	55
Eisenhower-issue votes on which more than 50% of voting Democrats supported President
Senate	37	61
House	28	44
Eisenhower-issue votes on which more than 50% of voting Republicans supported President
Senate	49	109

The President's victories and defeats in foreign and domestic categories, 1955:

	Foreign	Domestic Victories
Senate	29	15

20-29	1	0	7	6
10-19	0	0	0	1
0- 9	0	1	0	0

No one scored 100 percent.

ABSENCES

Since a Member's Support score is a percentage based on the total number of Eisenhower-issue roll calls, a failure to vote lowers his scores as much as a vote against the President's position. For example, if there were 10 Eisenhower-issue roll calls, a Member who voted "with" the President four times and did not vote six times would have a Support score of 40 percent and an Opposition score of 0. A Member who voted "with" Mr. Eisenhower four times and "against" him six times also would have a 40 percent Support score, but his Opposition score would be 60 percent. (Since only "yea" and "nay" votes are counted, pairs and announced stands lower Support scores as much as failures to vote and votes "against" the President.)

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including absence on official business and illness. Among those absent during 1955 because of their own illness or illness or deaths in their families: Sens. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) and Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas), and Reps. John B. Bennett (R Mich.), Iris F. Blitch (D Ga.), Oliver P. Bolton (R Ohio), Gordon Canfield (R N.J.), Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.), Herman P. Eberharter (D Pa.), Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.), Porter Hardy, Jr. (D Va.), John W. Heselton (R Mass.), Benjamin F. James (R Pa.), Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.), Victor A. Knox (R Mich.), Otto Krueger (R N.D.), J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio), Walter M. Mumma (R Pa.), Edmund P. Radwan (R N.Y.), Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.), R. Walter Riehlman (R N.Y.), and Fred Schwengel (R Iowa), Vera Buchanan (D Pa.).

ROLL-CALL VOTES ON EISENHOWER ISSUES

Listed below are the 93 roll-call votes of 1955 which tested Congressional support for President Eisenhower's program and leadership and formed the basis for Eisenhower-Support scores. The test votes are grouped according to outcome. Within each group, the roll calls are listed chronologically by Congressional Quarterly roll-call (RC) number. Page references are to the CQ Almanac vote charts, which present votes of each Member and party breakdowns.

For list of 1954 Eisenhower-issue roll calls, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 54ff.

Extend and enlarge federal housing aid, including authorization for construction of 35,000 public housing units a year for two years and continuing certain restrictive provisions. Amendment to eliminate all public housing authorizations and certain restrictive provisions. Agreed to, 217-188, July 29. P. 164.

GROUND RULES

• Eisenhower Issues -- CQ checked all roll-call votes. The record showed that 52 of the 87 Senate roll calls and 41 of the 76 House votes were clear-cut tests of President Eisenhower's program and leadership. In the 83rd Congress, 126 Senate and 72 House roll calls were Eisenhower-issue votes. In each case, it was clear from his public statements whether he would have voted "yea" or "nay" if he had been Congressman Eisenhower.

• Scores -- Support scores for 1955 are based on the 52 Senate and 41 House Eisenhower-issue roll calls. A Member's score is the percentage of Eisenhower-issue roll calls on which he voted in agreement with the President's position. Pairs and other announced stands are not credited.

Of the 52 Senate roll calls, 30 concerned foreign policy; of the 41 House roll calls, 12 concerned foreign policy. By pulling foreign policy roll calls out of the total and analyzing them separately, CQ attempted to determine which major division of the President's program -- domestic or foreign -- won more support.

Republican Analysis

Chairman Styles Bridges (R N.H.) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee Aug. 13 released his own study of Eisenhower Support in the Senate. He calculated a 94 percent score for Republicans, 70 percent for Democrats.

Bridges based his study on 87 Senate roll calls, compared to 52 in CQ's analysis. He included roll calls on a number of issues which were excluded by CQ because there was no evidence that President Eisenhower personally had taken a clear-cut public stand. Bridges omitted one roll call included by CQ.

The Senate ratified several treaties en bloc. Since only one roll call was taken, CQ counted the vote only once. Bridges counted a separate roll call for each treaty. He also counted votes on a series of treaties transmitted by Harry S. Truman.

Bridges calculated that a majority of Republicans who voted supported the President on 82 of the 87 Senate roll calls. Since 82 is 94 percent of 87, he credited the GOP with a score of 94 percent. On the same basis, he found that a majority of voting Senate Democrats backed the President on 61 of the 87 votes -- or 70 percent. Bridges calculated no scores for individuals.

CQ found that a majority of voting Republicans supported the President on 49 of 52 Senate roll calls, and on 27 of 41 in the House. A majority of voting Democrats supported the President on 37 of the 52 Senate roll calls, and on 28 of 41 in the House.

The fact that a Member has a 50-percent Support score does not necessarily mean that he opposed the President on the remaining 50 percent of Eisenhower-issue roll calls. His Opposition score shows how often he voted against the President's position. Support and Opposition scores total 100 percent only if the Member voted on all Eisenhower-issue roll calls.

• What Analysis Shows -- A Member's Support and Opposition scores are only one indication of his stand as "pro" or "anti" Eisenhower. Many other factors enter into a final judgment. He may support or oppose the President on non-roll-call votes, which cannot be scored. And he may exert great influence in committee, caucus, and cloak room.

Another factor is the absence of editorial weighting. All roll-call votes -- major and minor -- on which the President's position is known are counted. And several roll calls may be taken on a single issue. CQ decided that any attempt to eliminate or weight roll calls would be subjective and arbitrary. Roll calls are taken on very few really insignificant issues. And elimination of preliminary votes on a bill would be misleading. Often, the crux of an issue is decided in a vote on an amendment, while the vote for passage is virtually automatic. For example, some Congressmen voted for amendments to restrict the reciprocal trade program, but then voted to pass the bill.

Most of these factors balance out, so that Support and Opposition scores are valid indicators. While a difference of a few points between the scores of two Members may be inconsequential, big gaps usually will help classify them as "pro" or "anti" Eisenhower.

CQ implies no judgment on whether or not a high Eisenhower-Support score is "good." Some Congressmen are proud of supporting the President, and some are proud of their opposition, depending on whether or not they approve of his policies.

• Democratic "Rescues" -- Since the Democrats were in the majority in both Senate and House, the President needed at least some of their votes to win on any roll call -- if all Members were present and voting. In this sense, he owed his victories to Democratic support; they supplied the winning margin. This held true even if 90 percent of the Democrats voted against him; the other 10 percent made his victory possible.

On some roll calls, absences placed the Republicans temporarily in the majority.

Senators' Eisenhower-Support Scores

1. Support Score, 1955. Percentage of 52 Eisenhower–issue roll calls – both foreign and domestic – on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President Eisenhower's position.

2. Support Score, Foreign Policy, 1955. Percentage of 30 Eisenhower–issue roll calls in the field of foreign policy on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President's position. (These 30 roll calls were included in the total of 52.)

3. Support Score, Domestic Affairs, 1955. Percentage of 22 Eisenhower–issue roll calls on domestic matters on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President's position. (These 22 roll calls were included in the total of 52.)

4. Support Score, 83rd Congress. Percentage of 126 Eisenhower–issue roll calls – both foreign and domestic – of 1953–54 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with President's position.

5. Opposition Score, 1955. Percentage of 52 Eisenhower–issue roll calls – both foreign and domestic – of 1955 on which Senator voted "yea" or nay" in disagreement with President's position.

Headnotes:

* Not eligible for all 126 Eisenhower–issue roll calls of 83rd Congress; percentage score is based on 47 votes for which Senator was eligible.

‡ Member of House in 83rd Congress; 83rd Congress score is based on House voting record. Not eligible for all 72 House Eisenhower–issue roll calls of 83rd Congress; percentage score is based on the 34 votes for which he was eligible.

PARTY UNITY

Republicans, Democrats Disagreed Less in 1955;

Bolters Cost Both Parties Some Victories

Republicans and Democrats got into fewer jaw-to-jaw quarrels than usual during the 1955 session of Congress. They clashed on only about one-third of the roll-call votes, according to Congressional Quarterly's analysis of Party Unity.

Democrats won more often than the Republicans on roll calls which split Congress along party lines.

Defections cost both parties victories.

Partisanship Declines

Fewer roll calls split the parties -- Republicans vs. Democrats -- in 1955 than in 1954.

Party-Unity roll calls of 1955:

	Total Roll Calls	Party-Unity Roll Calls	% of Party-Unity Roll Calls
Both chambers	163	57	35%
Senate	87	26	30
House	76	31	41

Party-Unity roll calls of 1954:

	Total Roll Calls	Party-Unity Roll Calls	% of Party-Unity Roll Calls
Both chambers	257	114	44%
Senate	181	85	47
House	76	29	38

Party-Unity Scoreboard

On Party-Unity roll calls, the majority of voting Democrats opposes the majority of voting Republicans. Therefore, one party wins and the other loses. Results of the 26 Senate and 31 House Party-Unity roll calls of 1955, and the 85 Senate and 29 House Party-Unity roll calls of 1954:

	Senate		House
	1955	1954	1955	1954
GOP Won	14	59	10	19
GOP Lost	12	26	21	10
Democrats Won	12	26	21	10
Democrats Lost	14	59	10	19
GOP Voted Unanimously	2	10	1	1
Dems Voted Unanimously	4	10	1	1

Definitions

Party-Unity Roll Calls -- Roll-call votes which split the parties, the majority of voting Democrats opposing the majority of voting Republicans. Roll calls on which either party divides evenly are excluded.

Party-Unity Scores -- Percentage of Party-Unity roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score -- counting as missed "times at bat."

Opposition-to-Party Scores -- Percentage of Party-Unity roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with the majority of his party. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score. A Member's Party-Unity and Opposition-to-Party scores add to 100 percent only if he voted on all Party-Unity roll calls.

OPPOSITION TO PARTY
Both chambers	19%	13%	19%	17%
Senate	16	10	16	19

FOREIGN POLICY

Republican and Democratic scores on Party-Unity roll calls in the field of foreign policy, 1955:

	Republican	Democrat
PARTY UNITY
Both chambers	52%	58%
Senate	64	62
House	50	57
OPPOSITION TO PARTY
Both chambers	31	30
Senate	25	25
House	31	31

Four of the 26 Senate votes, and six of the 31 House roll calls dealt with foreign policy.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

Republican and Democratic scores on Party-Unity roll calls in the field of domestic affairs, 1955:

	Republican	Democrat
PARTY UNITY
Both chambers	74%	75%
Senate	76	74
House	74	75
OPPOSITION TO PARTY
Both chambers	16	16
Senate	14	14
House	16	16

Twenty-two of the 26 Senate votes, and 25 of the 31 House roll calls dealt with domestic affairs.

Who Draws Party Line?

On some roll calls, the parties take official stands after caucusing. Or the floor leaders may provide guidance. The Administration's position may help line up its party in Congress.

Even if the party leaders take an official stand, the party majority may not support them. For example, if Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) announces that President Eisenhower favors a bill, the majority of Republicans nevertheless may vote "nay." For purposes of CQ's Party-Unity analysis, actual votes draw party lines. In the illustration cited, the Republican line would be "nay;" any Republican voting "yea" would be counted as opposing his party.

On some roll calls, no official party position is stated and each Member is on his own. In these cases -- just as when an official party stand is known -- actual votes draw party lines for CQ's analysis.

Absences

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including illness and conflicting official duties. Among those who missed one or more 1955 Party-Unity roll calls -- thereby lowering their scores -- because of their own illness or illness or death in their families: Sens. Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) and Reps. John J. Bell (D Texas), John B. Bennett (R Mich.), Iris F. Blitch (D Ga.), Oliver P. Bolton (R Ohio), Vera Buchanan (D Pa.), Gordon Canfield (R N.J.), Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.), Charles B. Deane (D N.C.), Herman P. Eberharter (D Pa.), Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.), Porter Hardy, Jr. (D Va.), John W. Heselton (R Mass.), Joe Holt (R Calif.), Benjamin F. James (R Pa.), Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.), Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.), Victor A. Knox (R Mich.), Otto Krueger (R N.D.), J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio), Walter M. Mumma (R Pa.), Edmund P. Radwan (R N.Y.), Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.), R. Walter Riehlman (R N.Y.), T. James Tumulty (D N.J.).

Toll of Defections

Bolters cost both parties victories on Party-Unity roll calls of 1955. If the bolters had followed the majority of their party, the party would have won some roll-call tests it lost.

CQ confined this analysis of defections to roll calls on which defectors constituted a small minority -- fewer than 25 percent of those voting.

Defections cost the Democrats four victories in the Senate, one in the House. The toll of defections for Republicans: Four losses in the Senate, eight in the House.

Illustration -- The Senate March 15 rejected, 44-50, an amendment to cut individual income taxes. (For voting, see chart, p. 119.) Republicans opposed the amendment, 1-45. They won. Democrats voted for the amendment, 43-5. They lost. The five Democrats who bucked their party's majority by voting "nay" constituted less than 25 percent of the total Democratic vote. If they had swung over to vote with the other 43 Democrats, instead of bolting, the tax-cut amendment would have been agreed to, 49-45. The Democrats would have won.

SENATE DEMOCRATIC LOSSES

Other Senate roll-call tests lost by the Democrats because a small minority bolted:

Rubber Plants -- The Senate rejected, 39-48, resolutions which would have vetoed the sale of three government synthetic rubber plants. Democrats voted for the resolutions -- against the sale -- 36-8. (For voting, see chart, p. 120.)

WOCs -- The Senate agreed, 46-45, to an amendment to restrict WOCs -- federal personnel serving without compensation -- to advisory functions in policy matters. Democrats opposed the amendment, 2-44. They favored a more stringent amendment. (For voting see chart, p. 131.)

Hall -- The Senate confirmed, 43-41, the nomination of John A. Hall as director of locomotive inspection for the Interstate Commerce Commission. Democrats opposed confirmation, 8-35. (For voting, see chart, p. 134.)

SENATE REPUBLICAN LOSSES

Senate roll-call tests lost by the Republicans because a small minority bolted:

Postal Pay -- The Senate tabled (killed), 52-41, an amendment which would have substituted an Administration-backed postal pay raise formula for the larger increase favored by the Democrats. Republicans opposed the motion to table -- supporting the substitute amendment -- 9-38. (For voting, see chart, p. 121.)

Housing -- The Senate rejected, 38-44, an amendment which would have reduced the public housing authorization. Republicans voted for the amendment, 32-9. (For voting, see chart, p. 128.)

Marine Funds -- The Senate agreed, 40-39, to amendments to restore Administration cuts in Marine Corps appropriations. Republicans opposed the amendments, 3-37. (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

Government in Business -- The Senate rejected, 33-48, an amendment which would have deleted a ban on transfer of certain Defense Department work to private industry. Republicans voted for the amendment -- against the ban -- 32-9. (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC LOSS

The House roll-call test lost by the Democrats because of defections:

Securities Probe -- The House rejected, 178-214, a resolution to authorize investigation of trading in federal government securities. Democrats voted for the investigation, 177-29. (For voting, see chart, p. 152.)

HOUSE REPUBLICAN LOSSES

House roll-call tests lost by the Republicans because of defections:

Tax Cut -- The House rejected, 205-210, a motion to return a tax bill to committee with orders to delete provisions which would have cut individual income taxes. Republicans voted for the motion -- against the tax cut -- 189-5. (For voting, see chart, p. 140.)

Veterans Education -- The House rejected, 154-227, a limitation on the fee paid educational institutions for reports on veterans. Republicans voted for the amendment, 137-40. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.)

Postal Pay -- The House agreed, 224-189, to an amendment to give postal workers a bigger raise than its committee recommended. Republicans voted against the amendment, 22-172. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.)

Peanuts -- The House rejected, 193-215, an amendment which would have eliminated peanuts from the list of basic farm commodities for price-support purposes. Republicans voted for the amendment, 178-14. (For voting, see chart, p. 146.)

Farm Price Supports -- The House rejected, 199-212, a motion to recommit (kill) a bill to substitute rigid for flexible price supports for basic commodities. Republicans voted for recommittal -- against rigid supports -- 175-19. (For voting, see chart, p. 146.)

Farm Price Supports -- The House passed the rigid supports bill, 206-201. Republicans voted against the bill, 21-172. (For voting, see chart, p. 146.)

New Formula

Party-Unity scores in this story were calculated under a revised formula which:

- Weighs only votes; the old formula included announced stands as well as votes.
- Bases a Member's score on all Party-Unity roll calls for which he was eligible; the old formula was based only on those Party-Unity roll calls on which a Member voted or announced his stand, so failures to vote did not lower his score.

Comparison of 1954 Party-Unity scores under the new and old formulas:

	REPUBLICAN		DEMOCRAT
	New	Old	New	Old
Both chambers	76%	86%	66%	79%
Senate	80	90	64	76
House	74	84	66	81

The new scores for 1954 include three Party-Unity roll calls taken during the Senate session which condemned the conduct of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.). The old scores covered only the regular 1954 session.

The Party-Voting computation used in 1954 as a complement to Party Unity has been dropped.

Government in Business -- The House rejected 184-202, an amendment which would have struck out a provision requiring committee approval before transfer of certain Defense Department work to private industry. Republicans voted for the amendment -- against the restriction -- 147-34. (For voting, see chart, p. 148.)

Housing -- The House agreed, 187-168, to a compromise conference committee version of the housing bill. Republicans voted against the bill, 34-131. (For voting, see chart, p. 164.)

On six additional Party-Unity roll calls, less than 25 percent of the losing party bolted, but the defections did not affect the outcome.

LEADING BOLTERS

A handful of Congressmen bolted consistently on the defection roll calls.

Virginia's Democratic Sens. Harry Flood Byrd and A. Willis Robertson bolted on all four of the Senate roll calls lost by the Democrats because of defections by a small minority. Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) voted with the Democratic majority on WOCs, but with the Republicans on the other three roll calls.

No House Republican bolted on all eight of the roll calls which the GOP lost through defections. Usher L. Burdick (N.D.) voted against the Republican majority on seven of the eight, opposing the Democrats only on the income tax cut. Four Republicans bolted on five of the eight roll calls: John B. Bennett (Mich.), Alvin E. O'Konski (Wis.), Edith Nourse Rogers (Mass.), and Charles A. Wolverton (N.J.).

How Representatives Supported . . .

1. Party Unity, 1955. Percentage of 31 Party-Unity roll calls — both foreign and domestic — on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. (A Party-Unity roll call is one which split the parties, the majority of voting Democrats opposing the majority of voting Republicans.)

2. Party Unity, Domestic Affairs, 1955. Percentage of 25 Party-Unity roll calls in the field of domestic affairs on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. (These 25 roll calls were included in the total of 31.)

Low Party-Unity scores may result from absence due to illness. Check list of Representatives who missed roll calls because of illness, p. 76, before drawing conclusions.

Senate Party-Unity Scores

1. Party Unity, 1955. Percentage of 26 Party-Unity roll calls — both foreign and domestic — on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. (A Party-Unity roll call is one which split the parties, the majority of voting Democrats opposing the majority of voting Republicans.)

2. Party Unity, Domestic Affairs, 1955. Percentage of 22 Party-Unity roll calls in the field of domestic affairs on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. (These 22 roll calls were included in the total of 26.)

3. Party Unity, 1954. Percentage of 85 Party-Unity roll calls — both foreign and domestic — of 1954 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the majority of his party. (Computed under new formula. See p. p. 77.)

4. Opposition to Party, 1955. Percentage of 26 Party-Unity roll calls — both foreign and domestic — of 1955 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with the majority of his party.

Headnotes

* Members of House during regular session of 1954, and of Senate during session that condemned conduct of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.); 1954 scores are based on House voting records plus three Party-Unity roll calls in McCarthy session of Senate.

‡ Not eligible for all 85 Party-Unity roll calls of 1954; score is based on the 58 votes for which he was eligible.

Low Party-Unity scores may result from absence due to illness. Check list of Senators who missed roll calls because of illness, p. 76, before drawing conclusions.

BIPARTISAN SUPPORT

Did bipartisanship characterize the 1955 session of Congress? Yes, by contrast with 1954. Republicans clashed with Democrats on fewer roll-call votes.

What's the outlook for 1956? Bipartisanship may be strained by election year politics, perhaps by a decline in President Eisenhower's unifying influence.

Which issues split the parties in 1955? Domestic issues more than foreign policy; major roll calls more than routine votes.

Who were the dissenters? Midwestern Republicans, southern Democrats bucked the majority most frequently on bipartisan votes.

Bipartisanship Increases

Did bipartisanship characterize the 1955 session of Congress? Yes, by contrast with 1954:

	Senate	House	Both Chambers
1955
Total roll calls	87	76	163
Bipartisan roll calls	61	45	106
Percent bipartisan	70%	59%	65%
1954
Total roll calls	181	76	257
Bipartisan roll calls	96	47	143
Percent bipartisan	53%	62%	56%

FOREIGN VS. DOMESTIC

Which issues split the parties in 1955? Republicans clashed with Democrats more frequently on domestic issues than on foreign policy:

	Senate	House	Both Chambers
FOREIGN POLICY
Total roll calls	42	15	57
Bipartisan roll calls	38	9	47
Percent bipartisan	90%	60%	82%
DOMESTIC AFFAIRS
Total roll calls	45	61	106
Bipartisan roll calls	23	36	59
Percent bipartisan	51%	59%	56%

New Formula

Bipartisan-Support scores in this story were calculated under a revised formula which:

- Weighs only votes; the old formula included announced stands as well as votes.
- Bases a Member's score on all bipartisan roll calls for which he was eligible; the old formula was based only on those bipartisan roll calls on which a Member voted or announced his stand, so failures to vote did not lower his score.

Definitions

Bipartisan Roll Calls -- Roll-call votes on which the majority of voting Democrats agrees with the majority of voting Republicans. Roll calls on which either party divides evenly are included.

Bipartisan-Support Scores -- Percentage of bipartisan roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. Failures to vote, even if a Member announces his stand, lower his score.

Bipartisan-Opposition Scores -- Percentage of bipartisan roll calls on which a Member votes "yea" or "nay" in opposition to the bipartisan majority. Failures to vote, even if Member announces his stand, lower his score. A Member's Bipartisan Support and Opposition scores add to 100 percent only if he voted on all bipartisan roll calls.

Party Scores

Which party did more to support bipartisanship? Democrats by a narrow margin in 1955, Republicans by a narrow margin in 1954:

	Republican		Democrat
	1955	1954	1955	1954
BIPARTISAN SUPPORT
Both chambers	71%	77%	77%	68%
Senate	73	76	72	65
House	70	78	79	69
BIPARTISAN OPPOSITION
Both chambers	16	9	11	14
Senate	11	11	13	17
House	18	8	10	12

FOREIGN POLICY

Republican and Democratic scores on bipartisan roll calls in the field of foreign policy, 1955:

	Republican	Democrat
BIPARTISAN SUPPORT
Both chambers	71%	77%
Senate	74	73
House	68	80
BIPARTISAN OPPOSITION
Both chambers	15	11
Senate	9	12
House	20	10

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

Republican and Democratic scores on bipartisan roll calls in the field of domestic affairs, 1955:

	Republican	Democrat
BIPARTISAN SUPPORT
Both chambers	70%	78%
Senate	72	71
House	70	79

BIPARTISAN OPPOSITION
Both chambers	17%	11%
Senate	13	14
House	17	10

REGIONAL SCORES

Which regions backed the bipartisan majority most consistently in 1955? In the Senate, eastern Republicans and midwestern Democrats; in the House, westerners of both parties:

	East	West	South	Midwest
REPUBLICANS
Both chambers	73%	76%	72%	66%
Senate	80	73	--	67
House	71	77	72	66
DEMOCRATS
Both chambers	75	80	77	80
Senate	65	74	73	78
House	76	84	79	80

Which regions opposed the bipartisan majority most consistently? Midwestern Republicans, southern Democrats:

	East	West	South	Midwest
REPUBLICANS
Both chambers	12%	12%	18%	21%
Senate	7	12	--	13
House	14	12	18	23
DEMOCRATS
Both chambers	9	7	13	9
Senate	11	8	15	12
House	9	6	13	8

(For states comprising each region, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 52.)

Individual Scores

Who backed the bipartisan majority most consistently? Highest scorers in Bipartisan Support, 1955:

SENATE

Republican		Democrat
Payne (Maine)	95%	Holland (Fla.)	97%
Bennett (Utah)	93	Hayden (Ariz.)	95
Case (N.J.)	92	Barkley (Ky.)	93
Millikin (Colo.)	92	Monroney (Okla.)	93
		Pastore (R.I.)	92

HOUSE

Republican		Democrat
Baldwin (Calif.)	96%	Aspinall (Colo.)	98%
Dague (Pa.)	96	Lankford (Md.)	98
Fenton (Pa.)	93	McCormack (Mass.)	98
McDonough (Calif.)	93	Trimble (Ark.)	98
Rogers (Mass.)	93

Who were the leading dissenters? Highest scorers in Bipartisan Opposition, 1955:

SENATE

Republican		Democrat
Langer (N.D.)	43%	Byrd (Va.)	33%
Williams (Del.)	36	Johnston (S.C.)	31
Jenner (Ind.)	31	Russell (Ga.)	28
Welker (Idaho)	30	Thurmond (S.C.)	28
Curtis (Neb.)	28
Dworshak (Idaho)	28

HOUSE

Republican		Democrat
Hoffman (Mich.)	56%	Gentry (Texas)	42%
Smith (Kan.)	51	Jones (N.C.)	36
Gross (Iowa)	47	Alexander (N.C.)	29
Mason (Ill.)	47	Bailey (W.Va.)	29
Johansen (Mich.)	44	Dies (Texas)	29
Taber (N.Y.)	44	Dorn (S.C.)	29
		Flynt (Ga.)	29
		Tuck (Va.)	29

Dispersion

In what range did the bulk of the scores lie? Distribution of Bipartisan-Support scores among 10 brackets of the percentage scale, 1955:

	SENATE		HOUSE
%	Republican	Democrat	Republican	Democrat
90-99	7	5	13	39
80-89	11	13	49	89
70-79	11	13	50	55
60-69	10	9	47	35
50-59	3	6	25	8
40-49	5	2	9	3
30-39	0	0	6	0
20-29	0	0	2	1
10-19	0	1	2	0
0-9	0	0	0	1

No one scored 100 percent.

Absences

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including illness and conflicting official duties. Among those who missed one or more 1955 bipartisan roll calls -- thereby lowering their scores -- because of their own illness or illness or death in their families: Sens. Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and John F. Kennedy (D Mass.); Reps. John J. Bell (D Texas), John B. Bennett (R Mich.), Iris F. Blitch (D Ga.), Oliver P. Bolton (R Ohio), Vera Buchanan (D Pa.), Gordon Canfield (R N.J.), Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.), Charles B. Deane (D N.C.), Herman P. Eberharter (D Pa.), Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.), Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.), Porter Hardy, Jr. (D Va.), John W. Heselton (R Mass.), Joe Holt (R Calif.), Benjamin F. James (R Pa.), Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.), Victor A. Knox (R Mich.), Otto Krueger (R N.D.), J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio), Walter M. Mumma (R Pa.), Edmund P. Radwan (R N.Y.), Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.), R. Walter Riehlman (R N.Y.), Fred Schwengel (R Iowa), T. James Tumulty (D N.J.).

Senate Bipartisan-Support Scores

1. Bipartisan Support, 1955. Percentage of 61 bipartisan roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (A bipartisan roll call is one on which the majority of voting Democrats agrees with the majority of voting Republicans.)

2. Bipartisan Support, Foreign Policy, 1955. Percentage of 38 bipartisan roll calls in the field of foreign policy on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (These 38 roll calls were included in the total of 61.)

3. Bipartisan Support, Domestic Affairs, 1955. Percentage of 23 bipartisan roll calls in the field of domestic affairs on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (These 23 roll calls were included in the total of 61.)

4. Bipartisan Support, 1954. Percentage of 96 bipartisan roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- of 1954 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (Computed under new formula. See. p. 81.)

5. Bipartisan Opposition, 1955. Percentage of 61 bipartisan roll calls -- both foreign and domestic -- of 1955 on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with the bipartisan majority.

How Representatives Backed, Opposed...

1. Bipartisan Support, 1955. Percentage of 45 bipartisan roll calls — both foreign and domestic — on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (A bipartisan roll call is one on which the majority of voting Democrats agrees with the majority of voting Republicans.)

2. Bipartisan Support, Foreign Policy, 1955. Percentage of nine bipartisan roll calls in the field of foreign policy on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (These nine roll calls were included in the total of 45.)

(Low Bipartisan-Support scores may result from absence due to illness. Check list of Representatives who missed roll calls because of illness, p. 82, before drawing conclusions.)

. . . Majority on Bipartisan Roll-Call Votes

3. Bipartisan Support, Domestic Affairs, 1955. Percentage of 36 bipartisan roll calls in the field of domestic affairs on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (These 36 roll calls were included in the total of 45.)

4. Bipartisan Support, 1954. Percentage of 47 bipartisan roll calls — both foreign and domestic — of 1954 on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in agreement with the bipartisan majority. (Computed under new formula. See p. 81.)

5. Bipartisan Opposition, 1955. Percentage of 45 bipartisan roll calls — both foreign and domestic — of 1955 on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay" in disagreement with the bipartisan majority.

(Low Bipartisan-Support scores may result from absence due to illness. Check list of Representatives who missed roll calls because of illness, p. 82, before drawing conclusions.)

VOTING RECORDS

Lawmakers Voted, Went on Record on Most 1955 Tests, But Absenteeism May Have Affected Key Decisions

Congress turned out in force for 1955 roll-call votes. On the average, Members voted on nearly nine of every 10 roll calls. Democrats had slightly higher Voting-Participation scores than Republicans.

Even when they didn't vote, most Congressmen went On The Record by announcing their stands.

But absenteeism still took its toll. Absentees probably would have reversed the outcomes of several roll calls.

WEEK-END COMMUTERS

Congressional absenteeism tends to be greater on Fridays, Saturdays, and Mondays than in midweek. Congressmen often take long week ends to visit their constituencies. Voting-Participation scores for 1955 reflected this tendency but to a more limited degree than might be expected. Apparently, Congressmen tried to stay in Washington when week-end roll calls were scheduled. About one-third of the session's roll-call votes were taken on Fridays, Saturdays, and Mondays.

Voting Participation scores for 1955 on the 53 House and Senate roll-call votes taken on week ends, and on the 110 midweek roll calls:

Definitions

Voting Participation -- Percentage of roll-call votes on which Congressman votes "yea" or "nay." Failures to vote "yea" or "nay" lower scores -- even if the Congressman votes "present," enters a pair, announces his stand in the Congressional Record, or answers the CQ Poll. Only votes of "yea" or "nay" directly affect the outcome of a roll call. Voting Participation is the closest approach to an attendance record, but it is only an approximation. A Congressman may be present and nevertheless decline to vote "yea" or "nay" -- usually because he has entered a pair with an absent Member.

On The Record -- Percentage of roll-call votes on which Congressman makes his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll. Scores are lowered by votes of "present" and by general pairs -- as well as by complete silence on the issue. Votes of "present" and general pairs are not expressions of opinion. On The Record does not measure the effectiveness of a Congressman in determining the outcome of roll calls, but it does show how frequently he tells his constituents and the general public where he stands on specific issues. Even if he must be absent, a Congressman can go On The Record.

Pairs are used to cancel out the effect of absences. A Congressman who expects to be absent for a roll call pairs off with another Congressman, both of them agreeing not to vote. A live pair concerns one or several specific issues. A Congressman who would vote "yea" pairs with a Congressman who would vote "nay." Thus, both announce their stands. A general pair is a more arbitrary matching of absent Congressmen, not involving announcement of their stands. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 734.)

The CQ Poll gives absent Congressmen the opportunity to announce their stands on roll calls. On important roll calls, CQ sends out ballots asking Congressmen how they would have voted if they had been present.

Absences

Failures to vote usually may be traced to valid causes, including illness and conflicting official duties. Among those who missed one or more 1955 roll calls because of their own illness or illness or death in their families: Sens. Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and John F. Kennedy (D Mass.); Reps. John J. Bell (D Texas), John B. Bennett (R Mich.), Iris F. Blitch (D Ga.), Oliver P. Bolton (R Ohio), Vera Buchanan (D Pa.), Gordon Canfield (R N.J.), Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.), Charles B. Deane (D N.C.), Herman P. Eberharter (D Pa.), Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.), Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.), Porter Hardy, Jr. (D Va.), John W. Heselton (R Mass.), Joe Holt (R Calif.), Benjamin F. James (R Pa.), Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.), Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.), Victor A. Knox (R Mich.), Otto Krueger (R N.D.),

Toll of Absenteeism

Absenteeism sometimes affects the outcome of roll-call votes.

The nation's voters gave Democrats control of the 1955 Senate by a margin of two votes, 49-47, and of the House by 28 votes, 231-203. (The House had 232 Democrats, but the Speaker customarily does not vote except to create or break a tie.)

On some roll calls, Republican absenteeism gave the Democrats a bigger margin than they were entitled to. For example the Senate voted May 25 on a major amendment to the highway bill. Forty-eight Democrats and 43 Republicans voted. GOP absences gave the Democrats a margin of five votes instead of the two to which they were entitled. The Democrats enjoyed a "bonus" of three votes.

On some roll calls, Democratic absenteeism reduced the Democratic margin below two votes or wiped out the margin. For example, the Senate voted March 24 on an amendment to a cotton-acreage bill. Forty-four Democrats and 46 Republicans voted. Two more Republicans than Democrats voted, instead of the converse, so the Republicans enjoyed a "bonus" of four votes.

BONUS VOTES

Bonus votes had the greatest potential significance on the 26 Senate and 31 House roll calls which split the parties -- the majority of Democrats disagreeing with the majority of Republicans. On the 26 Senate roll calls, Democratic absences gave the Republicans a total of 48 bonus votes, and Republican absences gave the Democrats a total of eight bonus votes. Thus, the GOP enjoyed a net bonus of 40 votes -- an average of 1.5 votes per roll call -- to which it was not entitled under the lineup elected by the voters. On the 26 roll calls, the Democrats averaged only one-half vote more than the Republicans, instead of maintaining a margin of two votes.

On the 31 House roll calls, Democratic absences gave the Republicans a total of 53 bonus votes, and Republican absences gave the Democrats a total of 138 bonus votes. The Democrats enjoyed a net bonus of 85 votes -- an average of 2.8 votes per roll call. On the 31 roll calls, the Democrats averaged 30.8 more votes than the Republicans, instead of maintaining a margin of only 28 votes.

"BONUS" ROLL CALLS

On four roll calls of 1955, the outcome probably would have been reversed if absenteeism had not given one party or the other bonus votes:

June 28, the Senate rejected an amendment which would have appropriated $21 million for development of an atomic-powered merchant vessel, as requested by President Eisenhower. (For voting, see chart p. 130.) Forty-three Democrats and 40 Republicans voted; since three more Democrats than Republicans voted, the Democrats enjoyed a bonus of one vote. Republicans voted for the amendment, 40-0, the Democrats against, 1-42. The amendment was rejected, 41-42. If one more Republican had voted, the Democratic margin would have been reduced to two votes. Assuming that the additional Republican would have voted for the amendment, like the other Republicans, the total vote would have been 42-42. Presumably, Vice President Richard M. Nixon would have voted "yea," breaking the tie. The Senate would have agreed to the amendment instead of rejecting it.

Aug. 1, the Senate recommitted the conference report on a bill (S 2391) to extend the Defense Production Act, ordering deletion of provisions which would have required "WOCs" to file financial statements. WOCs are persons who work for the federal government without compensation. (For voting, see chart, p. 135.) Thirty-three Democrats and 37 Republicans voted, so the Republicans enjoyed a bonus of six votes. Democrats voted against the recommittal motion, 0-33, but it was agreed to, 36-34. If six absent Democrats had voted against recommittal, the motion would have been rejected, 36-40 -- reversing the outcome. (The bill as finally enacted contained provisions requiring a revised form of financial statement by WOCs.)

Feb. 17, the House rejected, 191-193, a proposal which would have permitted floor amendments to the reciprocal trade extension bill (HR 1). The bill had been brought to the floor under a rule barring amendments which "protectionists" planned to offer. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.) Votes were cast by 216 Democrats and 168 Republicans. Instead of a margin of 28 votes, the Democrats had a margin of 48 -- or a bonus of 20 votes. Republicans voted, 109-59, to permit floor amendments to HR 1. If 20 absent Republicans had voted the same way, the proposal to permit floor amendments would have been agreed to, 211-193 -- reversing the outcome.

Feb. 17, the House adopted, 193-192, a closed rule (H Res 142), barring floor amendments to HR 1. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.) Votes were cast by 216 Democrats and 169 Republicans, so the Democrats enjoyed a bonus of 19 votes. Republicans voted against the rule, 65-104. If 19 absent Republicans had voted against the rule, it would have been rejected, 193-211 -- reversing the outcome.

TWO TIES POSSIBLE

The bonus factor probably would have resulted in ties on one Senate and one House roll call of 1955. The outcomes would not have been reversed.

Although the Democrats controlled both houses of Congress during 1955, Democratic absences placed the Republicans temporarily in the majority on 27 of the 87 Senate roll calls. In the House, where the margin of Democratic control was wider, the Republicans were never in the majority -- although they sometimes wiped out part of the Democratic margin.

Theoretically, absentees could have reversed the outcomes of 28 of the 163 roll calls of 1955. For example, the Senate June 20 voted, 40-39, to increase appropriations for the Marine Corps in order to forestall a cut in manpower recommended by the President. (For voting, see chart, p. 129.) If the 17 absentees had voted solidly against the fund increase, it would have been rejected, 40-56 -- reversing the outcome.

It is unrealistic to assume that all absentees would have voted with the losers on each roll call. The point, however, is that absentees could have reversed the outcomes of 10 Senate and 18 House roll calls. At least a few of the closest roll calls probably would have been reversed if the absentees had voted -- some "yea" and some "nay."

When 'Yeas' and 'Nays' Were Called . . .

1. Voting Participation, 1955. Percentage of 76 roll calls on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay."

2. On The Record, 1955. Percentage of 76 roll calls on which Representative made his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll.

3. Voting Participation, 83rd Congress. Percentage of 147 roll calls, 1953-54, on which Representative voted "yea" or "nay."

4. On The Record, 83rd Congress. Percentage of 147 roll calls, 1953-54, on which Representative made his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll.

Senate Voting-Participation Scores

1. Voting Participation, 1955. Percentage of 87 roll calls on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay."

2. On The Record, 1955. Percentage of 87 roll calls on which Senator made his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll.

3. Voting Participation, 83rd Congress. Percentage of 260 roll calls, 1953-54, on which Senator voted "yea" or "nay." Covers regular sessions only; omits 10 roll calls taken during session which condemned conduct of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.).

4. On The Record, 83rd Congress. Percentage of 260 roll calls, 1953-54, on which Senator made his position known by voting "yea" or "nay," entering a live pair, announcing his stand, or answering the CQ Poll.

How a Bill Is Passed

Note: Parliamentary terms used below are defined in the Glossary, which follows.

Introduced — Any House Member may introduce any one of several types of bills and resolutions by handing it to the clerk of the House, or placing it in a box called the hopper. A Senator first gains recognition of the presiding officer to announce the introduction of a bill. Then his bill is "read" twice, though in practice only the title usually is given.

As the next step in either the House or Senate, the bill is numbered, labeled with the sponsor's name, and sent to the Government Printing Office so that copies can be made for subsequent study and action. One bill sometimes carries several Senators' names; this practice does not extend to the House where each bill carries the name of one sponsor only. However, other Members may file identical measures. Bills written in the executive branch and proposed as Administration measures usually are introduced by the chairmen of the Congressional committees that have jurisdiction over the subjects involved.

House bills are prefixed with "HR," followed by a number; Senate bills are prefixed "S"

Joint resolutions, which also can become law, are designated "H J Res" or "S J Res," depending upon their house of origin. Joint resolutions generally are used for temporary legislation and are the customary form for proposed amendments to the Constitution. They go through the same legislative process as do regular bills, though a Constitutional amendment must be approved by a two-thirds vote in each house and is not signed by the President.

Concurrent resolutions and simple House and Senate resolutions do not become law and are adopted, as a rule, under an abbreviated procedure, as compared to that governing bills and joint resolutions.

Referred — Following introduction, a bill is referred by the House parliamentarian on the Speaker's order, or by the Senate President, to the appropriate committee. Sponsors may indicate their preferences for referral, although custom and chamber rule generally govern this. An exception is the referral of private bills, sent to whatever group is designated by their sponsors. Bills are technically considered "read for the first time" when referred to House committees.

Committee Action — When a bill reaches a committee it is placed upon that group's calendar. At that time it comes under the sharpest Congressional focus. Its chances for passage are quickly determined — and most bills fall by the legislative roadside. For example, only 781 out of several thousand public bills introduced in the 83rd Congress finally became public law. The others died beneath the press of more urgent measures pending, either in committee or on the floor of Congress, or were rejected at some stage in the legislative process.

The first committee action taken on a bill usually is a request for comment on it by interested agencies of the government. The Committee chairman may assign the bill to a subcommittee for study and hearings, or it may be considered by the full committee. Hearings may be public, closed (executive session), or both. A subcommittee, after considering a bill, reports to the full committee its recommendations for action and any proposed amendments.

The full committee then votes on its recommendation to the House or Senate. This is called reporting the bill. Occasionally a committee may report a bill unfavorably; most of the time a report calls for favorable action on the legislation (since the committee can often effectively "kill" legislation by simply failing to take any action).

Frequently, the committee proposes amendments to the bill. If they are substantial and the legislation is complicated, the committee may order a "clean bill" introduced, which will embody the proposed amendments. The original bill then is put aside and the "clean bill," with a new number, is reported to the floor.

The chamber must approve, alter, or reject the committee amendments before the bill itself can be put to a vote.

Committee Report — Whenever a committee reports a bill, either favorably or unfavorably, it explains its reasons in a written statement, called a report, which accompanies the bill. Often committee members opposing a measure issue a dissenting minority report. Sometimes a committee refuses to act on a bill, equivalent to killing it. Where a committee majority agrees to bottle up a bill, the measure can be withdrawn from the group's purview only by a discharge petition requiring signatures of 218 House members on House bills, or by passage of a special resolution in the Senate. Discharge attempts rarely succeed.

Floor Action

After a bill is reported back to the house where it originated, it is placed on the calendar. There are several legislative calendars in the House, only one in the Senate. Non-controversial bills often are passed on the "call of the calendar." In the House such bills may be placed on the Consent Calendar; if there is no objection voiced to a bill on that calendar when it is called, the measure is passed without debate. When the Senate calendar is called, each Senator is limited to five minutes' debate on each bill.

Debate — A bill is brought to debate by varying procedures. If a routine measure, it may await the call of the calendar. If it is urgent or important, it can be taken up in the Senate by unanimous consent, or by a majority vote. The Policy Committee of the majority party in the Senate schedules the bills that it wants taken up for debate.

In the House, precedence is granted if a special rule is obtained from the Rules Committee. Such rules often are debated and voted upon in the same fashion as regular bills. They are important because they specify how long the bill may be debated, and whether it may be amended from the floor. If floor amendment is banned, the bill is considered under a so-called "gag rule" which permits only committee members to alter its language, subject to chamber acceptance. This is the usual practice on tax bills.

When a bill is debated under an open rule, amendments may be offered from the floor. Committee amendments are always taken up first, but may be changed, as may all amendments up to the second degree, i. e., a changed amendment cannot be further altered. Substitute motions, however, are permissable.

Duration of debate in the House depends on whether the bill is before the Committee of the Whole or under discussion by the House proper. In the former, the amount of time agreed on for general debate is equally divided between proponents and opponents. At the end of this general discussion, the bill is read "for the second time," section by section, for amendment. Debate on each amendment is limited to five minutes. Persons debating bills considered in the House proper are allowed one hour apiece. Senate debate is usually unlimited. It can be halted only by unanimous consent, or by "cloture" which requires a two-thirds vote.

Vote — Voting on bills may occur repeatedly before they are finally approved or rejected. The House votes both on the rule for the bill, and various amendments to it. Voting on amendments often is a more illuminating test of a bill's support than the final tally. While many votes on subsections of bills are bitterly and closely contested, many of the losers often join the winners on passage of the bill itself "for the record." Often Congressmen approve final passage of bills after vigorously supporting amendments which would have scuttled them if adopted.

The House and Senate vote both by untabulated voice votes, and a recorded roll call of their names, to which they answer Yea or Nay. The House also uses a standing vote, called a division, and a teller vote, when members file up the center aisle past counters. The Senate also has a division, or standing, vote. The House totals on standing and teller votes are announced, though not each Member's vote. The numerical count is not given on a standing vote in the Senate.

After amendments to a bill have been voted upon, a vote may be taken on a motion to recommit the bill to committee. If carried, this vote removes the bill from the chamber's calendar. If unsuccessful, the bill then is "read for the third time." An actual reading usually is dispensed with, although an opponent of a bill can delay this move by objecting, and asking for a full reading of an engrossed (certified in final form) copy of the bill. After the "third reading," the vote on final passage is taken.

The final action vote may be followed by a motion to reconsider, and this motion itself may be followed by a move to lay the motion on the table. Usually, those voting for the bill's passage vote for the tabling motion, thus safeguarding the final passage action. With that, the bill has been formally passed by the chamber. While a motion to reconsider a Senate vote is pending on a bill, the measure cannot be sent to the House. Once a bill has been passed by either chamber, it becomes, officially, an "act," though it continues generally to be referred to as a bill.

Transmitted — After a bill is passed it is sent to the opposite chamber. This body may then take one of several steps. It may pass the bill as is — accepting the other chamber's amendments. It may send the bill to committee for scrutiny or alteration, or reject the entire bill, advising the opposite house of its actions. Or it may simply ignore the bill submitted while it completes work on its own version of the legislation. Frequently, one chamber may approve a version of a bill that is greatly at variance with the version already passed by the other house, and then substitute its amendments for the language of the other, retaining only the latter's bill designation.

Often the opposite chamber makes only minor changes. If these are readily agreed to by the other house, the bill then is routed to the White House for signing. However, if the opposite chamber basically alters the bill submitted to it, the measure usually is "sent to conference."

Final Actions

Conference — A conference undertakes to harmonize any House bill and Senate bill which relate to the same subject, but which clash in their respective legislative provisions. The conference is staffed by interested senior members appointed by the presiding officers of the two houses, from the committees which managed the bills. This charges the members of one house who are most familiar with the bill with the duty of maintaining their chamber's position in the face of amending actions by the conferees (or "managers") of the other house. The number of conferees appointed from each chamber usually is three or five, but may range higher on complex and lengthy legislation.

Theoretically, conferees are not allowed to write new legislation in reconciling the two bills before them, but this curo sometimes is by-passed. Many bills have been put into a palatable compromise form only after new language was provided by the conferees.

Frequently the ironing out of difficulties in Senate and House bills takes days or even weeks. Conferences on knotty appropriations bills sometimes are particularly drawn out.

As a conference proceeds, conferees reconcile their differences, but generally they grant concessions only insofar as they remain sure that the chamber they represent will accept the compromises. Once in a while uncertainty over this, or the positive refusal of a chamber to back down on a disputed amendment, results in an impasse, and the bills die in conference, even though each was approved by its sponsoring chamber.

Conferees sometimes go back to their respective chambers for further instructions, when they report certain portions in disagreement. Then the chamber concerned can either "recede and concur" in the amendment of the other house, or "insist on its amendment."

Conference Report — When the conferees have reached agreement, they prepare a conference report, explaining why they did — or did not — retain some amendments, and cut out others. The reports are the justifications, to their respective houses, of the actions of the conferees, and the explanations, in document form, must be submitted to each house. Conference reports, with an explanation by the House conferees, are always printed in the House. In the Senate an explanation is often made orally by one of the conferees.

The conference report must be approved by each house. Consequently, approval of the report is approval of the compromise bill worked out. In the order of voting on conference reports, the chamber which asked for a conference yields the other chamber the opportunity to vote first.

Signed — After a bill has been passed by both chambers, either in its original form or its compromise form after a conference, it is enrolled on parchment paper and sent around the Capitol for various official signatures. The Secretary of the Senate and others certify that the printing is correct. The Speaker of the House then signs it, followed by the Vice President in his capacity as presiding officer of the Senate.

The parchment document is then sent to the White House, where it becomes law when signed by the President. If he does not sign it within ten days (excluding Sundays) and Congress is in session, the bill becomes law without his signature.

Vetoes — However, should Congress adjourn before the 10 days expire, and the President has failed to sign the measure, it does not become law. This procedure is called the pocket veto. Occasionally a President vetoes a bill by refusing to sign it and returning it to the Congress with a message stating his reasons. The message is sent to the chamber which originated the bill. If no action is taken there on the message, the bill affected dies. Frequently, however, Congress attempts to override the President's veto. This requires a two-thirds vote to make the bill law, "the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding." Debate can precede this vote, with motions permitted to lay the message on the table, postpone action on it, or refer it to committee. If the President's veto is overridden by a two-thirds vote in both houses, the bill becomes law. Otherwise it is dead, and can be revived only by reintroduction and routing through the process all bills undergo.

When bills are passed finally and signed, or passed over a veto, they are given law numbers, in numerical order as they become law. There are two series of numbers, one for public and one for private laws, starting at the number "1" for each two-year term of Congress. They are then identified by law number and by Congress—i.e., Public Law 250, 83rd Congress, Private Law 21, 83rd Congress.

GLOSSARY OF CONGRESSIONAL TERMS

Act -- The term for legislation which has passed both houses of Congress and has been signed by the President or passed over his veto, thus becoming law.

Also, used technically for a bill that has been passed by one house and engrossed.

Adjournment sine die -- Adjournment without definitely fixing a day for reconvening; literally "adjournment without day." Marks the official end of a Congressional session.

Adjournment to a Day Certain -- Adjournment under a motion or resolution which fixes the next time of meeting. Neither house can adjourn for more than three days without the concurrence of the other. A session of Congress is not ended by adjournment to a day certain.

Amendment -- Proposal of a Congressman to alter the language or stipulations in a bill or act. It is usually printed, debated, and voted upon in the same manner as a bill.

Appeal -- A Congressman's challenge of a ruling or decision made by the presiding officer of the Senate or House. The Congressman appeals to Members of the Chamber to override the decision. If carried by a majority vote, the appeal nullifies the chair's ruling.

Appropriation Bill -- Grants the actual monies approved by authorization bills, but not necessarily to the total permissible under the authorization bill. Normally an appropriation bill originates in the House, and is not acted on until its authorization measure is enacted. In addition to general appropriation bills, there are two specialized types. (See Deficiency and Supplemental.)

Authorization Bill -- Authorizes a program, specifies its general aim and conduct, and puts a ceiling on monies that can be used to finance it. Usually enacted before appropriation bill is passed. (See Contract Authorization.)

Bills -- Most legislative proposals before Congress are in the form of bills, and are designated as HR (House of Representatives) or S (Senate) according to the house in which they originate and by a number assigned in the order in which they were introduced, from the beginning of each two-year Congressional term. "Public bills" deal with general questions, and become Public Laws if approved by Congress and signed by the President. "Private bills" deal with individual matters such as claims against the government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc., and become Private Laws if approved and signed.

The introduction of a bill, and its referral to an appropriate committee for action follows the process given in "How a Bill Is Passed." (See also Concurrent Resolution, Joint Resolution, Resolution, in this Glossary.)

Bills Introduced -- In the Senate, any number of Senators may join in introducing a single bill. In the House, no more than one Member's name may appear on a bill. The result is that in the House many duplicate bills are introduced, only one of which is passed. Thus, a Member may have his name on a bill introduced but not on an identical bill passed. In case of identical bills introduced, the bill selected for passage is usually that sponsored by the chairman of the committee having jurisdiction, or the senior Member of the group of sponsors.

Many bills in reality are committee bills and are introduced under the name of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee as a formality. All appropriation bills fall into this category, as do many other bills, particularly those dealing with complicated, technical subjects. A committee frequently holds hearings on a number of related bills, and may agree on one of them or on an entirely new bill. (See Clean Bill.)

Bills Referred -- When introduced, a bill is referred to the committee which has jurisdiction over the subject with which the bill is concerned. The appropriate reference for bills is spelled out in the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. Bills are referred by the Speaker in the House and the Presiding Officer in the Senate. Appeals may be made from their decisions.

Budget -- The document sent to Congress by the President in January of each year estimating government revenue and expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year and recommending appropriations in detail. The President's Budget Message forms the basis for Congressional hearings and legislation on the year's appropriations. (See also Legislative Budget.)

Calendar -- An agenda or list of pending business before committees or either chamber. The House uses five legislative calendars. (See Consent, Discharge, House, Private and Union Calendar.)

In the Senate, all legislative matters reported from committee go on a single calendar. They are listed there in order, but may be called up irregularly by the Majority Leader either by a motion to do so, or by obtaining the unanimous consent of the Senate. Frequently the Minority Leader is consulted to assure unanimous consent. Only cloture can limit debate on bills thus called up. (See Call of the Calendar.)

The Senate also uses one non-legislative calendar, for treaties, etc. (See Executive Calendar.)

Calendar Wednesday -- In the House on Wednesdays, committees may be called in the order in which they appear in Rule X of the House Manual, for the purpose of bringing up any of their bills from the House or the Union Calendars, except bills which are privileged. General debate is limited to two hours. Bills called up from the Union Calendar are considered in Committee of the Whole. Calendar Wednesday is not observed during the last two weeks of a session, and may be dispensed with at other times -- by a two-thirds vote. It usually is dispensed with.

Call of the Calendar -- Senate bills which are not brought up for debate by a motion or a unanimous consent agreement are brought before the Senate for action when the calendar listing them in order is "called." Bills considered in this fashion are usually non-controversial and debate is limited to five minutes for each Senator on a bill or on amendments to it.

Chamber -- Meeting place for the total membership of either the House or the Senate, as distinguished from the respective committee rooms.

Clean Bill -- Frequently after a committee has finished a major revision of a bill, one of the committee members, usually the chairman, will assemble the changes plus what is left of the original bill into a new measure and introduce it as a "clean bill". The new measure, which carries a new number, is then sent to the floor for consideration. This often is a timesaver, as committee-recommended changes do not have to be considered one at a time by the chamber.

Cloture -- The process by which debate can be limited in the Senate, other than by unanimous consent. A motion for cloture can apply to any measure before the Senate except a proposal to change the chamber's rules of procedure. It requires 16 Senators' signatures for introduction, and 64 votes for passage -- 2/3 of the Senate membership. The motion is voted upon by a yea and nay roll call one hour after the Senate meets on the second day following introduction of the motion. If voted, cloture limits each Senator to one hour of debate.

Committee -- A subdivision of the House or Senate which prepares legislation for action by the parent chamber, or makes investigations as directed by the parent chamber. There are several types of committees. (See Standing, and Select or Special.) Most standing committees are divided into subcommittees, which study legislation, hold hearings, and report their recommendations to the full committee. Only the full committee can report legislation for action by the House or Senate.

Committee of the Whole -- The working title of what is formally "The Committee of the Whole House (of Representatives) on the State of the Union." Unlike other committees, it has no fixed membership. It is comprised of any 100 or more House members who participate -- on the floor of the chamber -- in debating or altering legislation before the body. Such measures, however, must first have passed through the regular committees and be on the calendar.

Technically, the Committee of the Whole considers only bills directly or indirectly appropriating money, authorizing appropriations, or involving taxes or charges on the public. Actually, the Committee of the Whole often considers other types of legislation. Because the Committee of the Whole need number only 100 Congressmen, a quorum is more readily attained, and business is expedited. None of the group's votes can be the time-consuming roll calls which require yeas and nays for the record.

When the full House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole, it supplants the Speaker with a "chairman." The measure is debated or amended, with non-roll-call votes as needed. When the Committee completes its action on the measure, it dissolves itself by "rising." The Speaker returns, and the full House hears the erstwhile chairman of the committee report that group's recommendations. The full House then acts upon them.

At this time Members may demand a roll-call vote on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

Concurrent Resolution -- A concurrent resolution, designated H Con Res or S Con Res, must be passed by both houses but does not require the signature of the President and does not have the force of law. Concurrent resolutions generally are used to make or amend rules applicable to both houses or to express the sentiment of the two houses. A concurrent resolution, for example, is used to fix the time for adjournment of a Congress. It might also be used to convey the congratulations of Congress to another country on the anniversary of its independence.

Conference -- A meeting between the representatives of the House and Senate to reconcile differences between the two houses over provisions of a bill. Members of the conference committee are appointed by the Speaker and the President of the Senate and are called "managers" for their respective chambers. A majority of the managers for each house must reach agreement on the provisions of the bill (often a compromise between the versions of the two chambers) before it can be sent up for floor action in the form of a "conference report." There it cannot be amended, and if not approved by both chambers, the bill goes back to conference. Elaborate rules govern the conduct of the conferences. All bills which are passed by House and Senate in slightly different form need not be sent to conference; either chamber may "concur" in the other's amendments.

Congressional Record -- The daily, printed account of proceedings in both House and Senate chambers, with debate, statements, and the like reported verbatim. Committee activities are not covered, excepting their reports to the parent body. Highlights of legislative and committee action are embodied in a Digest section of the Record, and Congressmen are entitled to have their extraneous remarks printed in its Appendix. They may edit and revise remarks made on the floor, and frequently do, so that quotations reported by the press are not always found in the Record.

Consent Calendar -- Members of the House may place on this calendar any bill on the Union or House calendar which is considered to be non-controversial. Bills on the consent calendar are normally called on the first and third Mondays of each month. On the first occasion when a bill is called in this manner, consideration may be blocked by the objection of any Member. On the second time, if there are three objections, the bill is stricken from the consent calendar; if less than three Members object, the bill is given immediate consideration.

A bill on the consent calendar may be postponed in another way. A Member may ask that the measure be passed over "without prejudice." In that case, no objection is recorded against the bill, and its status on the Consent calendar remains unchanged.

A bill stricken from the Consent calendar remains on the Union or House calendar.

Contract Authorizations -- Found in both authorization and appropriation bills, these authorizations are stop-gap provisions which permit the federal government to let contracts or obligate itself for future payments from funds not yet appropriated. The assumption is that funds will be available for payment when contracted debts come due.

Correcting the Record -- Rules prohibit Members from changing their votes after the result has been announced. But frequently, hours, days, or months after a vote has been taken, a Member announces that he was "incorrectly recorded" and requests -- and almost always receives -- unanimous consent to have the vote corrected in the permanent edition of the Congressional Record. This occurs more frequently in the House than in the Senate. Errors in the text of the Record may be corrected in the same manner.

Custody of the Papers -- To reconcile differences on a bill between the House and Senate, a conference may be arranged. The chamber in "custody of the papers" -- the engrossed bill, engrossed amendments, messages of transmittal -- is the only body empowered to request the conference. That body then has the advantage of acting last on the conference report when it is submitted.

Deficiency Appropriation -- An appropriation to cover the difference between an agency's regular appropriation and the amount deemed necessary for it to operate for the full fiscal year. Regular appropriations normally are passed in one fiscal year for the ensuing fiscal year. Deficiency appropriations are for use in the same fiscal year in which they are passed. (See Supplemental Appropriation.)

Dilatory Motion -- A motion, usually made upon a technical point, for the purpose of killing time and preventing action on a bill. The rules outlaw dilatory motions, but enforcement is largely within the discretion of the presiding officer.

Discharge a Committee -- Relieve a committee from jurisdiction over a measure before it. This is rarely a successful procedure, attempted more often in the House than in the Senate.

In the House, if a committee does not report a bill within 30 days after the bill was referred to it, any Member may file a discharge motion. This motion, treated as a petition, needs the signatures of 218 members. After the required signatures have been obtained, there is a delay of seven days. Then, on the second and fourth Monday of each month, except during the last six days of a session, any Member who has signed the petition may be recognized to move that the committee be discharged. Debate on the motion to discharge is limited to 20 minutes, and, if the motion is carried, consideration of the bill becomes a matter of high privilege.

If a resolution to consider a bill (see Rule) is held up in the Rules Committee for more than seven legislative days, any Member may enter a motion to discharge the Committee. The motion is handled like any other discharge petition in the House.

Occasionally, to expedite non-controversial legislative business, a committee is discharged upon unanimous consent of the House, and a petition is not required. (For Senate procedure, see Discharge Resolution.)

Discharge Calendar -- The House calendar to which motions to discharge committees are referred when they have the necessary 218 signatures and are awaiting action.

Discharge Petition -- In the House, a motion to discharge a committee from considering a bill. The motion, or petition, requires signatures of 218 House members. (See Discharge a Committee.)

Discharge Resolution -- In the Senate, a special motion any Senator may introduce to relieve a committee from consideration of a bill before it. The resolution can be called up on motion for approval or disapproval, in the same manner as other matters of Senate business. (For House procedure, see Discharge a Committee.)

Division Vote -- Same as Standing Vote. (See below.)

Enacting Clause -- Key phrase in bills saying, "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives . . ." A successful motion to strike it from legislation kills the measure.

Engrossed Bill -- The final copy of a bill as passed by one chamber, with the text as amended by floor action and certified to by the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate.

Enrolled Bill -- The final copy of a bill which has been passed in identical form by both chambers. It is certified to by an officer of the house of origin (House Clerk or Senate Secretary) and then sent on for signatures of the House Speaker, the Senate President, and the U.S. President. An enrolled bill is printed on parchment.

Executive Calendar -- This is an additional, non-legislative calendar, in the Senate, on which Presidential documents such as treaties and nominations are listed.

Executive Document -- A document, usually a treaty, sent to the Senate by the President for consideration or ratification. These are identified for each session of Congress as Executive A, 84th Congress, 1st Session; Executive B, etc. They are referred to committee in the same manner as other measures. Unlike legislative documents, however, treaties do not die at the end of a Congress, but remain "live" proposals until acted on by the Senate or withdrawn by the President.

Executive Resolution -- A Senate resolution dealing with executive business rather than legislative, i.e., with the handling of a treaty or nomination. A motion to discharge a committee from consideration of a nomination would be made in an Executive Resolution, instead of an ordinary Senate Resolution.

Executive Session -- Meeting of a Senate or a House committee which only the group's members are privileged to attend. Frequently witnesses appear before committees meeting in executive session, and other Congressmen may be invited, but the public and press are not allowed.

Expenditure -- The actual spending of money as distinguished from the appropriation of it. Expenditures are made by the disbursing officers of the Administration; appropriations are made only by Congress. The two are rarely identical in any fiscal year; expenditures may represent money appropriated one, two or more years previously.

Filibuster -- A time-delaying tactic used by a minority in an effort to prevent a vote on a bill which probably would pass if brought to a vote. The most common method is to take advantage of the Senate's rules permitting unlimited debate, but other forms of parliamentary maneuvering may be used. The stricter rules in the House make filibusters more difficult, but they are attempted from time to time through devices such as repeated demands for quorum calls.

Fiscal Year -- Financial operations of the government are carried out in a 12-month fiscal year, beginning on July 1 and ending on June 30. The fiscal year carries the date of the calendar year in which it ends.

Floor Manager -- A Member, usually representing sponsors of a bill, who attempts to steer it through debate and revision to a final vote in the chamber. Floor managers are frequently chairmen or ranking members of the committee that reported the bill. Managers are responsible for apportioning the time granted supporters of the bill for debating it. The Minority Leader or the ranking minority member of the committee often apportions time for the opposition.

Frank -- A Congressman's facsimile signature on envelopes, used in lieu of stamps for his official outgoing mail, thus postage - free. Also the privilege of sending mail postage-free.

Germane -- Pertaining to the subject matter of the measure at hand. All House amendments must be germane to the bill. The Senate requires that amendments be germane only when they are to general appropriation bills, to those being considered under cloture, or often when proceeding under an agreement to limit debate.

Hearings -- Committee sessions for hearing witnesses. At hearings on legislation, witnesses usually include specialists, government officials and spokesmen for persons affected by the bills under study. Hearings related to special investigations bring forth a variety of witnesses. Committees sometimes use their subpena power to summon reluctant witnesses. The public and press may attend "open" hearings, but are barred from "closed" or "executive" hearings.

The committee announces its hearings, from one day to many weeks in advance, and may invite certain persons to testify. Persons who request time to testify may be turned down by the committee but most requests are honored.

Hopper -- Box on House Clerk's desk where bills are deposited on introduction.

House -- The House of Representatives, as distinct from the Senate, although each body is a "house" of Congress.

House Calendar -- Listing for action by the House of Representatives of public bills which do not directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue.

Immunity -- Constitutional privilege of Congressmen to make verbal statements on the floor and in committee for which they cannot be sued or arrested for slander or libel. Also, freedom from arrest while traveling to or from sessions of Congress or on official business. Congressmen in this status may be arrested only for treason, felonies or a breach of the peace, as defined by Congressional manuals.

Joint Committee -- A committee composed of a specified number of members of both House and Senate. Usually a joint committee is investigative in nature. There are a few standing joint committees, such as the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Joint Committee on the Economic Report.

Joint Resolution -- A joint resolution, designated H J Res or S J Res, requires the approval of both houses and the signature of the President, just as a bill does, and has the force of law if approved. There is no real difference between a bill and a joint resolution. The latter is generally used in dealing with limited matters, such as a single appropriation for a specific purpose or the granting of Congressional approval for executive actions -- for example, international executive agreements.

Joint resolutions also are used to propose amendments to the Constitution. These do not require Presidential signature, but become a part of the Constitution when three-fourths of the states have ratified them.

Journal -- The official record of the proceedings of the House and Senate. The Journal records the actions taken in each chamber, but unlike the Congressional Record, it does not include the verbatim report of speeches, debate, etc.

Law -- An Act of Congress which has been signed by the President, or passed over his veto by the Congress. Laws are listed by number; for example, the Housing Act of 1954 (HR 7839) became Public Law No. 560.

Legislative Budget -- An appraisal by Congress of federal spending and income for the year ahead. The Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (CQ Almanac, Vol. II, 1946, pp. 362, 531) directs four committees -- House Appropriations and Ways and Means and Senate Appropriations and Finance -- to study the President's budget recommendations each year, then by Feb. 15, report their own recommendations. The law directs that the report be accompanied by a concurrent resolution adopting the budget and fixing a limit on the year's appropriations. In practice, however, Congress has not complied with this law.

Legislative Day -- The "day" extending from the time either house meets after an adjournment until the time it next adjourns. Because the House normally adjourns from day to day, legislative days and calendar days usually coincide. But in the Senate, a legislative day may, and frequently does, extend over several calendar days.

Lobby -- A group seeking to influence the passage or defeat of legislation. Originally the term referred to persons frequenting the lobbies or corridors of legislative chambers in order to speak to lawmakers.

The exact definition of a lobby and the activity of lobbying is a matter of opinion. By some definitions, lobbying is limited to attempts at direct influence by personal interview and persuasion. Under other definitions, lobbying includes attempts at indirect influence, such as stirring members of a group to write or visit Congressmen, or attempting to create a climate of opinion favorable to a desired legislative action.

The right to attempt to influence legislation is based on the First Amendment to the Constitution, which says Congress shall make no law abridging the right of the people "to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Majority Leader -- Chief strategist and floor spokesman for the party in nominal control in either chamber. He is elected by his party colleagues and is virtually program director for his chamber, since he usually speaks for its majority.

Majority Whip -- In effect, the assistant majority leader, in House or Senate. His job is to help marshal majority forces in support of party strategy.

Manual -- The official handbook in each house prescribing its organization, procedures and operations in detail. The Senate Manual contains standing rules, orders, laws and resolutions affecting Senate business; the House Manual is the equivalent for the lower chamber. Both volumes contain previous codes under which Congress functioned and from which it continues to derive precedents. Committee powers are outlined. The rules set forth in the Manuals may be changed by elaborate chamber actions also specified by the Manuals.

Marking up a Bill -- Going through a measure, usually in committee, taking it section by section, revising language, penciling in new phrases,, etc. If the bill is extensively revised, the new version may be introduced as a separate bill, with a new number. (See Clean Bill.)

Minority Leader -- Floor leader for minority party. (See Majority Leader.)

Minority Whip -- Performs duties of whip for minority party. (See Majority Whip.)

Morning Hour -- The time set aside at the beginning of each legislative day for the consideration of regular routine business. The "hour" is of indefinite duration in the House, where it is rarely used. In the Senate it is the first two hours of a session following an adjournment, as distinguished from a recess. The morning hour can be terminated earlier if the morning business has been completed. This business includes such matters as messages from the President, communications from the heads of departments, messages from the House, the presentation of petitions and memorials, reports of standing and select committees, and the introduction of bills and resolutions.

During the first hour of the morning hour in the Senate, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill on the calendar is in order except by unanimous consent. During the second hour, motions can be made but must be decided without debate.

Motion -- Request by a Congressman for any one of a wide array of parliamentary actions. He "moves" for a certain procedure, or the consideration of a measure or a vote, etc. The precedence of motions, and whether they are debatable, is set forth in the House and Senate Manuals.

Nominations -- Appointments to office by the executive branch of the government, subject to Senate confirmation. Although most nominations win quick Senate approval, some are controversial and become the topic of hearings and debate. Sometimes Senators object to appointees for patronage reasons -- for example, when a nomination to a local federal job is made without consulting the Senators of the state concerned. Then a Senator may use the stock objection that the nominee is "personally obnoxious" to him. Usually other Senators join in blocking such an appointment out of courtesy to their colleague.

One Minute Speeches -- Addresses by House members at the beginning of a legislative day. The speeches may cover any subject, but are limited strictly to one minute's duration.

Override a Veto -- If the President disapproves a bill and sends it back to Congress with his objections, Congress may override his veto by a two-thirds vote in each chamber. The Constitution requires a yea-and-nay roll call. The question put to each house is: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?" (See also Pocket Veto and Veto.)

Pair -- A "gentlemen's agreement" between two lawmakers on opposite sides to withhold their votes on roll calls so their absence from Congress will not affect the outcome of record voting. If passage of the measure requires a two-thirds majority, a pair would require two Members favoring the action to one opposed to it.

Two kinds of pairs -- special and general -- are used; neither is counted in vote totals. The names of lawmakers pairing on a given vote and their stands, if known, are printed in the Congressional Record.

The special pair applies to one or a series of roll-call votes on the same subject. On special pairs lawmakers usually specify how they would have voted.

A general pair in the Senate, now rarely used in that chamber, applies to all votes on which the Members pairing are on opposite sides, and it lasts for the length of time pairing Senators agree on. It usually does not specify a Senator's stand on a given vote.

The general pair in the House differs from the other pairs. No agreement is involved and the pair does not tie up votes. A Representative expecting to be absent may notify the House Clerk he wishes to make a "general" pair. His name then is paired arbitrarily with that of another Member desiring a general pair, and the list is printed in the Congressional Record. He may or may not be paired with a Member taking the opposite position. General pairs in the House give no indication of how a Congressman would have voted. (See Record Vote and Stand.)

Pocket Veto -- The act of the President in withholding his approval of a bill after Congress has adjourned. When Congress is in session, a bill becomes law without the President's signature if he does not act upon it within ten days, excluding Sundays, from the time he gets it. But if Congress adjourns within that ten-day period, the bill is killed without the President's formal veto.

Point of Order -- An objection raised by a Congressman that the chamber is departing from rules governing its conduct of business. The objector cites the rule violated, the chair sustaining his objection if correctly made. Order is restored by the chair's suspending proceedings of the chamber until it conforms to the prescribed "order of business." Members sometimes raise a "point of no order" -- when there is noise and disorderly conduct in the chamber.

President of the Senate -- Presiding officer of the upper chamber, normally the Vice President of the U.S. In his absence, a President pro tempore (President for the time being) presides.

Previous Question -- In this sense, a "question" is an "issue" before the House for a vote and the issue is "previous" when some other topic has superseded it in the attention of the chamber. A motion for the previous question, when carried, has the effect of cutting off all extraneous debate and forcing a vote on the subject originally at hand. If, however, the previous question is moved and carried before there has been any debate on the subject at hand and the subject is debatable, then 40 minutes of debate is allowed before the vote. The previous question is sometimes moved on a non-debatable question in order to prevent amendments. The motion for the previous question is a debate-limiting device and is not in order in the Senate.

Private Calendar -- Private House bills dealing with individual matters such as claims against the government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc. When it is before the chamber, two Members may block a private bill, which then is recommitted to committee.

Backers of a private bill thus recommitted have another recourse. The measure can be put into an "omnibus claims bill" -- several private bills rolled into one. As with any bill, no part of an omnibus claims bill may be deleted without a vote. When a private bill goes back to the floor in this form, it can be defeated only by a majority of those present.

Privilege -- Privilege relates to the rights of Congressmen and to the relative priority of the motions and actions they may make in their respective chambers. The two are distinct. "Privileged questions" concern legislative business. "Questions of privilege" concern legislators themselves. (See below.)

Privileged Questions -- The order in which bills, motions and other legislative measures may be considered by Congress is governed by strict priorities. A motion to table, for instance, is more privileged than a motion to recommit. Thus, a motion to recommit can be superseded by a motion to table, and a vote would be forced on the latter motion only. A motion to adjourn, however, would take precedence over this one, and is thus considered of the "highest privilege."

Pro Forma Amendment -- See Strike Out the Last Word.

Questions of Privilege -- These are matters affecting members of Congress individually or collectively.

Questions affecting the rights, safety, dignity and integrity of proceedings of the House or Senate as a whole are questions of privilege of the House or Senate, as the case may be.

Congressmen singly involve questions of "personal privilege." A Member's rising to a question of personal privilege is given precedence over almost all other proceedings. An annotation in the House Rules points out that the privilege of the Member rests primarily on the Constitution, which gives him a conditional immunity from arrest and an unconditional freedom to speak in the House.

Quorum -- The number of Members whose presence is necessary for the transaction of business. In the Senate and House it is a majority of the membership (when there are no vacancies, this is 49 in the Senate and 218 in the House.). A quorum is 100 in the Committee of the Whole House. If a point of order is made that a quorum is not present, the only business in order is either a motion to adjourn or a motion to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to request the attendance of absentees.

Readings of Bills -- Traditional parliamentary law required bills to be read three times before they were passed. This custom is of little modern significance except in rare instances. Normally the bill is considered to have its first reading when it is introduced and printed, by title, in the Congressional Record. Its second reading comes when floor consideration begins. (This is the most likely point at which there is an actual reading of the bill, if there is any.) The third reading (usually by title) takes place when action has been completed on amendments.

Recess -- Distinguished from adjournment in that a recess does not end a legislative day and therefore does not interfere with unfinished business. The rules in each house set forth certain matters to be taken up and disposed of at the beginning of each legislative day. The House, which operates under much stricter rules than the Senate, usually adjourns from day to day. The Senate often recesses.

Recommit to Committee -- A simple motion, made on the floor after deliberation on a bill, to return it to the committee which reported it. If approved, recommittal usually is considered a death blow to the bill. In the House a motion to recommit can be made only by a Member opposed to the bill, and in recognizing a Member to make the motion, the Speaker gives the minority party preference over the majority.

A motion to recommit may include instructions to the committee to report the bill again with specific amendments or by a certain date. Or the instructions may be to make a particular study with no definite deadline for final action.

Reconsider a Vote -- A motion to reconsider the vote by which an action was taken has the effect, until it is disposed of, of suspending the action. In the Senate the motion can be made only by a Member who voted on the prevailing side of the original question, or by a Member who did not vote at all. In the House it can be made only by a Member on the prevailing side.

A common practice after close votes in the Senate is a motion to reconsider followed by a motion to table the motion to reconsider. On this motion to table, Senators vote as they voted on the original question to enable the motion to table to prevail. The matter is then finally closed and further motions to reconsider are not entertained. In the House, as a routine precaution, a motion to reconsider usually is made every time a measure is passed. Such a motion almost always is tabled immediately, thus shutting off the possibility of future reconsideration except by unanimous consent.

Motions to reconsider must be entered in the Senate within the next two days of actual session after the original vote has been taken. In the House they must be entered either on the same day or on the next succeeding day the House is in session.

Record Vote -- This is a roll call of the entire chamber membership, to which each Member on the floor must answer "yea", "nay", or, if he does not wish to vote, "present." The Constitution requires yea-and-nay votes on the question of overriding a veto. In other cases, they can be obtained by the demand of one-fifth of the Members present. In the House, the yeas-and-nays are required automatically whenever a Member objects to a non-record vote taken when a quorum was not present, if the question is one which requires a quorum. The yeas-and-nays are not taken in the Committee of the Whole.

Report -- Both a verb and a noun, as a Congressional term. A committee which has been examining a bill referred to it by the parent chamber "reports" its finding and recommendations to the chamber when the committee returns the measure. The process is called "reporting" a bill.

A "report" is the document setting forth the committee's explanation of its action. House and Senate reports are numbered separately and are designated S Rept or H Rept. Conference reports are numbered and designated in the same way as regular House reports.

Most reports favor a bill's passage. Adverse reports are occasionally submitted, but more often, when a committee disapproves a bill, it simply fails to report it at all. When a committee report is not unanimous, the dissenting committeemen may file a statement of their views, called Minority Views and referred to as a Minority Report. Sometimes a bill is reported without recommendation.

Rescission -- An item in an appropriation bill rescinding, or cancelling, funds previously appropriated but not spent.

Resolution -- A simple resolution, designated H Res or S Res, deals with matters entirely within the prerogatives of one house or the other. It requires neither passage by the other chamber nor approval by the President, and does not have the force of law. Most resolutions deal with the rules of one house. They also are used to express the sentiments of a single house, as condolences to the family of a deceased member or to give "advice" on foreign policy or other executive business. (Also see Concurrent and Joint Resolutions.)

Rider -- A provision tacked on to a bill which its sponsor hopes to get through more easily by including in other legislation. Riders become law if the bills embodying them do. Riders providing for legislation in appropriations bills are outstanding examples, though technically they are banned.

Rule -- The term has two specific Congressional meanings. A rule may be a standing order governing the conduct of House or Senate business and listed in the chamber's book of rules. The rules deal with duties of officers, order of business, admission to the floor, voting procedures, etc.

In the House, a rule also may be a decision made by its Rules Committee about the handling of a particular bill on the floor. The Committee may determine under which standing rule a bill shall be considered, or it may provide a "special rule" in the form of a resolution. If the resolution is adopted by the House, the temporary rule becomes as valid as any standing rule, and lapses only after action has been completed on the measure to which it pertains.

A special rule sets the time limit on general debate. It may also waive points of order against provisions of the bill in question or against specified amendments intended to be proposed to the bill. It may even forbid all amendments or all amendments except, in some cases, those proposed by the legislative committee which handled the bill. In this instance it is known as a "closed" or "gag" rule as opposed to an "open" rule which puts no limitation on floor action, thus leaving the bill open to alteration.

Select or Special Committee -- A committee set up for a special purpose and a limited time by resolution of either House or Senate. Most special committees are investigative in nature.

Slip Laws -- The first official publication of a bill that has been enacted into law. Each is published separately in unbound single-sheet or pamphlet form. It usually takes two to three days from the date of Presidential approval to the time when slip laws become available.

Speaker -- The presiding officer of the House of Representatives, elected by its Members.

Special Session -- A session of Congress after it has adjourned sine die, completing its regular session. Special sessions are convened by the President of the U. S. under his Constitutional powers.

Stand -- A lawmaker's position, for or against, on a given issue or vote. He can make known his stand on a roll-call vote by answering "yea" or "nay," by "pairing" for or against, or by "announcing" his position to the House or Senate. Members also may go on record by answering the Congressional Quarterly Poll of unrecorded Congressmen on important roll calls. (See Pair, and Record Vote, above.)

Standing Committee -- A group permanently provided for by House or Senate rules. The standing committees at present are specified by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, which broadly defines their respective jurisdictions.

Standing Vote -- A non-record vote used in both House and Senate. A standing vote, also called a division vote, is taken as follows: Members in favor of a proposal stand and are counted by the presiding officer; then Members opposed stand and are counted. There is no record of how individual Members voted. In the House, the presiding officer announces the number for and against. In the Senate, usually only the result is announced.

Statutes-at-Large -- A chronological arrangement of the laws enacted in each session of Congress. Though indexed, the laws are not arranged by subject matter nor is there an indication of how they affect previous law. (See U.S. Code.)

Strike From the Record -- Remarks made on the House floor may offend some Member, who moves that the offending words be "taken down" for the Speaker's cognizance, and then expunged from the verbatim report to be carried in the Congressional Record.

Strike Out the Last Word -- A move whereby House Members are entitled to speak for a fixed time on a measure then being debated by the chamber. A Member gains recognition from the chair by moving to strike out the last word of the amendment or section of the bill then under consideration. The motion is pro forma, and customarily requires no vote.

Strike the Enacting Clause -- Each bill before Congress starts off with the phrase: "Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That . . ." A Member wishing to kill a bill frequently will move from the floor to "strike the enacting clause" -- that first sentence -- from the bill. If the action carries and the enacting clause is stricken, the bill cannot, of course, be enacted into law.

Substitute -- A motion, an amendment, or an entire bill introduced in place of pending business. Passage of a substitute measure kills the original measure by supplanting it. A substitute may be amended.

Supplemental Appropriation -- An appropriation supplemental to the regular appropriation, but not a deficiency measure. Supplemental appropriations normally are passed after the regular appropriation, but supposedly before the fiscal year to which they apply. Deficiencies are passed in the same fiscal year to which they apply. This distinction is not always adhered to.

Table a Bill -- The motion to "lay on the table" is not debatable in either house, and is usually a method of making a final, adverse disposition of a matter. In the Senate, however, different language is sometimes used. The motion is worded to let a bill "lie on the table," perhaps for subsequent "picking up." This motion is more flexible, merely keeping the bill pending for later action, if desired.

Teller Vote -- In the House, Members file past tellers and are counted as for or against a measure, but they are not recorded individually. The teller vote is not used in the Senate. In the House, tellers are ordered upon demand of one-fifth of a quorum. This is 44 in the House, 20 in Committee of the Whole.

Treaties -- Executive proposals which must be submitted to the Senate for approval of two-thirds of the Senators present. Before they act on such foreign policy matters, Senators may refer them to committee for scrutiny. Treaties are read three times and debated in the chamber much as are legislative proposals.

Unanimous Consent -- Synonymous with Without Objection. (See below.)

Union Calendar -- Bills which directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue are placed on this House calendar according to the date reported from committee.

U.S. Code -- A consolidation and codification of the general and permanent laws of the United States arranged by subject under 50 Titles, the first six dealing with general or political subjects, and the other 44 alphabetically arranged from Agriculture to War and National Defense. The Code is now revised every six years and a supplement is published after each session of Congress.

Veto -- Disapproval by the President of a bill or joint resolution, other than one proposing an amendment to the Constitution. When Congress is in session, the President must veto a bill within 10 days, excluding Sundays, after he has received it; otherwise it becomes law with or without his signature. When the President vetoes a bill, he returns it to the house of its origin with a message stating his objections. The veto then becomes a question of high privilege. (See Override a Veto.)

When Congress has adjourned, the President may pocket veto a bill by failing to sign it. (See Pocket Veto.)

Voice Vote -- In either House or Senate, Members answer "aye" or "no" in chorus and the presiding officer decides the result. The term also is used loosely to indicate action by unanimous consent or without objection.

Without Objection -- Used in lieu of a vote on noncontroversial motions, amendments, or bills, which may be passed in either the House or the Senate if no Member voices an objection.

House Votes -- Minimum Wage, Social Security . . .

63. Social Security (HR 7225). Amend Social Security Act to provide disability benefits for certain disabled individuals at age 50, reduce to 62 age at which benefits are payable to certain women, provide for continuation of insurance benefits for children disabled before age 18, and extend coverage. Passage under suspension of the rules. (Two-thirds majority, or 269 "yeas" required.) Passed, 372-31, July 18. (See story, p. 261.)

64. Minimum Wage (HR 7214). Amend Fair Labor Standards Act to make minimum wage $1 an hour effective March 1, 1956. (House subsequently vacated passage and passed S 2168 amended to contain the text of HR 7214 as previously approved.) Passed, 362-54, July 20. (See story, p. 321.)

FARM PRICE SUPPORTS

HR 12 – Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 203) March 10, 1955; minority views (H Rept 203, Part 2) filed March 11.

• Passed by the House, amended, on a 206-201 roll-call vote May 5. (See p. 146.)

HR 12 represented efforts by House Democrats, with the support of Republicans from some farm states, to reverse Congress' 1954 action in instituting flexible price supports for five basic farm commodities. HR 12, if enacted, would have restored rigid (or fixed) supports at 90 percent of parity.

Flexible (or sliding-scale, or variable) supports took effect on the 1955 crops of wheat, corn, cotton, rice, and peanuts. The sixth basic, tobacco, remained under rigid supports under terms of the 1954 law (PL 690, 83rd Congress). The range of flexible supports for the other five basics was set at 82.5 to 90 percent of parity for 1955, and was scheduled to become 75 to 90 percent of parity, beginning in 1956.

The Eisenhower Administration, which had proposed flexible supports, opposed the return to rigid supports. No serious attempt was made to push HR 12 through the Senate in 1955. The Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee began hearings late in the session on the broad issue of price supports, rather than on HR 12 itself. The showdown was expected to take place in 1956. During Congress' summer and autumn recess, the decline of farm prices developed as potentially a key issue for the 1956 election campaigns.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 12 would have:

Supported wheat, corn, cotton, rice, and peanuts at 90 percent of parity in 1955, 1956, and 1957.

Raised the minimum support level for whole milk, butterfat, and their products from 75 to 80 percent of parity, while retaining the maximum of 90 percent.

Eliminated assurance of "adequate supply" as the only standard for determining the level of dairy supports between the minimum and maximum.

Extended for one year, through fiscal 1957, authority for the Commodity Credit Corporation to supply milk for school lunches.

Increased the authorization for the school lunch milk program from $50 million to $75 million a year, beginning in fiscal 1956.

Confined expenditures for the school lunch milk program to purchase and distribution of fluid milk, ruling out funds for equipment in the schools.

Extended the accelerated brucellosis eradication program -- for payment of indemnities for the slaughter of infected cows -- through fiscal 1958.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Omnibus Farm Program, Price Supports." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 100ff.) "Farm Price Supports" (Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 81ff.); "Agricultural Act of 1949" (Vol. V, 1949, pp. 131ff.); "Agricultural Act of 1948" (Vol. IV, 1948, pp. 53ff.).

For definitions of agricultural terms, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 102.

Beginning during Harry S. Truman's last term as President and continuing during President Eisenhower's Administration, prices farmers got for their products declined. Meanwhile, prices paid by farmers declined at a slower rate. The result: Farmers complained that they were caught in a "cost-price squeeze."

Production of major farm commodities exceeded consumption, resulting in accumulation of stocks. The federal government held much of the surplus in storage, having taken it over from farmers and processors under the program of price supports.

FLEXIBLE SUPPORTS ASKED

After about a year of study, the Eisenhower Administration decided that rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity were a major cause of surpluses, and that surpluses depressed prices. The President submitted in January, 1954, an omnibus farm program, including a proposal to institute flexible supports for five basic commodities. Lower supports, he said, would discourage over-production; balanced supply and demand would raise prices "in the market place" without undue dependence on artificial federal supports.

Democrats and some Republicans said lower supports would reduce farm income to a point endangering prosperity, without solving the surplus problem.

(Rigid supports are fixed guarantees. They do not fluctuate from the specified level.

(Flexible supports fluctuate within a specified range, depending on supply and, sometimes, other factors. The support level for a commodity rises as supply declines, and declines as supply rises.)

1954 FARM LAW

Most of the President's farm program was enacted as the Agricultural Act of 1954. Included was a key provision instituting flexible supports for five basics at 82.5 to 90 percent of parity. Compromise within Congress raised the minimum from 75 percent of parity for 1955. The minimum was scheduled to dip to 75 percent in 1956. Other provisions of the Act insured that supports -- except for wheat -- would remain above the 82.5 percent minimum during 1955.

Congress also upheld the Administration's action in cutting dairy supports from 90 to 75 percent of parity, rejecting attempts to raise the minimum to 80 percent or higher.

Other provisions of the 1954 Act instituted a system of direct payments to wool growers and expanded indirect aid to agriculture.

Another 1954 Act (PL 480) attacked the farm problem by expanding disposal of surpluses. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 120ff.)

In his 1955 State of the Union message, President Eisenhower said: "We can now look forward to an easing of the influences depressing farm prices, to reduced government expenditures for purchase of surplus products, and to less federal intrusion into the lives and plans of our farm people...We are headed in the right direction. I urgently recommend to the Congress that we continue resolutely on this road."

The House's action in passing HR 12 was vigorously opposed by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, who said he would recommend a veto of the bill if it were passed by the Senate.

1955 DROP IN FARM PRICES

Prices for farm produce continued to decline during Congress' 1955 recess. In mid-August, farm prices averaged 233 percent of the 1910-14 level, compared to 237 percent in mid-July, 249 percent in mid-August of 1954, and the all-time high point of 302 percent in 1951. A slower drop appeared in the prices paid by farmers, which averaged 279 percent of the 1910-14 level in mid-August of 1955, compared to 281 percent in mid-July, 281 percent in mid-August of 1954, and the all-time high of 287 percent in 1953.

The mid-August parity ratio -- measuring prices received by farmers against prices they paid -- was 84 percent, the same as in mid-July. The parity ratio had been 89 percent in mid-August, 1954. The post-Korea high point was 93 percent in September, 1953, and the post-World War II high point was 115 percent in 1947. In 1953, the parity ratio averaged 92 percent, and in 1954, 89 percent.

Prices for wheat dipped lower than for other basic commodities in 1955, and a further decline was expected.

Wheat farmers approved marketing quotas for the 1956 crop in a referendum on June 25, 1955. The quotas were to be based on acreage allotments of 55 million acres, the minimum allowed by law and the same as allotted for 1955. Secretary of Agriculture Benson had announced that 1956 wheat supports would be established at 76 percent of parity. If marketing quotas had been rejected, supports would have been lowered to 50 percent of parity.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 17 - March 4, on HR 12. As introduced by Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.), the bill would restore rigid 90 percent of parity support to five "basic" crops.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 17 -- Secretary Benson said restoration of high, rigid farm price supports would aggravate existing surplus problems. Benson said he believed the existing dairy support program should be continued because the dairy industry was showing "new signs of health and vigor." He told the Committee that an over supply of wheat was agriculture's biggest problem and that an over supply of rice was developing. In other fields, he said, producers were in a period of "comparative stability."

Feb. 18 -- Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse said the Eisenhower Administration did not plan to ask Congress for any "basic changes" in the existing farm price-support law.

Feb. 23 -- Charles B. Shuman, president, and Walter Randolph, vice president, American Farm Bureau Federation, opposed the legislation as a "backward step" which would further depress agricultural income. Shuman backed the Administration program of flexible supports. John A. Baker, assistant to the president of the National Farmers Union, favored proposed rigid-supports legislation and urged repeal of the "Eisenhower sliding-scale law" which, he said, had cut farmers' income drastically.

Feb. 24 -- Baker asked that dairy products be given high price supports and milk prices be maintained at 100 percent of parity. Herschel D. Newsom, master of the National Grange, said high wartime price supports could not be continued with any hope of maintaining agricultural prosperity.

Feb. 25 -- CIO President Walter Reuther "wholeheartedly" supported HR 12 and similar measures. He said the CIO wanted full 100 percent of parity support, but backed the 90 percent proposals in preference to continued flexible supports. He asserted that the "welfare and destiny of farmers and wage earners are closely interrelated, that each depends upon the prosperity of the one to lift up the living standards of the other."

Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) supported 100 percent supports. Rep. Victor Wickersham (D Okla.) supported HR 12.

March 2 -- Department of Agriculture officials opposed HR 12.

March 4 -- Supporting the bill were Reps. Usher L. Burdick (R N.D.) and Otto Krueger (R N.D.), ex-Rep. Fred Crawford (R Mich., 1935-53), and Dr. Carl Wilken, economic analyst for the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

BILL AMENDED

ACTION -- March 8 -- The Committee voted, 23-12, to report HR 12 favorably with amendments. The Committee amendments added to the bill provisions to:

Raise minimum dairy supports to 80 percent of parity.

Extend the brucellosis program.

Extend, with increased authorizations, the school lunch milk program.

Institute a two-price marketing certificate system for wheat.

Under the two-price system, wheat needed for domestic human consumption would be supported at 100 percent of parity. Excess production, used for export and for animal feed, would be sold at or near the free market price. Marketing certificates would be part of the mechanics for carrying out the system, which would take effect if approved by a majority of wheat farmers in a referendum. The 1954 omnibus farm bill passed by the House contained similar provisions, but they were deleted in conference.

March 10 -- The report (H Rept 203) was filed.

March 11 -- Minority views signed by eight Republicans were filed as H Rept 203, Part 2.

April 28 -- The Committee decided to offer an amendment on the floor to delete provisions which would have established a two-price system for wheat.

Floor Action

HR 12 was passed May 5 on a 206-201 roll-call vote. Voting for the bill were 185 Democrats and 21 Republicans. Opposing the bill were 29 Democrats and 172 Republicans.

A motion to recommit (kill) by Rep. William S. Hill (R Colo.) was rejected by a 199-212 roll-call vote. The House also rejected, by a 193-215 roll-call vote, an amendment by Rep. William J. Green, Jr. (D Pa.) to eliminate peanuts from the list of basic commodities. This amendment had been agreed to May 4 by a teller vote of 186-150. (For voting, see chart, p. 146.)

DEBATE -- May 3 -- Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- HR 12 would "leave the farmer and the agriculture industry in the same mess they are in today and...will continue to pile up wasteful surpluses."

D.R. Matthews (D Fla.) -- "HR 12...will help restore to the little farmer some measure of confidence in his future that has been lacking."

Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.) -- "Will we at least do something to slow up this decline in farm income or will we let it continue to go down, down, down just as it did in the 1920's?"

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- HR 12 would assure the farmer "of at least the cost of production plus a fair profit...it will benefit us all."

Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) -- "HR 12 should be defeated in its present form...it is highly discriminatory to the dairy farmer."

May 4 -- Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (D Mass.) -- Americans "would be greatly alarmed...if they ever could realize...it has cost (them)...$118 million to support the price of peanuts."

L.H. Fountain (D N.C.) -- "If we pass this (peanuts) amendment we will destroy the confidence of the American farmers in the entire farm program."

Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.) -- "Political considerations, not economic, bring this (bill) before us...We have here...what may be called a political conspiracy simply for political power...the farmer is the victim. The sole objective of this bill is to try to embarrass the Eisenhower Administration."

May 5 -- William B. Widnall (R N.J.) -- "Rigid parity can only lead to continuation of our staggering surpluses...the overwhelming majority of the farmers (in my Congressional district)...are for the flexible parity program."

W.R. Poage (D Texas) -- The Laird dairy amendment "is a matter of bringing more politics into a measure into which we have already had more politics than we should."

A motion by Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) to strike the enacting clause -- in effect to kill the bill -- was rejected by voice vote. The motion was tactical; Abernethy tried unsuccessfully to withdraw it.

The Committee amendment -- involving dairy supports, school lunch, and brucellosis -- was accepted by voice vote, as amended.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 5 -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.), for the Committee -- Delete from the Committee amendment provisions to institute a two-price system for wheat. Voice vote.

Cooley -- Delete reference to the two-price system from the bill's title. Voice.

James G. Polk (D Ohio) -- Clarify phrasing of the Committee amendment, to insure extension of the brucellosis eradication program through fiscal 1958. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 5 -- William J. Green, Jr. (D Pa.) -- Eliminate peanuts from the list of basic commodities for price-support purposes; remove acreage controls from peanuts. Roll call, 193-215 (that action reversed acceptance of the amendment May 4 by a 186-150 teller vote).

Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) -- Establish dairy supports at the same level, through March 31, 1958, as supports for basic commodities. Standing, 39-58.

Walter Rogers (D Texas) -- Substitute mandatory for permissive supports for grain sorghum; establish support level for grain sorghum at 80 to 85 percent of parity. Standing, 47-62.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- May 18 adopted, by an 8-7 vote, a motion to begin hearings on price-support legislation as soon as practicable. The action was seen as a move to put off until 1956 Senate consideration of HR 12.

Chairman Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) said after the executive session that he did not "see how we can conclude hearings in time for action at this session of Congress if we go into it thoroughly." He said that if full hearings were permitted, a bill would be sent to the Senate as early as possible in 1956.

During the meeting, Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) moved that hearings be held on HR 12 but concluded in time to report to the Senate by June 15. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) offered a substitute motion, however, calling for hearings on the support program generally, with the hearings to close at the Committee's discretion. Anderson's motion was adopted. Hearings began June 1.

VETO FORESEEN

TESTIMONY -- June 1 -- Ellender said he doubted that a rigid price-support bill "could be re-enacted (over a veto) and put on the statute books."

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) supported S 1770, a bill to institute a two-price system for wheat. He said it would give farmers an opportunity to compete in a free market and increase export and feed outlets for wheat. Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) said wheat growers would be better off under a two-price system.

June 3 -- Charles Marshall of the American Farm Bureau Federation called for an emergency program to be used if wheat marketing quotas were rejected by farmers in the June 25 referendum. He suggested a total wheat allotment of 62 million acres and price supports at 65 percent of parity.

June 7 -- James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union called for 100 percent of parity price supports. This view was opposed by Herschel D. Newsom of the National Grange, who said it would be a mistake to "return to war-time support levels" as a permanent program. He proposed separate price programs for each commodity. Past efforts to support prices, he claimed, had failed because of the attempt to "apply one program to all commodities."

June 9 -- Kenneth Kendrick of the National Association of Wheat Growers said he believed flexible supports and lower prices would neither decrease production nor increase consumption. He said he favored a two-price support program for wheat.

June 17 -- J.T. Sanders of the National Grange backed a two-price support program for wheat.

June 22 -- A spokesman for the Vegetable Growers' Association opposed any system of high, rigid price supports.

June 23 -- Otie M. Reed of the Joint Committee of the National Creameries Association and the American

Butter Institute outlined a plan to increase milk consumption by raising about $40 million a year to publicize dairy products.

E.M. Norton of the National Milk Producers Federation supported an attempt to secure year-round stabilization of dairy prices.

Hearings were then adjourned until fall.

SCHEDULE -- The Committee scheduled autumn "grass roots" hearings beginning at St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 24 and continuing through November at Worthington, Minn.; Des Moines, Iowa; Brookings, S.D.; Minot, S.D.; Pendleton, Ore.; Fresno, Calif.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Hutchinson, Kan.; Fort Worth, Texas; Alexandria, La.; Macon, Ga.; Columbia, S.C.; Raleigh, N.C.; Montpelier, Vt.; Utica, N.Y.; and Chicago, Ill.

Group Stands

The viewpoints on price supports of four leading farm organizations:

Farm Bureau

"...incomes of farmers will be maintained at the highest possible level if we allow...the price system to perform for agriculture the functions which it alone can adequately perform -- that is, to serve as the main balance wheel between supply and demand.

"Rigid mandatory 90 percent price support...has failed to keep net farm income from suffering a severe drop...the sound way to stop the drop in net farm income ...is to allow price and increased opportunity to guide production, increase efficiency, lower costs, and expand markets at home and abroad." -- Charles B. Shuman, president, American Farm Bureau Federation.

National Farmers Union

"The National Farmers Union favors the enactment of legislation that will provide support at 100 percent of parity, by means of production payments in combination with other methods, for the family farm production of all farm-produced commodities...As we see it, firm adequate price-support legislation is absolutely essential as an important part of significant programs to attain imperative national aims."

"The change to a flexible support program made in the 1954 Agricultural Act...was a serious mistake, and mandatory 90 percent supports should be restored immediately by Congress. The flexible support system is unworkable by its very nature and I do not see how anyone can argue that the farmer's position will be improved by cutting his prices and income." -- John A. Baker, assistant to the president, National Farmers Union.

National Grange

"We firmly believe that continued adherence to wartime price-support levels in all instances as a permanent or long-time program is not only expensive to all of us as American taxpayers, but that it cannot effectively achieve and maintain agricultural prosperity...

"On the other hand, we have no faith that broad adherence to a schedule of flexible price supports, particularly under present conditions, will serve well either agriculture or America as a whole. Farmers have already suffered severe price declines, and farm prices are out of balance with industrial prices...

"We believe that for the present we must concentrate on the revisions necessary to correct this disparity and to bring about a better balance between supply and demand conditions. To do this requires among other things, a rather sharp adjustment in our production plant from a wartime basis to peacetime requirements...

"The Grange has long advocated that an effective solution demands a commodity-by-commodity approach... no single formula can possibly prescribe...for the peculiar requirements of all the commodities." -- Herschel D. Newsom, master, The National Grange.

The Grange advocated a two-price system for wheat.

Milk Producers

"Until such time as a satisfactory producer-financed and operated dairy stabilization and production control program can be enacted and put into operation, it is essential that a price-support program for milk and butterfat, and the products thereof, be continued in effect and that such a program guarantee returns to dairy farmers equal to or in balance with returns to producers of other supported commodities, and in line with those costs of production which are affected by other government programs." -- A Dairy Policy, pamphlet published by the National Milk Producers Federation.

The group offered its own proposal -- a so-called "self-help program" -- under which dairy farmers themselves would regulate their production to provide adequate supplies of milk and dairy foods, and would assume losses, "if any," which might be involved in the disposal of seasonal or occasional annual surpluses.

Labor Groups

The Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor backed rigid price supports. There were attempts to line up a farm-labor "coalition" for cooperative action on such issues as price supports and the minimum wage. The effort brought some criticism:

"A surprising coalition resulted in...the House... approving return to the rigid price support system...Some Congressmen from northern industrial areas voted for the rigid support program in return for agreements from many of their colleagues representing agricultural areas to vote in favor of a $1.25 minimum wage...Votes were openly traded...indicating...a working arrangement between the CIO and certain agricultural leaders." Rep. Patrick J. Hillings (R Calif.), May 9 press release.

"It has been suggested that I have brought into being some sort of vicious coalition between labor and agriculture. A more ridiculous statement has never been made ...I take pride in the fact that the (rigid support) program has operated so successfully and so well that it has the approval of the great labor leaders of America...The price-support program means the same thing to agriculture as the minimum wage law means to the laboring men of our country...I want the support of labor leaders, industrial workers, and all other persons interested... (in) the entire farm program." Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.), May 3 House speech.

"The Democrat(ic)-controlled Committee on Agriculture, without any consultation with the Republican Members, had a special...document printed embodying the testimony of only Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, and George Meany, president of the AFL...." Rep. Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.), May 12 release.

SUGAR QUOTAS

HR 7030 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1348) July 22, 1955.

• Passed, amended, by the House July 30 by a standing vote of 194-44.

Much-disputed legislation (HR 7030) providing a new formula for sugar marketing quotas, though passed by the House, failed to clear the Senate before Congress' 1955 adjournment. Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) Aug. 2 blocked Senate consideration of the bill, as proposed in a parliamentary maneuver by Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.). The existing Sugar Act would expire on Dec. 31, 1956.

The major aim of HR 7030 was "to open the way for United States domestic area (sugar) producers to participate with foreign areas in supplying the growth of the United States sugar market." Existing quotas to supply the estimated annual U.S. need would not have changed. But the proposed bill would have granted domestic producers a 50 percent share of excess market demand and reduced Cuba's "cut" of the market.

Lobby groups for both domestic and foreign suppliers were determined to see that "their side" received preferred treatment in any legislation. Domestic cane and beet sugar groups fought for higher quotas, arguing that an expanded U.S. sugar industry was needed to meet any possible emergency needs. Cuban sugar groups claimed their sugar was the only major protection U.S. consumers would have in an emergency. They also said increased U.S. exports to Cuba largely depended on the market for Cuban sugar in this country.

EXISTING QUOTAS CONTINUED

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 7030 would:

Extend the Sugar Act of 1948 to Dec 31, 1960.

Continue existing fixed and variable quotas to meet the estimated annual U.S. need of 8,350,000 tons for 1956.

Provide that any increase in U.S. consumption above the 8,350,000-ton estimate for 1956 would be supplied 50 percent by domestic producers, 48 percent by Cuba, and 2 percent by other foreign sources except the Philippines, which would be limited to its existing fixed quota.

Apportion the first 188,000 tons, or any part of it, of the 1956 domestic share of the increased market among U.S. producers so domestic beet growers would get 45.2 percent of the total, mainland cane growers 42.6 percent, Puerto Rico 10.6 percent, and the Virgin Islands 1.6 percent.

Provide that any increase in domestic area quotas above 188,000 tons in 1956 would be apportioned among U.S. growers on the basis of the existing law's quota assignments.

Assign, for 1957-60, 50 percent of the U.S. market growth above 8,350,000 tons to domestic producers and 50 percent to foreign producers.

Provide, in 1957-60, that the additional quotas for domestic producers be distributed in accord with final quotas established for 1956.

Allot Cuba in 1957 the total foreign share of the added U.S. market less 175,000 tons to be distributed among all other foreign suppliers except the Philippines.

Allot Cuba in 1958-60 the total foreign share of the increased domestic market less 45,000 tons to be distributed among all other foreign suppliers except the Philippines.

FUTURE QUOTAS REVISED

In addition, the bill would revise quotas of foreign producers (except Cuba and the Philippines), beginning in 1957, as follows:

Countries which exported less than 1,000 tons of sugar during 1953-54 would get a fixed quota equal to their average share of the U.S. market in 1953-54.

Countries which exported between 1,000 and 3,000 tons during 1953-54 would get a fixed quantity of 2,000 tons. The 2,000 tons would be augmented by alloting the average shipment for 1953-54 plus 30 percent of that average. For each year after 1957, these countries' quotas would be increased by another 30 percent of the amount shipped to the U.S. in the previous year.

The remaining quota would be prorated as follows: The Dominican Republic 37 percent, Peru 36 percent, Mexico 20 percent, Nicaraugua 5 percent, and Haiti 2 percent.

Other provisions of HR 7030 would:

Provide for government purchase, or some other form of acquisition, of 100,000 tons of domestic sugar in 1955 "for disposition outside the continental United States...(so) as not to interfere unduly with normal marketing of sugar."

Set up quota curtailment provisions as a penalty for foreign producers who divert their sugar to markets other than the U.S. in order to take advantage of a world price higher than the U.S. domestic price.

Provide that any increase in the domestic quota which specific U.S. areas could not fill would be shifted to other U.S. areas before Cuba would be given an opportunity to fill the quota.

Legislation relating to sugar and the sugar industry dates back to 1789, when a tariff on sugar imports was enacted to raise revenue. From this act the government collected 20 percent of all its import revenues for 101 years. The act also aided development of the domestic sugar industry. A reciprocal trade agreement with Hawaii in 1876 admitted Hawaiian sugar to the United States free of duty, and by 1890 the sugar industry had become the islands' most important industry.

In 1890 the import tax was repealed, since a surplus in the U.S. Treasury had ended the need for the revenue-producing tariff. A two-cent bounty was given, however, on each pound domestically produced. This step aided Cuban producers while offsetting the Hawaiian tariff advantage. The price of sugar fell sharply, and this was credited with causing a revolt against the Hawaiian monarchy and the eventual establishment of the Republic of Hawaii in 1892.

1955 Sugar Quotas

The Sugar Act requires the Secretary of Agriculture in December to estimate how much sugar the U.S. will consume in the coming year and set an over-all production quota. Actual consumption is normally somewhat higher. Revisions are made as the need arises.

Certain producers on the mainland and overseas are allotted a fixed tonnage. Cuba gets 96 percent of the rest of the over-all quota, while the remaining 4 percent is divided among other foreign producers.

Official quotas for 1955 and percentages for sugar producers in the U.S. market, as of December, 1954:

A new sugar tariff was established in 1894 to protect domestic industry and to return Hawaii to its preferred status in the U.S. market. After the Spanish-American war, free trade in sugar was extended to Puerto Rico and the Philippines, with a preferred status granted to Cuba.

During World War I rigid controls were placed on sugar, and production was encouraged. With removal of controls at the end of the war, sugar prices were subjected to ups and downs by new methods and variations in production, and depressions.

CUBAN DIFFICULTIES

The sugar tariff was raised in 1921, 1922 and 1930, with Cuba always maintaining preferential treatment. In 1932, however, it became clear that a different approach was needed. The price of sugar in the U.S. had dropped to 3 cents a pound, including a 2-cent tariff and the cost of freight from Cuba. The stimulus of high tariff protection was causing over-production in certain domestic areas and the 2-cent tariff on Cuban sugar was causing severe suffering among the Cuban people.

Numerous conferences were held in 1933 by representatives of the industry to develop a marketing agreement for sugar. A plan called the Sugar Stabilization Agreement was submitted to the Secretary of Agriculture, and this became the basis for the Jones-Costigan Act of 1934.

The Act marked an entirely new approach to the sugar problem. It restricted the supply of sugar in the U.S. market to a total quantity determined each year by the Secretary of Agriculture. Market shares for the mainland beet and cane areas were established, largely on the basis of production during the two preceding years. The act also provided for an excise tax on sugar, linked to benefit payments to domestic growers, as well as for control of domestic production and imports.

This law remained unchanged until 1936, when the payment of producers was declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court. In 1937 a new law was enacted providing for payment to producers from the Treasury rather than directly from the tax proceeds. This act was extended in 1941, 1944 and 1946. Quota requirements were lifted by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939 when war broke out in Europe, and again from 1942-47.

1948 SUGAR ACT

To meet the problems of the postwar transitional period, the Sugar Act of 1948 was enacted. Under the 1937 law, quotas for each area had been set at a "percentage of the estimated requirements". The 1948 Act assigned fixed quantities to domestic areas and the Philippine Islands, and variable quotas to Cuba and "other foreign countries". The balance in excess of fixed quotas was assigned to these countries, with 96 percent going to Cuba.

In 1951 the Act was amended, but only in respect to some of the quotas permitted to some countries.

Principal features of the Act:

Purpose -- The Sugar Act of 1948, as amended, regulates the production, marketing and importation of sugar for the U.S. by using a complex system of quotas, subsidies and an excise tax.

Production Control -- The Secretary of Agriculture is directed to make an annual estimate of the quantity of sugar needed to meet "consumption requirements" of continental U.S. This total becomes the quota that is divided among the domestic and foreign sugar producers in the U.S. market.

Excise Tax -- Sugar consumed in the U.S. is subject to an excise tax of 50 cents per 100 pounds, raw value.

Subsidies -- "Conditional payments" are paid to producers of sugar cane and sugar beets in the U.S. and territories at the basic rate of 80 cents per 100 pounds of sugar, raw value. This rate is reduced progressively to a minimum of 30 cents per 100 pounds on all sugar produced in excess of 30,000 short tons per farm.

In order to receive a subsidy, producers are required to pay minimum wages to laborers as set by the Secretary of Agriculture, exclude child labor, and grow no more than an allotted proportion of the quota assigned their area. Those processors who are also growers must pay at least minimum prices for cane and beets purchased from other growers.

Domestic sugar production increased in the 1950's. Even though permitted sugar acreage was cut 10 percent in 1954, and another 18 percent in 1955, more sugar was produced than, under law, could be marketed. By 1955, a surplus of 220,000 tons was on hand.

The law was due to expire on Dec. 31, 1956, and to give growers time to plan their crops, Congress was urged to extend the act in 1955. In March, 1955, spokesmen for the sugar industry were notified that the Agriculture Department had reached no agreement with the State Department concerning quotas for foreign producers. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson April 5 said differences between the Agriculture and State Departments were small. He asserted that domestic sugar producers "ought to share" in the increasing sugar consumption of the United States.

PRODUCERS' BILL

Domestic industry spokesmen arranged to have their own bill (HR 5402) introduced March 31 by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.) An identical Senate bill (S 1635) was introduced April 1 by Sen. Allen J. Ellender Sr., (D La.) and 48 co-sponsors.

The Boggs-Ellender proposals called for an additional 188,000 tons in the annual domestic sugar quota and provided that the domestic industry would get 55 percent of any consumption needs over the annual estimate. Foreign producers would get the remaining 45 percent, with Cuba retaining 96 percent of the foreign market.

Sponsors of these proposals held that they would not reduce the existing volume of sugar imports from "any foreign country, including Cuba". Spokesmen for the U.S. Cuban Sugar Council, however, claimed this was "not true" and that the cost to Cuba would "exceed 200,000 tons annually". Sen. Ellender urged Cuba to support his bill, saying it would leave Cuba a fair share of the expanding sugar market, but the Cuban Sugar Council replied that "the Ellender bill actually would hurt not only Cuba but also the United States and especially Louisiana." The Council noted that Cuba was a "principal importer" of rice and a "key customer" for oil and petroleum products from Louisiana.

COMPROMISE ANNOUNCED

An Administration compromise on sugar legislation was announced June 8 by Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah). The measure provided domestic producers with an increase of 100,000 tons in their marketing quotas, plus 55 percent of U.S. sugar consumption above 8.3 million tons. It would have cut Cuba's sugar sales to the U.S. by approximately 175,000 tons in 1955, as opposed to 240,000 tons requested by U.S. sugar producers. Sens. Ellender and Russell B. Long (D La.) said the Administration's views did "not meet the pressing problems" of U.S. beet and cane sugar producers.

The Department of Agriculture July 22 announced an increase of 100,000 tons in the amount of sugar which might be sold in U.S. markets in 1955. The increase brought the total of domestic marketing and import quotas for the year to 8,300,000 tons. Cuba got 96,000 tons of the increase; the remaining 4,000 tons went to other Central and South American sugar-producing countries.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs, special mission to Cuba.

ACTION -- Rep. Albert P. Morano (R Conn.), special one-man study mission, Jan. 23 reported that Cuba needed "a comprehensive plane for economic development" but could not do anything unless the United States continued sugar purchases at current levels. He urged Congress to extend the Sugar Act to 1966 and to ignore domestic producers' pleas for reductions in Cuban sugar imports.

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

HEARINGS -- June 22-29 and July 6, 7, 14, 15.

TESTIMONY -- June 22 -- Henry Holland, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, said the State Department opposed revision of sugar quotas in 1955 on the ground it would cause economic distress in Cuba and accentuate the danger of communism there.

Lawrence Meyers, director of the Agriculture Department's sugar division, said existing sugar quotas had stimulated foreign trade.

June 23 -- True D. Morse, Under Secretary of Agriculture, heard Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) charge that the Agriculture Department had failed to properly control sugar production. Morse and Meyers replied that unusually good weather had caused excess production and defended the Department's method of fixing acreage allotments.

June 24 -- Frank Kemp of Denver, Colo., representing sugar producers in the U.S., Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, said they should have higher quotas. He said pending bills would not change Cuba's share of the market. Reps. Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) and A.L. Miller (R Neb.) also supported legislation to increase domestic producers' share in the market.

A Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation spokesman said cane growers needed an immediate increase in quotas. A spokesman for the Columbia Basin Irrigation Commission said growers in Washington needed increased acreage allotment for sugar beets.

FOREIGN VIEWS PRESENTED

June 25 -- Representatives of Mexico and Peru asked for a larger share of U.S. sugar purchases once needs of domestic producers had been met.

Opposing any cut in Cuba's share of the domestic market were spokesmen for the American and Foreign Power Co., the Foreign Trade Club, Burroughs Co., and other firms doing business in Cuba.

June 27 -- The Philippine Sugar Association urged that the Philippines be given a proportionate share of any quota increases.

Rep. Albert P. Morano (R Conn.) said Cuba's share of the market should not be reduced because the Cubans "are the greatest per capita customers of this country". Merwin Bohan, former State Department Latin American expert, said to reduce Cuba's sugar quota at that time would be unfair.

Haitian American Association, Inc., appealed for a bigger share of the domestic market.

June 28 -- Laurence Crosby, spokesman for U.S. interests with sugar mills in Cuba, opposed any retroactive changes in sugar legislation.

Cocoa and chocolate manufacturers and exporters from New England and Iowa filed statements opposing any change in quotas.

Delegate Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington (R Hawaii) supported an increase in sugar marketing quotas for domestic producers. When "pressing needs" of the domestic producers were met, she said "Hawaii, itself, needs and expects to share pro rata with its sister areas in the increase in the sugar market".

June 29 -- The Dominican Republic presented its plea "to end the inequitable and unfair treatment its sugar industry has received in the United States"

July 6 -- Under Secretary of Agriculture Morse said a change in sugar quotas to eliminate some of the preferential treatment given Cuban sugar would not mean that the U.S. was "running out" on any understanding with Cuba.

July 7 -- Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.) and Edwin E. Willis (D La.), who had introduced bills (HR 5402, 5414) to give domestic sugar producers a greater share of the market, explained their measures.

July 14 -- Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson proposed that the government buy 100,000 tons of United States sugar to be distributed abroad under U.S. aid programs. It would come largely from areas which currently had large surpluses and faced severe acreage restrictions for 1956 crops.

He endorsed the proposals of HR 7030 (introduced by Chairman Cooley June 27) and said the measure constituted a reasonable balance of the conflicting objectives of the various domestic and foreign areas supplying the sugar market.

July 15 -- Rep. Timothy P. Sheehan (R Ill.) requested the Committee to take no action in 1955 on sugar legislation. He urged an "exhaustive study" of the entire program before new legislation was recommended. He said new legislation should make certain that consumers as well as producers get price benefits from increased grower efficiency.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee July 22 reported an amended bill (HR 7030 -- H Rept 1348) to create a new formula for sugar marketing quotas.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, HR 7030 would:

Extend the Sugar Act to 1960.

Continue existing fixed and variable quotas to meet the U.S. annual need, estimated at 8,350,000 tons for 1956.

Provide that any increase in U.S. consumption above the estimate for 1956 would be supplied 50 percent by domestic producers, 48 percent by Cuba, 2 percent by other foreign sources.

Provide that increases in U.S. consumption over the annual estimates for 1957-60 would be supplied 50 percent by domestic producers, with Cuba to supply the balance after foreign suppliers were allocated 45,000 tons each.

Make the new quotas effective from Jan. 1, 1956, through Dec. 31, 1960.

Provide for the purchase of 100,000 tons of domestic sugar by the Department of Agriculture in 1955 for free overseas distribution.

Provide for maintaining the price of sugar beets and sugar cane produced in the U.S. at 90 percent of parity.

Authorize quota suspensions for countries which discriminate against U.S. agricultural exports.

Floor Action

The House July 30 passed HR 7030 by a standing vote of 194-44, after agreeing to two floor amendments. The House defeated, by voice vote, an attempt by Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) to kill the bill by striking out the enacting clause, and rejected, by voice vote, a recommittal motion offered by Sid Simpson (R Ill.).

DEBATE -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- "I will admit this House will really be confused if they try to know all that is in this bill.... I think you are justified in accepting it upon faith because this sugar program has been in operation for 20 years...(and it) has operated so well...that the average housewife is not even aware... we have a sugar program.... It has operated well and under the program prices have been stabilized through the years...At the end of this year this sugar program will result in a net profit to the taxpayers...of more than $300 million".

Hays -- "When this total of direct and indirect subsidy to a selected group of American agriculture is tabulated, you will find that the American consumer is paying an approximate $400 million annually to subsidize a domestic sugar production that is now and always will be completely inadequate to meet domestic needs. Yet this bill...would further increase this hidden tax upon the American taxpayer by approximately $16 million annually in the course of the life of this bill".

FARMERS PENALIZED

William S. Hill (R Colo.) -- "We are not producing sugar enough to meet our needs. We are importing half of every pound of sugar we use. We are penalizing our farmers for no good reason, forcing them out of sugar production into the growing of other crops already in surplus supply... The bill before us represents give and take on all sides. We have all had to compromise in order that some solution, if not ideal, could be found and action taken this year".

William A. Dawson (R Utah) -- "This legislation would not cut back Cuba sugar production. It would just give the United States producer the right to share in the increased market our own nation's expanding population creates".

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) -- Delete section aimed at the Philippine Islands which would provide for quota suspensions for those countries which discriminated against U.S. agricultural imports. Voice.

Henry Aldous Dixon (R Utah) -- Delete section which would maintain the price of domestic sugar beets and cane at 90 percent of parity. Standing, 123-37.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARING -- Aug. 1 in executive session. Testimony was received from Sen. Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.), Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse, and Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Holland.

ACTION -- Aug. 1 approved amendments to the House bill and ordered them reported in a revised Senate bill (S 1635). However, the bill was not actually reported to the Senate before Congress adjourned Aug. 2.

PROVISIONS -- The Committee version would:

Provide that any increase in U.S. consumption above 8,300,000 tons be supplied 55 percent by domestic producers, 25.6 percent by Cuba, and 19.4 percent by full-duty countries on the basis of their sales of sugar in the U.S. market during the past four years.

Extend the revised Sugar Act to 1962, instead of 1960.

Floor Action

On the Senate floor Aug. 1, J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) objected to the second reading of the House-passed bill, thereby delaying its referral to the Senate Committee.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) Aug. 1 objected to the Senate considering the bill. He said no public hearings had been held by the Finance Committee and that no copies had been printed of House hearings.

On Aug. 2 Fulbright blocked consideration of a motion, offered by Russell B. Long (D La.), to consider HR 7030 by suspending the rules requiring referral of a House bill to a Senate committee. The motion lapsed at the conclusion of morning business with Fulbright holding the floor, and Long did not renew the motion.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

Instead, the Senate Aug. 2 adopted, by voice vote, a resolution (S Res 147) requesting the Commodity Credit Corporation "so far as practicable" to purchase 100,000 tons of domestic sugar in 1955 for distribution outside the continental limits of the United States.

The resolution was sponsored by Long, Ellender, Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), George Smathers (D Fla.) and Henry C. Dworshak (R Idaho).

DEBATE -- Aug. 2 -- Fulbright -- Existing legislation would not expire until 1956 so there was "no real occasion" for extending it at present. The measure was far too controversial to be brought up on the last day of the session, and no one who opposed the bill had been permitted to appear before the Senate Committee. "I see no excuse...to build up an artificial, uneconomic body, the (U.S.) sugar industry, and thereby destroy the rice industry. I cite the rice industry only as an example, although it is the main reason why I am here."

Ellender -- The reason Cuba is not buying as much rice today as she bought four or five years ago is that Cuba has increased her own rice production. No prolonged hearings on the bill were needed because "the entire industry -- all the producers of beet and cane sugar, as well as the refiners--had no objection to the bill".

Holland -- "The obdurate and obstinate attitude of the Senator from Arkansas (Fulbright) will probably require sugar producers to put many thousands of additional dollars into the construction of warehouses for which they will have no earthly use as soon as this temporary problem is out of the way...."

Group Stands

The argument on sugar legislation centered on quota levels. Domestic beet and cane producers sought a boost of 188,000 tons in their market quotas. The domestic bloc also wanted the right to supply 55 percent of any excess demand when U.S. consumption topped the estimated requirement.

Cuban growers, who currently supplied most of the foreign sugar the U.S. imported, declared the domestic bloc's proposal would cut unfairly into their quota. Other foreign suppliers sought to increase their quotas.

LAWYER-LOBBYISTS HIRED

The Cuban interests were represented in the United States by the U.S. Cuban Sugar Council and a Washington law firm, Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly and Ball, and its New York affiliate. (See pp. 696,702.) The law firm engaged 23 lawyers in key manufacturing centers who contacted manufacturers doing Cuban business and urged them to protect their market by asking their Congressmen to make no change in the 1948 sugar formula.

Domestic growers, led by the U.S. Beet Sugar Association (see p. 700) and the American Sugar Cane League of the U.S.A., charged that "many Americans have been confused about the true nature of our proposals by a misleading, costly propaganda campaign conducted by certain Cuban sugar interests".

But the Cubans maintained that domestic sugar production was "uneconomic". They said a boost in the domestic quotas and subsidies would lead to higher prices to U.S. consumers and a heavier load on U.S. taxpayers.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES ACTIVE

Some foreign suppliers who felt they never had a fair share of the American market worked hard at their lobbying. Private spokesmen for Mexico, Peru, Haiti, and the Dominican Republic were active. Mexico was represented by Chapman and Wolfsohn, a Washington law firm headed by Oscar L. Chapman, former Secretary of the Interior (1949-53).

Other registered lobbyists were Surrey, Karasik, Gould and Effron, a Washington law firm employed by a Dominican sugar group, and attorney Eugene O'Dunne, Jr. for a Peruvian concern. (See pp.701ff.)

Major sugar groups which sought to influence legislation on quotas were:

American Sugar Beet Industry Policy Committee
American Sugar Cane League of the U.S.A.
Association of Sugar Producers of Puerto Rico
Cuban Sugar Growers Association
Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association
National Cuban Sugar Mills Owners Association
Philippine Sugar Association
United States Beet Sugar Association
United States Cane Sugar Refiners' Association
United States Cuban Sugar Council.

All of these groups either had registered under the Lobbying Act or had legislative representatives who had filed under the law. (See Lobby Registrations, pp. 682ff.)

SUGAR USERS PROTEST

The American Bakers Association wired Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) July 31 that industrial users and consumer interests would be "seriously damaged" by the bill as passed by the House and requested a chance to testify before the Senate Committee.

Domestic chocolate and cocoa manufacturers, as well as exporters to Cuba, opposed changes in existing quotas.

COTTON ACREAGE

HR 3952 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 58) Feb. 16, 1955.

- Passed by the House Feb. 23 by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 47), amended, March 8.
- Defeated by the Senate March 24, on a 39-51 roll-call vote. (See p. 120.)

Congressional efforts to relieve what were called "severe hardships" among cotton farmers were thwarted when the Senate, after three days of debate, rejected a House-passed bill to increase the 1955 cotton acreage allotment of 18 million. The bill was defeated, following amendment on the Senate floor, by a coalition of Senators, representing both cotton and non-cotton states, who opposed the modified version for varying reasons.

The House-passed bill would have provided a straight, three percent acreage increase for each cotton-growing state. The Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee proposed a smaller increase, most of which would go to farms with cotton allotments of less than four acres. Each state's increase would therefore be in ratio to the number of such farms.

Senators from Western cotton states, joined by some Southerners, said the Committee's amendments favored small-farm states in which county committees had failed to allocate sufficient acreage to small farms, and discriminated against the larger farms in their areas where the county committees had already provided for small growers. They were successful in getting the bill amended on the floor to provide a straight 1.5 percent acreage increase for each cotton state, following the pattern of the House version. Senators from wheat-growing states then offered an amendment to give wheat farmers a similar acreage increase.

Following adoption of the wheat amendment, the bill was rejected on a 39-51 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 120.) Among the 51 Senators who voted against the bill were some Southerners who wanted the increase limited to small-farm "hardship" cases, Northern and Western Senators who had voted for the straight percentage increase amendment for cotton but against the wheat increase provision, and Senators who were opposed to any acreage increase.

Under the terms of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 and subsequent amendments, the Secretary of Agriculture was required to proclaim marketing quotas and set a national acreage allotment on the next year's cotton crop if the current supply was above normal. The law also provided for a minimum national quota of ten million bales and directed the Secretary to conduct a referendum among cotton growers to determine whether they favored marketing quotas. (Mandatory 90 percent of parity support was conditioned on farmers' acceptance of quotas.)

In the face of mounting cotton surpluses, reductions in acreage had been ordered by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson for the 1954 and 1955 crops. To lessen the drop from the 27 million acres planted in 1953, however, Congress passed a law (PL 290, 83rd Congress) raising acreage on the 1954 crop to 21 million. Late in 1954 Benson set the 1955 allotment at 18,113,208 million -- the lowest figure permitted by law. Returns from a referendum held Dec. 14, 1954 showed 92 percent of the cotton growers favoring marketing quotas on the 1955 crop.

Following Benson's proclamation, Congressmen began to talk of increasing the acreage allowed for the 1955 crop. Sens. James O. Eastland (D Miss.) and Lister Hill (D Ala.) announced they would introduce legislation in the 84th Congress to increase the acreage quota to 19.5 million acres.

In January, 1955 Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D La.) of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee and Secretary Benson announced their opposition to increased 1955 cotton acreage allotments. Ellender Jan. 29 said he did not believe legislation to increase allotments "is in the best interests of our farmers." However, he promised full hearing on the acreage question before his Committee.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture Subcommittee on Cotton.

HEARINGS -- Held Jan. 27, Feb. 9 and 11.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 27 -- A representative of the National Farmers Union, Members of Congress, and officials of Texas farm organizations presented their views on proposed legislation to increase the 1955 cotton acreage allotment.

Feb. 9 -- Mrs. W. C. Martin, a landowner from Harrison County, Texas, said many cotton growers in her area were leaving the farms and drawing unemployment compensation in the cities as a result of reductions in cotton acreage.

Feb. 11 -- Rep. Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) said an increase in 1955 cotton acreage allotments was a matter of "economic life or death for many farmers of our nation." He said many farmers were "flat broke" as a result of a drought, and had to have a cash crop in 1955 or "go under."

ACTION -- The full Committee Feb. 16 favorably reported a bill (HR 3952 -- H Rept 58) to amend the cotton marketing quota provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, HR 3952 would:

Grant a three percent increase in the acreage allotment of each cotton state, thereby adding 543,234 acres to make the new total national acreage 18,656,442.

Require states to use the additional acreage, "so far as possible",

1. to provide each farm with a minimum of five acres or the highest planted cotton acreage in 1952, 1953, or 1954, whichever was smaller.

2. to allocate any acreage in excess of the small farm increases to counties for apportionment to farms with 1955 allotments of less than 60 percent of the 1954 acreage.

3. to place any excess acreage not distributed under the first two methods, in the county reserve to be distributed by the county committee.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 23 passed HR 3952 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate. Attempts to amend the bill to provide more aid for five-acre or smaller farms, to raise the increase to six percent, and to set a 19.5 million allotment for 1955 and 1956, were rejected. A technical committee amendment was adopted.

DEBATE -- Members generally felt the bill did not go far enough in providing relief to cotton farmers but was the only measure which had a chance of being passed by the Senate and signed by the President. Several Representatives said the cotton surplus was the result of the failure of the current and previous Administrations to sell U.S. cottton in world markets on a competitive-bid basis.

Frank E. Smith (D Miss.) -- "This bill entirely fails" to take care of the small farmer.

W. R. Poage (D Texas) -- The bill "will give relief to small farmers. If it did not...we would not be here with it."

John Bell Williams (D Miss.) -- "There is little resemblance between cotton farmers of the South and the Far West...The bill...is far from adequate to meet the needs of the (southeastern) cotton-growing section...Even so, we accept the fact that half a loaf is better than none."

Poage -- There is "absolutely no chance of getting a bill signed which gives all of the acreage to states east of the Mississippi and none to California...,Arizona,...and New Mexico. I do not have to call the names of the (Senate) Members...who would never allow such a bill to pass...The Western states have an absolute veto on this kind of legislation."

Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) -- "It appears to me that this is pretty much of a war...in the southern states...Go argue with your own state and county committees as to why they did not make the proper allocations of acreage...(to) the small cotton farmers..."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Raise the acreage allotment by 6 percent instead of 3 percent. Voice vote.

Victor Wickersham (D Okla.) -- Raise the acreage allotment to 19.5 million acres for 1955 and 1956. Voice.

Frank E. Smith (D Miss.) -- Add a minimum of five acres or the highest planted average to state cotton allotments for farmers with five or less acres only. Standing, 42-102.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- March 5 and 7 on HR 3952 and a similar Senate draft.

TESTIMONY -- March 5 -- James A. McConnell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, opposed any increase at that time, but said the Department might reappraise its position if Congress decided an increase was necessary to relieve farmers' hardships.

March 7 -- Congressmen who testified suggested compromises between the proposed Senate acreage figure and that passed by the House.

ACTION -- The Committee March 8 reported HR 3952 (S Rept 47) with amendments to cut the increase almost 300,000 acres below that in the House bill and apportion most of it to farms with cotton allotments of less than four acres. A table in the Committee report showed that each state's share in the additional small-farm acreage would vary from a high of 38,580.2 acres for North Carolina to a low of zero for California and Nevada.

PROVISIONS -- As reported to the Senate, HR 3952 would:

Increase total acreage allotted to cotton by 258,625.3 acres.

Provide that each state's share of 168,059.3 of the additional acreage would be the amount necessary to increase each farm allotment to four acres or 75 percent of the highest acreage planted in 1952, 1953 or 1954, whichever was smaller.

Provide that the remaining 90,566 additional acres be apportioned to increase each state's current cotton allotment by one-half percent.

COMPROMISE OFFERED

On March 23, after the bill had been debated for two days on the Senate floor, the Committee agreed, by a 9-1 vote, to offer an additional amendment that would:

Strike out the provision that would have increased each state's cotton allotment by one-half percent; raise the allotment of Illinois and Nevada to 3,500 acres; allow farmers in drought or disaster areas to transfer allotments from one farm to another.

Floor Action

The Senate March 24 defeated, by a roll-call vote of 39-51, a revised version of HR 3952. (For voting, see chart, p. 120.)

Before the final vote, the Senate adopted, on a 51-39 roll-call vote, an amendment striking out the "small-farm" provisions of the committee bill and substituting a flat 1.5 percent acreage increase for each cotton state. In addition, an amendment to increase the 1955 wheat acreage allotment by 1.5 percent was adopted by a 47-43 roll call.

DEBATE -- Senators from Southeastern states generally supported the Committee recommendations. They contended the bill was aimed at aiding impoverished farmers who had four acres or less planted in cotton.

Southwestern Senators replied that their states were being discriminated against because the increases would have little effect in states where most farms were more than 10 acres.

Midwestern Senators included the wheat allotment amendment because, they said, wheat farmers would be discriminated against by the increase in cotton acreage.

Senators from the Western cotton states, joined by some Southerners, said the county committees in some of the Southeastern states had failed to provide for the small farms in making the original allotments.

March 22 -- John Stennis (D Miss.), sponsor of the amendment for a percentage increase -- I "strongly believe there is a chance for something to be worked out by having further conferences on this matter."

Allen J. Ellender (D La.) -- "Do the Senators wish to sidetrack the Committee's version of the bill?"

Stennis -- "No attempt has been made to bypass the Committee (but) various areas of the cotton-growing belt are so diversely affected by even the smallest... amendment. So all Senators affected can only attempt to get together and try to work out a satisfactory solution."

LOG-ROLLING CHARGED

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "When the Committee reported the bill, I felt it had done a very fine job...I dislike to see it become, on the floor of the Senate, a question of log-rolling between states..."

J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "The Committee's recommendation is inadequate and, in comparison with the House version...is unfair...The states having a large percentage of farms under four acres would receive a much larger proportion of the additional acreage than would the states having fewer small farms."

March 23 -- Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.) -- The Committee amendment "would penalize the cotton producers in Missouri and would do so in order to provide a premium to cotton producers in some of the other states which have made no effort to take care of their small cotton farmers..."

March 24 -- Ellender -- "It is...true that in several states some of the committees did not set aside even one acre in order to take care of small farmers. But let us not blame the small farmers for that;...they should not be punished..."

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "...relief is just as important to a man who is starving on a 20-acre piece of cotton as to a man who is starving on a 3½ acre piece ..."

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- "If we are going to give help to the larger cotton farmers, I do not see how we can disapprove of giving a little help to relieve the real hardship cases among wheat farmers."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- Passage of the bill would permit states to avoid "allocating the acreage as intended by the Congress."

Ellender -- "...the bill should be limited to cotton acreage allotments as they affect small farmers...Should the amendment (increasing wheat acreage) prevail, it is my intention to vote against the bill on final passage."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Increase each state's cotton acreage allotment by 1.5 percent (adding 271,000 acres to the national allotment); require states to use the additional acreage to increase each farm allotment to four acres or 75 percent of the highest amount planted to cotton in 1952, 1953, or 1954, whichever is smaller; place any acreage remaining, after distribution by above method, in state reserve to be used by the state committee. Roll call, 51-39.

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Increase cotton allotments by 3,500 acres for Illinois and Nevada, provide a minimum 10-acre allotment for Arizona farms, and increase allotments to New Mexico farm hardship cases selected by county committees. Voice.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Increase the 1955 wheat acreage allotment by 1.5 percent to give growers a minimum of 30 acres or 75 percent of the highest amount planted in 1952, 1953, or 1954, whichever is smaller Roll call, 47-43.

Cotton Study

After Senate defeat of HR 3952, attempts to raise the 1955 cotton acreage allotment virtually were abandoned. Sen. Stennis said March 30 that even if a plan could be worked out, it probably would be too late since cotton planting had started.

COMMITTEE -- Senate Agriculture and Forestry Subcommittee on Disposal of Agricultural Surpluses (Sens. Eastland, Chairman, Holland, Schoeppel, Scott, Young).

ACTION -- April 25 reported to the full Committee on hearings into "all phases of the cotton question."

The Subcommittee said "the present farm program in its lack of sound cotton policies" was responsible for "destruction of the American cotton-producing industry." The group said it was "fundamental" that acreage reduction was no solution to United States problems and in time would "only aggravate" them.

The Subcommittee recommended, as a long-range program, that the government either:

Reduce price supports to lower the consumer price of American cotton.

Continue the 90 percent price support, but provide an export subsidy to enable American-grown cotton to compete with foreign cotton.

Develop a plan combining aspects of both programs.

The group also urged liquidation of Commodity Credit Corporation stocks of cotton by competitive means as rapidly as possible.

Sen. W. Kerr Scott (D N.C.) dissented from much of the report. He said farmers "must have rigid price supports and rigid crop controls if we are to have a sound farm economy."

BURLEY TOBACCO

S 1457 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 111) March 16, 1955.

HR 4951 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 238) March 18.

- Passed by voice vote of the House March 24. (For roll-call vote, see p. 142.)
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate March 30.

P. L. 21 -- Signed into law March 31.

Congress in 1955 authorized a second reduction in quotas on the 1955 burley tobacco crop and a permanent new minimum acreage allotment. Despite protests from some Congressmen that the new minimum would injure small growers, burley tobacco growers almost unanimously accepted the reduced acreage in an April 28 referendum.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 4951:

Directed the Secretary of Agriculture to redetermine the 1955 burley tobacco marketing quota and conduct a referendum to determine whether producers would accept the new quota.

Limited to one-tenth of an acre the 1955 reduction in existing allotments that were seven-tenths or six-tenths of an acre.

Established a permanent minimum acreage allotment for burley tobacco, to be based on either the previous year's allotment, five-tenths of an acre, or 10 percent of the cropland, whichever was smallest.

Declared that acreage of any tobacco harvested in excess of the farm allotment would not be considered in making future allotments.

Provided that if a grower falsely reported his acreage of tobacco, the amount of the misstatement would be deducted from his allotment for the next year.

Increased to 75 percent of the previous season's average price, the penalty for misstatement.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Burley Tobacco." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, p. 82.)

Since 1952, when the minimum acreage for burley tobacco was cut from one acre to seven-tenths, a large surplus had been produced under 90 percent of parity support and quotas.

On Nov. 26, 1954 the Agriculture Department announced a 10 percent cut below the 1954 quota, setting 478 million pounds for the 1955 crop. Later, when the 1954 crop was marketed, however, it exceeded estimates by nearly 100 million pounds, bringing supplies far above normal.

House

COMMITTEE -- House and Senate Agriculture Subcommittees on Tobacco, meeting jointly.

HEARINGS -- March 3, 10, 14.

TESTIMONY -- March 3 -- Department of Agriculture officials recommended changes in tobacco legislation which would:

Permit re-determination of the 1955 national marketing quota on burley tobacco, and state and farm acreage allotments.

Decrease the minimum burley allotment.

Increase penalty rates for excess tobacco marketing.

Reduce acreage allotment of any person filing a false report on farm-grown tobacco.

Provide that any excess tobacco harvested in one year would not be considered in establishing the acreage allotment for succeeding years.

Provide that growers may vote only on the question of quotas for three years, not one year.

March 10 -- Representatives of burley producers' groups testified generally in support of the Department's recommendations.

March 14 -- Members of Congress were witnesses.

ACTION -- The full House Committee reported HR 4951 (H Rept 238) March 18. It included all but the last of the Department's recommendations.

Floor Action

HR 4951, with committee amendments, was passed by voice vote of the House March 24 after a recommittal motion, offered by Clarence E. Kilburn (R N.Y.), was rejected by voice vote.

The bill had been brought to the floor March 21 on a motion to suspend the rules -- a parliamentary move that prohibits any amendments to a bill. But the House, on a 260-152 roll-call vote, failed to provide the two-thirds majority necessary to pass a bill under suspension of the rules. (For voting, see chart, p. 142.)

On March 24 the House adopted by voice vote an open rule (H Res 189) permitting amendments to the bill. Attempts to prohibit cuts in the minimum acreage were defeated.

DEBATE -- March 24 -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Because of the "enormous supply of burley tobacco... if we are to save this program" acreage must be cut. "About 64 percent of the producers...have less than seven-tenths of an acre."

Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) -- Many tobacco farmers "have no other income except from their tobacco crop.... I feel that it is unjust for a small grower to take the cut provided in this bill."

John C. Watts (D Ky.) -- "The big growers -- if you want to call them big; most of them fall under 2½ acres -- have already suffered a 70 percent cut and are faced with another 50 percent cut. It seems only fair" for the small grower, who had not been cut, to give up one-tenth of an acre.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

M. G. Burnside (D W. Va.) -- No burley tobacco farm acreage allotment of seven-tenths of an acre or less should be reduced. Standing vote, 30-54.

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- Substitute six-tenths of an acre for the minimum of five-tenths set in the bill. Standing, 44-71.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- March 16 reported a bill (S 1457 -- S Rept 111) that contained the burley tobacco provisions of the House bill but did not provide penalties for misstatements.

Floor Action

The Senate March 30 passed HR 4951, unamended, by voice vote and sent it to the President. Amendments to raise the minimum acreage allotment set in the bill were defeated by standing votes.

DEBATE -- Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- "A normal quantity of tobacco in storage is approximately 2½ years' supply. At present more than 3½ years' supplies are in storage. If there were not a pound of burley tobacco raised during the next year, it would bring burley tobacco stock into approximately normal balance."

Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (D N.C.) -- "The surplus we now have on hand is only slightly above the amount...necessary for the proper aging of burley tobacco.... If we keep cutting the minimum allotment...the small burley tobacco farmer will eventually have no allotment of any practical value."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.), Stuart Symington (D Mo.) -- Tobacco farmers in their states favored the bill.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Ervin -- Retain seven-tenths of an acre as the minimum allotment for burley tobacco growers. Standing.

Ervin -- Make six-tenths of an acre the minimum allotment. Standing.

REFERENDUM HELD

President Eisenhower signed the bill into law (PL 21) March 31. On April 8 the Agriculture Department set the new quota for the 1955 crop at 334 million pounds -- an average 20 percent cut in the 1954 allotment. Estimated acreage for planting was 320,000 acres.

Some 333,000 burley tobacco growers cast a 96 percent favorable vote on the new quota in a referendum conducted April 28. To continue to receive 90 percent of parity support, two-thirds of those voting had to approve the proposed quota. Growers in nine states participated, with Kentucky and Tennessee providing over 75 percent of the vote.

FARM CREDIT

HR 5168 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 863) June 20, 1955.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House July 12.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1201) July 28.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 30. (For roll-call vote, see p. 135.)
- House agreed, by voice vote, to Senate amendments Aug. 1.

P.L. 347 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

The measure provided for the retirement of government capital in cooperative banks operating under supervision of the Farm Credit Administration and for increased borrower participation in management and control. It was drafted to conform to provisions of the Farm Credit Act of 1953 (PL 202, 83rd Congress) to permit eventual farm ownership of all phases of the agricultural credit program.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the major sections of the Farm Credit Act of 1955:

Reorganized the 13 banks for cooperatives so that borrowing cooperatives would make capital contributions to the system so long as they used its credit service. Each year final net savings would be distributed to borrowers as capital stock which would remain in the system until all of the government's stock (currently 88 percent) had been retired. At the end of each fiscal year each bank would determine the amount of government stock to be retired. Government interest in the surplus and reserves of the banks would be retained only so long as there was government ownership of stock.

Provided that the seven-man Board of Directors of the Central Bank for Cooperatives would consist of four members appointed by the governor of the Farm Credit Administration with consent of the Farm Credit Board, and three elected by regional banks and associations. When total assets of the Central Bank not held by the government reached 66 2/3 percent, additional directors could be elected until the total reached six, with only one oppointed.

Abolished the guaranty fund of the production credit associations and directed that earnings of an association in excess of its operating expenses be applied to restoration of capital impairments and establishment of surplus accounts.

Altered provisions relating to the size of loans requiring prior approval by the production credit corporation or the corporation and the FCA.

Increased the maximum land-bank loan limit from $100,000 to $200,000, and required FCA approval for any loan over $100,000.

Enabled land-banks to extend their loan service to cover part-time farm properties.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Farm Credit Board." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 114ff.)

The Farm Credit Act of 1953 reorganized the Farm Credit Administration as an agency divorced from the Agriculture Department, and put it under control of a 13-member board. The board was directed, within one year, to recommend to Congress ways of increasing farmer ownership so government capital could be retired from the credit system.

The Board's report was submitted to Congress on Dec. 8, 1954 (S Doc 7, 84th Cong.), and most of its recommendations were embodied in the 1955 legislation.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

HEARINGS -- May 19, 24, 25 on a bill (HR 5168) to retire certain government funds controlled by the Farm Credit Administration and to increase borrower participation.

TESTIMONY -- May 19, 24 -- Farmers and bankers from California, Texas, and Arkansas favored the legislation. Opposition came from residents of various sections of Texas and the Mandan (N. D.) Production Credit Association.

May 25 -- Representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation and National Grange endorsed the bill. Amendments were suggested by spokesmen for the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, and the National Milk Producers Federation. The measure was opposed by the Nevada Livestock Production Credit Association.

ACTION -- The Committee June 20 reported the bill with amendments deleting proposed changes in the operation of production credit associations (H Rept 863).

Floor Action

The House July 12 passed HR 5168 by voice vote, with the Committee amendments. (See PROVISIONS, above.)

DEBATE -- W. R. Poage (D Texas) -- "With the passage of this bill, we will have gone two-thirds of the way toward eliminating government capital" from the farm credit system, since government stock in the land banks already has been retired. There was "wide diversity of opinion" at the hearings "as to whether the production credit corporations and the intermediate credit banks could not be consolidated into one institution.... We hope by next year it will be possible to provide a way of eliminating government capital in these production credit agencies."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- May 19, 20 on S 1286, which was similar to HR 5168.

TESTIMONY -- May 19 -- The measure was supported by R. B. Tootell, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Golden F. Fine, chairman of the Farm Credit Board, bank, cooperative, and farm groups.

May 20 -- Credit representatives from Texas and North Dakota urged delay in enacting the bill until "grass roots" farmers had a chance to be heard.

ACTION -- The Committee July 28 reported the House bill, amended (HR 5168 -- S Rept 1201).

Floor Action

The Senate July 30 passed HR 5168 by voice vote. A clarifying Committee amendment was agreed to by voice vote. The Senate rejected, by a roll-call vote of 9-80, an amendment by Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.)

concerning application of assets after the liquidation of any bank for cooperatives. (For voting, see chart, p. 135.)

DEBATE -- Williams -- HR 5168 "would authorize the sale of government property which is valued at $220 million for $150 million" in non-dividend-paying stock "payable pretty much at the option of the buyer over the next 10 or 15 years." Yet the government's $72 million share in the cooperative banks' surplus could, if the banks were liquidated, "be divided as windfalls.... The only question before the Senate is: Do we want to give away $72 million?...The only justification advanced (in Committee) was that Congress a few years ago gave a similar group an equal amount of money."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The government's purpose in providing interest-free money was to enable the cooperatives to "build themselves up...and get the government out of the banking business."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Williams -- Set up a schedule on the application of assets of any bank for cooperatives which is liquidated or dissolved so that a proportion equivalent to stock owned by the United States shall be returned to the U.S. Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. Roll-call, 9-80.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

The House Aug. 1 agreed, by voice vote, to Senate amendments to HR 5168. This action cleared the bill for the White House.

MEXICAN FARM LABOR

HR 3822 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 625) May 24, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 6.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1045) July 20.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 22.
- Conference report (H Rept 1449) agreed to by the Senate, July 27, and by the House, July 29, by voice votes.

P.L. 319 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

President Eisenhower, Jan. 17, 1955, in his Fiscal 1956 Budget Message, called for extending the Mexican Labor Act through fiscal 1957. It was due to expire Dec. 31, 1955.

A Senate-House conference accepted the House version of HR 3822 extending the act for 3½ years after the Senate voted an 18-month extension.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 3822:

Extended the program from Dec. 31, 1955, to June 30, 1959.

Required the Labor Department to consult employer and employee representatives in an area to determine if Mexican labor was needed and find the proper level of wages to be offered.

Protected an employer who could prove he furnished return-transportation funds to a discharged Mexican worker from being charged additionally if the worker failed to report to a reception center.

BACKGROUND -- "Mexican Farm Labor." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 95ff., Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 116ff.)

House

COMMITTEE -- House Agriculture Equipment, Supplies, and Manpower Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 16, 17, 21, 22.

TESTIMONY -- March 16 -- A Labor Department spokesman recommended the law be extended until June 30, 1960, while a Department of Agriculture representative favored a permanent program.

March 17 -- The Department of Justice favored extension, said its length was a legislative matter subject to Labor Department approval.

March 21 -- Ernesto Galarza of the National Agricultural Workers Union (AFL) opposed extension of the program for more than one year. Other AFL local and national spokesmen opposed the bill.

March 22 -- Nicholas Dragon of the CIO urged repeal of a provision which allowed U.S. farmers to hire Mexicans who cross the border, regardless of whether they have Mexican approval to leave the country. Milton Plumb of the CIO said many Texas farmers were paying Mexican laborers 30 cents an hour rather than the 50 cents specified in contracts.

ACTION -- The Committee May 24 reported (H Rept 625) HR 3822.

Floor Action

The House July 6 passed, by voice vote, HR 3822. A motion to recommit the bill, offered by John P. Saylor (R Pa.), was rejected on a 48-123 standing vote. All Committee amendments were agreed to, and four floor amendments were rejected.

DEBATE -- The principal controversy centered on efforts to give U.S. farm workers the same "fringe benefits" guaranteed Mexican workers under the program.

E.C. Gathings (D Ark.) -- All interested farm organizations and government agencies approved extension of the Act while labor groups, though raising objections, agreed there was some need to import Mexicans for "stoop labor." The Committee approved the bill by a 17-4 vote, with six members voting "present."

William S. Hill (R Colo.) -- The Committee's purpose was not to "bring cheap labor" into the U.S. but to "save or harvest crops."

Victor L. Anfuso (D N.Y.) -- The bill's failure "to offer first to our own domestic workers identical terms and conditions of work" guaranteed Mexicans "is the sole remaining major objection which prevents the organized labor movement of this country from supporting this law.... Mexican workers are given housing facilities, hospitalization, minimum wage...and other benefits which domestic workers do not have."

Karl C. King (R Pa.) -- "As a farm employer of foreign labor...I do not know of any employer who denies to native labor any of the benefits paid to foreign labor." Adoption of Anfuso's amendment would be "useless" and would "impose added difficulties and expense" in administering the program.

John M. Robsion, Jr. (R Ky.) -- Members opposing the amendment should explain "why an American is not entitled to the same consideration as a Mexican."

W. R. Poage (D Texas) -- "The people who would be hurt most by this (Anfuso) amendment would be the American farm workers.... It is to the self-interest of the employer to use American labor if it is available....

He gets better work, more work, for less money when he can get American workers.... If you make this American labor cost him more" than Mexican, Americans will lose their "economic protection." Also, the amendment "would destroy every vestige of the rights of states in regard to local contracts."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Anfuso -- Require employers to offer U.S. workers comparable wages and conditions of work as are offered Mexicans. Standing, 50-89.

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) -- Slightly revised version of Anfuso amendment. Standing, 52-97.

Byron G. Rogers (D Colo.) -- Authorize the Secretary of Agriculture, after consultation with the Interstate Commerice Commission, to set regulations for the transportation safety of workers; provide penalties for violation of the regulations. Standing, 45-76.

DeWitt S. Hyde (R Md.) -- Authorize the Attorney General to deport, or return to a reception center for reassignment, a Mexican doing agricultural work for a lower wage than specified in his contract. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- July 20 reported (S Rept 1045) HR 3822 with an amendment limiting extension of the Act to June 30, 1957, instead of June 30, 1959.

Floor Action

The Senate July 22, by voice vote, passed HR 3822, with the Committee amendment, without debate.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 27 agreed (H Rept 1449) to the House version of HR 3822 extending the Act for 3½ years.

ACTION -- The Senate July 27 and the House July 29 agreed to H Rept 1449 by voice votes, thus clearing HR 3822 for the White House.

CCC LOANS

S 2604 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1200) July 28, 1955.
• Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 29.
HR 7541 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 1559) July 28.
S 2604 -- Passed by voice vote of the House Aug. 1.
P.L. 344 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

The bill authorized the use of an additional $2 billion for the farm crop price support program.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, S 2604 raised from $10 billion to $12 billion the limit on the borrowing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

BACKGROUND -- The CCC's borrowing authority had been raised twice in 1954 by Congress -- first from $6.75 to $8.5 billion, and again from $8.5 to $10 billion. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 130, 131.)

REA FORMULA

S 153 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 209) April 20, 1955.
HR 5376 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 547) May 9.
S 153 -- Passed by the Senate, amended, May 19 by voice vote.
• Passed by the House June 6 by voice vote.
P.L. 70 -- Signed into law June 15.

With an estimated 92 percent of U.S. farms electrified in 1955, Congress in June modernized the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 by passing a bill liberalizing the "rigid limitations" in the Act's formula for allotting funds on the basis of the number of unelectrified farms.

Although the Department of Agriculture, farm organizations, and many rural cooperatives wanted the formula abolished, the new law retained a modified formula. The revised formula doubled the percentage of annual REA funds which could be loaned without regard to the number of unelectrified farms within a state, and increased the percentage of funds that could be used in any one state.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 153:

Required that 25 percent instead of 50 percent of annual funds be allotted the states in proportion to the number of each state's unelectrified farms to the national total of such farms.

Permitted the remaining 75 percent of annual funds, plus any unloaned or unobligated balance from previous years and any part of the 25-percent formula funds not obligated during the first six months of a fiscal year, to be used for loans in any state without regard to the number of unelectrified farms.

Specified that not more than 25 percent (instead of 10 percent) of REA funds loaned outside the unelectrified-farms formula could be used in any one state or in all the territories.

Ordered that the annual REA count of unelectrified farms be continued.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Appropriations, Agriculture." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 132.)

In 1936, when the Rural Electrification Act was enacted, an estimated 90 percent of the nation's farms were not receiving central station electricity. In order to insure funds would be distributed where needed, the Act required that 50 percent of the annual funds made available for electrification loans be allotted according to the proportion of each state's unelectrified farms to the U.S. total of such farms. Not more than 10 percent of the remaining 50 percent, and of any funds carried over from previous years, could be used in any one state.

As more and more U.S. farms became electrified, emphasis shifted from developing new electrification systems to expanding existing systems. A revision of the REA-fund formula then became apparent. The fiscal 1952 budget recommended elimination of the formula, the fiscal 1954 budget proposed modifications. In 1953, amendments to the fiscal 1954 Agriculture Appropriations which would have carried out the proposed modifications were ruled out of order on the floor of the House and Senate. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 132.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry Special Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 23 on S 153.

TESTIMONY -- Officials of the Rural Electrification Administration and representatives of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association and the American Farm Bureau Federation supported S 153.

ACTION -- The full Committee reported S 153 (S Rept 209) April 20. The report said the REA fund formula was obsolete because of the "large percentage of farms now electrified and the demands for further service for electrification systems already in operation."

As reported, S 153 would have:

Repealed provisions of the Rural Electrification Act requiring that 50 percent of the annual sum available to REA be allotted among the states on the basis of the number of unelectrified farms and that not more than 10 percent of the remainder be allotted to any one state.

Continued the annual REA survey of the number of unelectrified farms in the U.S. (The Department of Agriculture wanted the survey discontinued as being "burdensome," but the Committee said it would provide "valuable information" to Congress and REA.)

Floor Action

The Senate May 19 passed S 153 by voice vote after adopting an amendment which substituted a liberalized fund-allocation formula for the Committee bill repealing the formula.

DEBATE -- May 17 -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), author of the amendment to continue a modified formula -- "The purpose of the (amendment) was to protect the states which as yet have not been able to catch up with the full development of rural electrification" and to limit "any one state to not more than 25 percent of the total appropriation."

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- "We would be going backward...to abandon the entire formula.... The amendment is more acceptable (than the Committee bill) in that it retains at least a fragment of the formula."

May 19 -- Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- "I introduced S 153 because it was recognized there was no need for earmarking funds...If there is a fear...that certain communities may be placed in jeopardy because of lack of funds, and if that fear is allayed by the adoption of the amendment, I have no objection" to it.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Humphrey -- In the nature of a substitute to continue a modified state allocation formula. Voice.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture Conservation and Credit Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 14 on HR 5376 and other bills to repeal the REA fund-allocation formula.

TESTIMONY -- REA Deputy Administrator Fred M. Strong said the formula had long ceased to be useful.

Support for HR 5376 also came from spokesmen for the National Rural Cooperative Association, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers Union, and the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. A statement supporting the bill came from the National Grange.

ACTION -- The full Committee reported HR 5376 (H Rept 547) May 9. In recommending elimination of the formula, the report said the greatest need for REA loans was for "heavying up" rural electric systems in areas where most of the farms already were receiving electric service.

Floor Action

The House June 6 passed, by voice vote, and sent to the President the Senate bill (S 153) providing a modified state allocation formula for REA loans. The House tabled HR 5376.

DEBATE -- Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) -- "In my judgment, no agency of the federal government has contributed more to a higher standard of living for rural people than the Rural Electrification Administration...It has been free from scandal. Its repayment record for borrowed federal money is unequaled. It has been reasonably free of politics. I feel it would be a mistake to repeal (the) formula...I have agreed to go along," with the Senate bill.

Lester R. Johnson (D Wis.) -- "The proposed revision will afford greater flexibility in the administration of the electrification loan program than is possible under the existing state allotment formula."

FOOD FOR NEEDY

HR 2851 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 583) May 11, 1955.

- Passed by the House by a roll-call vote of 344-1, with amendments, May 25. (See p. 150.)

S 661 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1049), July 20.

HR 2851 -- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, July 22 after text of S 661 was substituted.

- Conference report (H Rept 1450) agreed to by the Senate, July 27, and by the House, July 29 on voice votes.

P. L. 311 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

HR 2851, as passed by the House, was designed to furnish flour and meal from government surplus grain stocks to persons in disaster areas or areas suffering from heavy unemployment.

The Senate version -- accepted in conference -- made the food available to persons "in need" and assigned initial distribution to the Agriculture Department. The House version would have made the Health, Education, and Welfare Department responsible for distribution.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 2851:

Made surplus cornmeal and wheat flour available to needy persons in the United States (as certified by local agencies).

Provided for distribution by the Agriculture Department to state agencies at the request of the state governor.

Limited the amount distributed to $15 million in any fiscal year.

Made the program effective from Aug. 9, 1955, through June 30, 1957.

Background

The Farm Surplus Disposal Act of 1954 (P L 480) authorized distribution abroad during a three-year period of $1 billion worth of surplus farm commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 120ff.)

The law amended the Agriculture Act of 1949 to authorize the CCC to make surplus commodities available to any area in the U.S. declared by the President to be in "acute distress", if there was no interference with "normal marketing." The CCC also was authorized, "in order to prevent waste," to make perishable farm surpluses available to state and local charitable agencies.

The objective of proponents of the 1955 legislation was to add wheat flour and cornmeal to the list of commodities already available for distribution to the needy.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

HEARINGS -- April 28, May 2 on 14 bills, introduced by Representatives from heavy unemployment areas calling for distribution of flour and meal.

TESTIMONY -- April 28 -- Commodity Credit Corporation officials and Members of Congress testified on the bills.

May 2 -- Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse said the Department would be "happy" to sell the grain to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare but would not have facilities to handle distribution of flour and cornmeal.

ACTION -- The Committee May 11 reported HR 2851 (H Rept 583) with an amendment placing HEW rather than the Agriculture Department in charge of the program.

Floor Action

The House May 25, by a 344-1 roll-call vote, passed HR 2851. (For voting, see chart, p. 150.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 2851:

Transferred from the Agriculture Department to HEW responsibility for distribution of perishable commodities held by the CCC, without charge to HEW.

Directed that the CCC be paid by HEW for nonperishable commodities acquired and processed.

Permitted CCC to buy processed foods for HEW use, in lieu of processing and packaging stored grains.

Limited the HEW program to major disaster areas and those with heavy unemployment.

AID HUNGRY AMERICANS

DEBATE -- W. Pat Jennings (D Va.) -- "The purpose of HR 2851 is to allow the Commodity Credit Corporation to process a portion of our surplus grain, which is presently being stored at a cost of a million dollars per day, into flour and meal for distribution to needy persons ...where depressed economic conditions have caused hunger...We have made grain and grain products available to hungry people in other nations; let us put our own people...on the same basis as those needy people overseas."

James G. Fulton (R Pa.) -- "This is not a relief program because these same recipient people have themselves paid high price supports to keep up the prices of such food, so they could buy less and save less when they were employed and had money. In addition they have paid federal taxes that have been used to do the purchasing of these very surplus commodities."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 12 on a bill (S 661) similar to HR 2851.

TESTIMONY -- Sen. Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) supported the bill, noting that surplus butter, dried milk, cheese, beans, and other commodities were being distributed to the needy.

Walter C. Berger of the CCC said existing distributions were limited to perishable goods or to further the price support program, and provisions of S 661 might result in injury to regular commercial distribution of cereal products.

Social Security Commissioner Charles I. Schottland, appearing for HEW, said the measure would cause confusion and duplication with existing surplus food programs.

ACTION -- The Committee July 20 reported (S Rept 1049) a rewritten version of S 661.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, S 661 would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to use up to $15 million annually through June, 1957, to make available wheat flour and cornmeal for free distribution to needy persons.

The report said that although the Department of Agriculture did not feel the distribution was within its province, the Department's "existing system should be used...and there is no need to bring an additional agency into (the program's) administration."

Floor Action

The Senate July 22, by voice vote, passed HR 2851, amended by substituting the text of S 661. The Senate earlier had agreed, by voice vote, to the substitute offered by the Agriculture Committee. One floor amendment was defeated.

DEBATE-- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "If states want the proposed relief extended, they can and should provide some of the necessary funds...I think some of the responsibility should be borne at the state level."

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "It is thought that every reasonable safeguard has been placed around the program...The Subcommittee and the full Committee unanimously approved the program, with the single exception that the distinguished senior Senator from Delaware (Williams) felt there should be adopted an amendment requiring the states...to pay a certain portion of the value of the commodities..."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Williams -- Make no commodity available in any state unless payment is made from state or local funds in accordance with a stated formula. Voice vote.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 27 reported (H Rept 1450) agreement on the Senate version of HR 2851.

The House bill had given the HEW Secretary responsibility over the program but the Senate amendment authorized distribution of the foods through the Agriculture Department.

In the conference report, managers for the House said "the free distribution of cereals which are not in imminent danger of deterioration or spoilage...is clearly within the field of relief operations and not a part of the farm program. No matter how worthy the operations may be, it is clearly one which should be charged to relief and welfare and not to agriculture...The conferees on the part of the House have reluctantly accepted the Senate substitute..."

ACTION -- The Senate July 27, and the House July 29, agreed by voice votes to the conference report.

CONSERVATION PAYMENTS

HR 1573 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 67) Feb 22, 1955.
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 2.
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 210) April 20.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 17. (For roll-call vote, see p. 124.)

P. L. 42 -- Signed into law May 23.

The bill relieved farmers of the obligation to comply with acreage allotments as a condition for receiving soil conservation payments.

PROVISIONS -- PL 42 repealed Section 348 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1954. The section had prohibited agricultural conservation payments to any farmer who "knowingly harvests" any of the six price-supported basic commodities in excess of his acreage allotment. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 101.)

Background

Until 1954, Section 348 applied only to cotton growers. Its extension in 1954 to producers of other basic crops did not produce the results hoped for. Farmers did not increase their compliance with their acreage allotments. This was particularly true of small farmers. They were sufficiently attracted by the absence of marketing quota penalties when small acreages of wheat are grown that many of them chose to ignore the deterrent effect of Section 348.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 4 and 8.

ACTION -- Reported HR 1573 (H Rept 67) Feb. 22. It was sponsored by Rep. Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.). Fifteen similar bills were before the Committee.

Floor Action

The House March 2 passed HR 1573 by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Nearly unanimous support of the bill was expressed on the floor, despite comments that the American Farm Bureau Federation had wired Congressmen requesting their opposition to the bill.

Hope -- The agricultural conservation program "should stand on its own feet" and "should not be used to compel compliance" with the price support program. Section 348 would seriously affect small producers of corn and wheat.

Don Hayworth (D Mich.) -- The bill was supported by the National Grange and National Farmers Union but opposed by the AFBF.

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- The AFBF failed to testify at hearings on the bill. The Agriculture Department favored the measure.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HEARINGS -- March 23.

ACTION -- HR 1573 was reported (S Rept 210) April 20, without amendment.

Floor Action

HR 1573 was passed by the Senate May 17 by voice vote. An amendment by Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) which would have retained Section 348 but exempted certain farmers was rejected by a roll-call vote of 35 - 49. (For voting, see chart, p. 124.)

DEBATE -- May 13 -- Holland -- Opposed outright repeal of Section 348. "If a grower wants to play ball with his fellows and with his own government...who are providing funds so generously in order that there may be some stability in his industry, he should at least be willing not to trespass upon his acreage allotments. It seems to me that is a fair condition to impose upon him."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Supported the bill and noted that "the only witness to come before the Subcommittee in opposition to repeal...was the witness of the Farm Bureau Federation, and it was lukewarm in its opposition."

May 17 -- Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Favored outright repeal of Section 348 because he was "concerned with...whether our soil conservation practices are to be continued. If they are, there is need to provide incentives to assure their continuation."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The Holland amendment "is definitely an effort to assist small farmers who might be expected not to understand the law too well."

CONSERVATION PLAN SUPPORTED

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- For outright repeal of Section 348 because he disliked "very much to see the (conservation) program destroyed by making farmers ineligible for its benefits because they had not complied with some other program which probably was not nearly so important."

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) -- Favored repealing Section 348 because "it was quite unfair to penalize a farmer who had slightly overproduced because nature had stepped in and played its part.... A farmer who is the victim of such circumstances should not be denied his soil-conservation payments."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

May 17 -- Holland -- Continue Section 348 but exempt from its penalties farmers who exceed their farm acreage allotments by harvesting corn for ensilage, harvesting not more than 15 acres of wheat, harvesting a commodity or crop for which producers have rejected marketing quotas, or harvesting peanuts to be used for seed or hog feeding. Roll call, 35-49.

LOANS TO FARMERS

Three programs offering aid to farmers were extended by Congress in 1955. They covered disaster loans, and emergency agricultural and livestock loans.

All stemmed from the Disaster Loan Act of 1949 (PL 38, 81st Congress), which provided a revolving fund for production disaster loans to farmers if credit was not available from commercial sources. The loans were administered by the Farmers Home Administration. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, p. 130.)

In 1953 Congress passed the Farmers and Stockmen Emergency Assistance Act (PL 115, 83rd Congress), widening the lending sections of the Disaster Loan Act and providing for other-than-financial aid. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 106-107.)

In 1954 an Emergency Farm Loan Act (PL 727, 83rd Congress) was passed, designed to give opportunities for loans to farmers and ranchers suffering "economic disaster" because of declining prices. Under the 1949 Act, such loans had been extended to farmers suffering from production losses in "natural disasters." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 134.)

Major provisions of the legislation enacted in 1955:

S 1755 -- PL 132 reduced the interest rate on Farmers Home Administration disaster loans from 5 percent to 3 percent.

BACKGROUND -- Hearings on S 1755 were held by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Special Subcommittee. Support came from the American Farm Bureau Federation, National Farmers Union, and the National Grange. Opposition was voiced by the Agricultural Credit Services and the Farmers Home Administration. The bill was passed by the Senate May 26 and the House June 27, by voice vote.

S 1582 -- PL 117 extended the period for making emergency agricultural loans to farmers until June 30, 1957.

BACKGROUND -- The bill cleared the Senate June 20 and the House June 27.

HR 4915 -- PL 166 extended for two years, until July 14, 1957, the relief program providing livestock loans to farmers and stockmen.

BACKGROUND -- The bill was passed by the House June 20, the Senate, July 11. The House July 13 concurred in a Senate amendment by voice vote. The House bill omitted a four-year time limit for granting supplemental loans, which the final version included.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

A bill (S 1628) to aid farmers by allotting additional acreage for price-supported crops was passed by voice vote of the Senate April 26. It did not receive House action in 1955. The measure would have permitted the Secretary of Agriculture to allot to farmers in disaster-struck areas additional acreage for production of the six "basic" crops (cotton, corn, peanuts, rice, tobacco and wheat). Relief would be limited to 500,000 acres or 3 percent of the national acreage allotment, whichever was smaller.

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union message Jan. 6, 1955, said, "because drought...remains a serious agricultural problem, I shall recommend legislation to strengthen federal disaster assistance programs. This legislation will prescribe an improved appraisal of need, better adjustment of the various programs to local conditions, and a more equitable sharing of costs between the states and the federal government."

Congress did not act on Mr. Eisenhower's proposals in 1955.

Bills Acted On

How They Are Listed

Agriculture bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below, in order of bill number. (For all Bills Introduced in this Agriculture category, including bills not acted on, see page 559. For complete listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 104.)

The following summary of each bill gives description, sponsor, and date of action taken or page reference to a detailed legislative history.

In this Agriculture section, the Bills Acted On are divided only into those on which work was finished -- under the heading "Action Completed" -- and those not finished -- listed under "Unfinished Business."

ACTION COMPLETED

S 52. Amend act to protect scenic values along Oak Creek Canyon and certain tributaries thereof within Coconino National Forest, Arizona. HAYDEN (D Ariz.). Senate Interior and Insular Affairs reported April 28. Senate indefinitely postponed May 5.

S 72. Public Law 257. Provide that certain lands acquired by U.S. shall be administered by Secretary of Agriculture as national forest lands. ANDERSON (D N.M.). Senate Agriculture and Forestry reported March 4. Senate passed March 28. House Agriculture reported July 13. House passed July 30. President signed Aug. 9.

S 145. Public Law 8. Amend wheat marketing quota provision of Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. YOUNG (R N.D.) and other Senators. Senate Agriculture reported Jan. 21, amended. Passed Senate Jan. 26. House Agriculture reported Feb. 8. Passed House Feb. 10. President signed Feb. 19.

S 153. Public Law 70. Amend Rural Electrification Act of 1936 re unexpended or unobligated sums. THYE (R Minn.) and other Senators. (See story, p. 184.)

S 265. Public Law 76. Amend acts authorizing agricultural entries under non-mineral land laws of certain mineral lands to increase limitation re desert entries made under such acts to 320 acres. APPROPRIATIONS SUMMARY

Gentle treatment of the Republican Administration's budget and relatively few inter-party squabbles, characterized action on appropriations in the 1955 session of the Democratic-controlled 84th Congress.

The Eisenhower Administration in 1955 asked Congress for $55,200,782,229 in new money for fiscal 1955 and 1956. It budgeted another $7,162,000,000 for fiscal 1956 permanent appropriations, which are granted without Congressional action.

In its first session, the 84th Congress voted $53,-124,821,215 in new funds -- $925,805,300 for fiscal 1955 and $52,199,015,915 for fiscal 1956 -- aside from the fiscal 1956 permanent appropriations which included an estimated $6.7 billion for interest on the national debt.

The Democratic-led Congress cut budget requests by $2.1 billion. By contrast, the GOP-controlled 83rd Congress slashed $2.6 billion from President Eisenhower's budget in 1954 and $4.6 billion in 1953.

As an innovation for fiscal 1956, the number of regular appropriation bills was raised to 13. There had been 11 regular money bills in fiscal 1955. AEC, TVA, and Army Engineers' funds were put together in the Public Works bill. Commerce Department funds appeared in a separate bill, rather than with State and Justice, and other changes were made.

A bill-by-bill breakdown of budget requests and Congressional action on appropriations in 1955 follows:

Bill Title	Requested	Appropriated
Fiscal 1955
1st Deficiency	$ 160,000	$ 1,013,950

TOTAL	$62,362,782,229	$60,286,821,215

Only two major partisan issues were raised during debate on money bills in the 84th Congress: Administration plans to cut armed forces strength and to aid construction of the Dixon-Yates power plant.

The Administration suffered its sharpest setback, moneywise, when Congress chopped $563 million from the mutual security appropriation. The cut had strong bipartisan support.

Two bills, the Defense Department and Public Works appropriations, were signed "reluctantly" by President Eisenhower, who objected to provisions in each.

Despite the target date for winding up Congressional action on money bills -- June 30, the end of the fiscal year -- Congress did not tie its purse strings until the last day of the session, Aug. 2, when it sent the legislative appropriation bill to the White House. It had not met the fiscal deadline since 1948.

1956 Budget

President Eisenhower, on Jan. 17, 1955, sent Congress his third unbalanced budget. It forecast fiscal 1956 government spending of $62.4 billion, receipts of $60 billion, a deficit of $2.4 billion.

Mr. Eisenhower requested authority to obligate $61.5 billion in new and previously appropriated funds.

The budget called for $34 billion in Defense Department spending. But the Department had programmed expenditures of $35,750,000,000, with the lion's share going to the Air Force. The annual budget review, released Aug. 25, held fast to the $34 billion figure. The Defense Department, however, still was unable to pinpoint how or where it would cut the extra $1,750,000,000, and some Bureau of the Budget officials doubted the Department could trim its spending by the required amount. The Defense Department spent $35.5 billion in fiscal 1955.

The budget review boosted the estimates for spending to $63.8 billion and for receipts to $62.1 billion, leaving a smaller deficit -- $1.7 billion -- than had been anticipated in January.

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey and Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes in August said: "Barring some unforeseen development, we think we should, and that we can, balance the budget" in fiscal 1956.

Humphrey said a 3 percent rise in federal income or drop in spending would result in a balanced budget. He left the door open for tax cuts if the budget could be balanced. A prosperous economy was boosting federal tax revenues, but farm price supports were costing the government more than it had expected, he added.

Key budget figures, in billions of dollars for fiscal years:

	1955 Actual	1956 - Jan. Estimate	1956 - Aug. Estimate
Spending	$64.5	$62.4	$63.8
Receipts	60.3	60.0	62.1
Deficit	4.2	2.4	1.7
New obligational authority	57.0	61.5*	61.8*
Public debt	274.4	276.0	275.0

*Congress granted $60.9 billion; as of August, 1955, the President expected to seek another $836 million.
As of the end of the fiscal year.

AGRICULTURE

HR 5239 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 303) March 25, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $880,260,050.

- Passed by the House March 28, by voice vote, without amendment.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 216) April 21. Recommended: $884,393,923.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote April 26. Appropriations voted: $884,433,923.
- Conference report (H Rept 590) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate May 17.

P.L. 40 -- Signed into law May 23. Final total: $883,051,623.

The Agriculture Appropriations bill was the first fiscal 1956 money bill to be signed by President Eisenhower. In addition to appropriating funds, HR 5239 authorized loans of $388 million for the rural electrification and telephone program and for Farmers' Home Administration loans.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, the breakdown of funds in HR 5239 was:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 97,437,408
Extension Service	49,045,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	408,000
Soil Conservation Service	81,300,000
Agricultural Conservation Program	214,500,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	107,242,197
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,365,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	698,000
Commodity Stabilization Service	98,600,000
Federal crop insurance	6,000,000
Rural Electrification Administration	7,680,000
Farmers' Home Administration	24,500,000
Office of General Counsel	2,100,000
Office of Secretary	2,144,300
Office of Information	1,238,000
Library	659,950
Commodity Credit Corporation, restoration of capital impairment	1,634,659
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	184,499,109
TOTAL	$883,051,623

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 5239 also:

Authorized $160 million for rural electrification loans, $75 million for loans under the rural telephone program, and $153 million for loans under programs of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Authorized $250 million for program formulation and administration for the 1956 crop year (approximately Sept. 1, 1955, to Dec. 31, 1956) under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

Provided that no participant in the Agricultural Conservation Program would receive more than $1,500 in federal payments, except where the participants from two or more farms or ranches joined to carry out approved practices of the program.

Set a limit of $6,290,000 on the amount of corporate funds which the Farm Credit Administration could use for administrative purposes.

Provided that not less than $250,000 of the appropriation for the Agricultural Marketing Service would be used for a special study of the price spread between the farmer and consumer.

Background

President Eisenhower, in his Jan. 17 budget message, said estimates of net expenditures for all farm programs in fiscal 1956 were $2.3 billion, or $871 million less than fiscal 1955 spending. The President said this reduction was principally due to the "anticipated smaller outlays for farm price supports resulting from acreage restrictions and increased sales."

Mr. Eisenhower's budget included the following recommendations:

Grant a higher level of new rural electrification loans ($160 million).

Provide $70 million in new loan authority for the rural telephone program and $147 million for loans by the Farmers' Home Administration.

Enact a forward authorization of $175 million for payments to farmers in the 1956 crop year under the Agriculture Conservation program.

The President requested a total appropriation of $897,684,574. Of this, $711,531,958 was for regular activities of the Department of Agriculture. The request for special activities of the Department totaled $184,517,957. These activities included special strategic research and reimbursements to the Commodity Credit Corporation for its contributions to the International Wheat Agreement, the emergency feed assistance program, and the wheat to Pakistan program. A request of $1,634,659 for restoration of capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation was also included.

House

COMMITTEE -- Department of Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- Feb. 23 on closed hearings held Jan. 31-Feb. 10 on departmental funds for fiscal 1956.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 9 -- Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said sale of U.S. surpluses abroad at cut prices would demoralize world markets and mean the loss of normal export business through commercial trade channels.

Feb. 10 -- Samuel C. Waugh, Assistant Secretary of State for economic affairs, said the State Department objected only once to the sale of American food abroad. The objection was raised in the case of a proposed sale of 20 million pounds of Commodity Credit Corporation butter, he said.

ACTION -- The full Committee March 25 reported HR 5239 (H Rept 303). There was no written dissent to the amounts recommended in the bill but a minority report was filed disagreeing with "the political implications" expressed by the majority.

CCC CRITICIZED

MAJORITY REPORT -- The report recommended an appropriation of $694,107,434 for the regular activities of the Department of Agriculture. This was $17,424,524 less than the President's request. The amounts requested for special activities of the Department and for restoration of capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation were approved in full. The Committee approved $11 million more than the President requested for loan authorizations -- $5 million more for telephone loans and $6 million more for farm ownership and housing loans.

In the amount recommended for regular activities, the Committee restored $15 million cut from the school lunch program by the President's request to permit the program to be continued at the fiscal 1955 level. The group cut the Agricultural Conservation Program's request by $35.5 million, but said that a carryover of unused funds from the 1953 program would allow such a cut without harm to the program.

The majority agreed that "there is much to indicate that...political and other considerations predominate to the point of preventing action...(by) the Secretary of Agriculture and others around him." The group aimed its criticism at the Commodity Credit Corporation which, it said, did not meet its full responsibility. The report advised the CCC to obtain a sales manager to sell "commodities...for the best price the government can get and still move them before 'storage costs' become too large." The report also said that, if it is necessary to make the CCC independent of the Agriculture Department to accomplish these sales, Congress should adopt such legislation.

MINORITY REPORT -- Subcommittee members Walt Horan (R Wash.) and Charles W. Vursell (R Ill.) said they believed Secretary Benson "is doing a good and courageous job, with many adverse circumstances -- many of which he inherited..." They said the majority report was "fraught with political implications and inaccuracies."

Floor Action

The House March 28 passed HR 5239 by voice vote and without amendment. The measure carried appropriations of $880,260,050 for the Agriculture Department and provided for $388 million in loan authorizations.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, the bill carried the following appropriations:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 95,728,708
Extension Service	48,895,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	408,000
Soil Conservation Service	80,612,579
Agricultural Conservation Program	214,500,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	107,027,197
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,365,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	698,000
Commodity Stabilization Service	98,600,000
Federal crop insurance	6,000,000
Rural Electrification Administration	7,680,000
Farmers' Home Administration	24,500,000
Office of General Counsel	2,079,000
Office of Secretary	2,116,000
Office of Information	$ 1,238,000
Library	659,950
Commodity Credit Corporation, restoration of capital impairment	1,634,659
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	184,517,957
TOTAL	$880,260,050

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 5239 also:

Authorized $160 million for rural electrification loans, $75 million for loans under the rural telephone program, and $153 million for loans under programs of the Farmers' Home Administration.

Authorized $250 million for program formulation and administration for the 1956 crop year (approximately Sept. 1, 1955, to Dec. 31, 1956) under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

Provided that no participant in the Agricultural Conservation Program would receive more than $1,500 in federal payments, except where the participants from two or more farms or ranches joined to carry out approved practices of the program.

Provided that not less than $1 million of the appropriation for the Agricultural Marketing Service would be used for a special study on the price spread between the farmer and consumer.

Set a limit of $6,290,000 on the amount of corporate funds which the Farm Credit Administration could use for administrative purposes.

DEBATE -- Most of the five-hour debate which preceded passage of HR 5239 was devoted to criticism and defense of the policies of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson.

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- "I do not think our report is political propaganda, but when...the Department of Agriculture says it is, it is evidence that they do not have the answer...they cannot explain giving away without offering for sale."

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- "I did not hear any discussion of the money involved (in the bill)...I am not so sure but what a little attention to the money...might have saved a little money for the taxpayers of our country." The report was designed to make "the Secretary of Agriculture and the Commodity Credit Corporation the whipping boys to improve the situation...to re-establish the 90 percent rigid price support."

Fred Marshall (D Minn.) -- "There exists a strong feeling of distrust of the philosophy that is guiding the agricultural affairs of this Administration, and a lack of confidence in many of the people who are running them... As a consequence, the Subcommittee this year was required to put in long hours, to dig deeply for the facts and to sift the facts from the propaganda."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Department of Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 9 to April 20 to hear public testimony on the fiscal 1956 Agriculture budget.

TESTIMONY -- April 12 -- Secretary Benson said the 1955-56 outlook "is for considerable stability in farm income," but that the farmer was getting a smaller percentage of the consumer's dollar than at any time since the early 1940's. Benson asked the Subcommittee to revise HR 5239 in line with the President's requests.

ACTION -- The Appropriations Committee April 21 reported HR 5239 (S Rept 216), carrying a recommended appropriation of $884,393,923 -- an increase of $4,133,873 over the amount approved by the House.

RESEARCH FUNDS INCREASED

The Committee recommended an increase of $2,008,700 for the Agricultural Research Service. Part of this amount, although the Committee deleted a House provision earmarking a specific sum, would be used for a special study of the effect of 1954 and 1955 crop acreage reductions on farm income and the general economy of the United States. The President's $700,000 supplemental request for pest control was also approved.

The Committee added $1,387,421 to the funds for the Soil Conservation Service "to maintain and improve the technical assistance provided to farmers...(and) increase the work on soil surveys..."

Other increases recommended for regular activities of the Department were $315,000 for the Agricultural Marketing Service, $300,000 for the Federal Extension Service, and $141,000 for the offices of the general counsel and the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Senate group also added $11,950 to the Pakistan wheat program, a special activity of the Department. It recommended a decrease of $130,798 in the amount the Commodity Credit Corporation was to be reimbursed for emergency famine relief because, the report said, there had been a decrease in the actual value of wheat and flour shipped.

The Committee agreed with the House that a study of the foreign agricultural program should be undertaken, and said it had been "assured" by the Agriculture Department that the study would be given attention. Therefore, the Committee said it would be "unwise" to earmark a specific amount for this study and recommended a House provision, earmarking $500,000, be deleted.

The Committee also deleted a House provision earmarking not less than $1 million of Agricultural Marketing Service funds for a study on the price spread between the farmer and consumer, but $100,000 of the additional amount recommended for the Service was to be used for this study.

Floor Action

The Senate April 26 passed HR 5239, by voice vote, with one amendment by John Stennis (D Miss.) that increased the total appropriations by $40,000. The Senate rejected, by a 5-76 roll-call vote, an amendment by John J. Williams (R Del.) to reduce authorized conservation funds by $55 million. The amendment would have brought the authorization back to the level proposed by the Administration. (For voting, see chart, p. 122.)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5239, as approved by the Senate:

Agricultural Research Service	$ 97,777,408
Extension Service	49,195,000
Farmer Cooperative Service	408,000
Soil Conservation Service	82,000,000
Agricultural Conservation Program	214,500,000
Agricultural Marketing Service	107,342,197
Foreign Agricultural Service	3,365,000
Commodity Exchange Authority	698,000
Commodity Stabilization Service	$ 98,600,000
Federal crop insurance	6,000,000
Rural Electrification Administration	7,680,000
Farmers' Home Administration	24,500,000
Office of General Counsel	2,164,000
Office of Secretary	2,172,600
Office of Information	1,238,000
Library	659,950
Commodity Credit Corporation, restoration of capital impairment	1,634,659
Special activities of Department of Agriculture	184,499,109
TOTAL	$884,433,923

DEBATE -- Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) debated the relative importance of Department of Agriculture's home economics research branch and the bulletins issued by the Department on such subjects as orchid growing in Guatemala, dish washing, and rabbit cookery.

Douglas -- "We made a very quick recovery (following World War II); and the recession of 1949 was not of such long duration...now there is a come-back of production; but the point is that there is not a come-back of employment to the same degree...I do not think that a bulletin on Ways to Cook Rabbit is an adequate way to deal with this issue, although...we should be thankful for all small favors."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "...home economics research...has been particularly beneficial to industry by enabling it to determine what clothing and what commodities are most useful and desirable in agricultural areas."

Debate also centered on Williams' proposed amendment to cut the $250 million authorized for soil conservation programs under the Agricultural Conservation Program Service.

Russell -- "The soil-conservation program is tremendously important...because of the very desperate conditions which exist in some areas...A program of the size recommended by the committee is needed to deal with that problem..."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Stennis -- Increase by $40,000 the funds for the Agricultural Research Service in order to continue home economics research. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Williams -- Reduce by $55 million the $250 million authorization for a program of soil-building practices and soil- and water-conserving practices. Roll-call, 5-76.

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate Conference Committee May 16 submitted its report on HR 5239 (H Rept 590). The compromise version of the bill had one amendment still in dispute.

The committee said it was "in full agreement that discontinuance of nonessential and nonproductive research projects...will make it possible for the Agriculture Department to cover all valuable and worthwhile projects." The group approved an appropriation of $97.4 million for agricultural research.

On many sections of the bill, the conference committee agreed on compromises between differing amounts approved by the House and Senate.

ACTION -- The House and Senate May 17 agreed, by voice votes, to the conference report carrying total appropriations of $883,051,623. The final total was $2,791,573 more than passed by the House, and $1,382,300 less than passed by the Senate.

The House agreed, by voice vote, to recede and concur in one Senate amendment which was still in dispute when the bill reached the House floor.

TREASURY-POST OFFICE

HR 4876 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 204) March 11, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $3,282,553,000.

- Passed by the House March 15 by voice vote, without amendment.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 136) April 12. Recommended: $3,358,622,000.
- Passed by the Senate April 13 by voice vote, without floor amendment.
- Conference report (H Rept 610) agreed to by the Senate May 20 and by the House May 23, both by voice votes.

P.L. 51 -- Signed into law June 1. Final total: $3,322,488,500.

The Treasury-Post Office Appropriations bill carried funds for the two departments and the Tax Court of the United States for fiscal 1956. The final total of the bill was $37,896,500 less than the amount requested by President Eisenhower.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 4876, as signed by the President:

Bureau of the Mint	3,650,000
U.S. Coast Guard	185,225,000
TOTAL	$ 599,598,000

Post Office
Administration	$ 15,500,000
Operations	1,870,000,000
Transportation	661,620,500
Finance	17,200,000
Facilities	157,400,000
TOTAL	$2,721,720,500

The Tax Court was allotted $1,170,000, the amount of its request.

The bill also:

Authorized the transfer, with Bureau of Budget approval, of up to 5 percent of fiscal 1956 Post Office appropriations.

Authorized transfer of additional appropriations, with Budget Bureau approval, to the extent necessary to improve administration and operations.

Authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to use up to $1,400,000 of its available funds for the "administrative expenses" in fiscal 1956 of liquidating itself.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower originally requested total appropriations of $3,360,250,000 which included $604,398,000 for the Treasury, $2,754,817,000 for the Post Office, and $1,035,000 for the Tax Court. After the bill had been passed by the House, the President sent Congress a supplemental request (S Doc 26) of $135,000 to cover the increased salaries of Tax Court judges.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Appropriations Treasury-Post Office Departments Subcommittee.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- March 4 on closed hearings held Jan. 31-Feb. 18 on Treasury Department funds for fiscal 1956.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 31 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said the estimated total for regular appropriations for fiscal 1956 was $604.4 million. This figure did not include $2.3 million for limitation accounts. Humphrey said the increase of $14.4 million over fiscal 1955 appropriations would provide primarily for a program to strengthen enforcement of tax laws by the Internal Revenue Service. Some additional increases, he said, were due to employee benefits granted by the fringe benefits law (PL 763, 83rd Congress), (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 391.) Humphrey said new costs under this law would cost the Treasury Department nearly $3.3 million in fiscal 1956.

Undersecretary of Treasury Marion B. Folsom said the expense of additional Internal Revenue personnel for tax enforcement "will be recovered many times over in the form of additional tax revenue." Humphrey estimated the increase at "$15 to $20 in additional tax for each dollar we spend for each additional agent."

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- March 10 on closed hearings held Feb. 16-23 on Post Office Department funds for fiscal 1956.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 16 -- Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield said his department estimated its needs for funds for fiscal 1956 at $2.7 billion. This figure, he said, was $53 million, or 1.9 percent, over expected spending in 1955, but would cover a 3 percent increase in the volume of mail handled. Summerfield said $8.6 million of the additional $53 million was needed for capital improvements; $12.3 million for transportation of the additional volume of mail; $11.3 million for group insurance and employee uniforms; and the remaining $20.3 million for handling the additional 1.6 billion pieces of mail.

Summerfield estimated that the Post Office deficit for fiscal 1956 would be $285 million, compared to an estimated deficit of $313 million for fiscal 1955 and an actual deficit of $399 million for fiscal 1954. He said the Department had used "all practical" means to decrease the deficit. "We must be realistic," he said, "and face... the fact that we must increase our revenues by...some upward adjustment in first-, second-, and third-class rates."

ACTION -- The Committee March 11 reported HR 4876 (H Rept 204). The biggest cut made in the Treasury appropriation request was $7.5 million from the $286 million requested for the Internal Revenue Service. The Service had asked for money to provide for additional revenue agents, but the Committee said funds provided in the bill would enable the Service to reach "its optimum employment level."

The Committee concluded that the Post Office estimate of 1956 mail volume was "overstated." On this ground, the group cut by $36,363,000 and $27,241,000, respectively, the requests of the Operations and Transportation sections of the Post Office.

Floor Action

The House March 15 passed HR 4876 by voice vote and without amendment. The bill, which was the first fiscal 1956 money bill to clear the House, carried total appropriations of $3,282,553,000 for the Treasury and Post Office departments and the Tax Court. The House amount was $77,697,000, or 2.3 percent, less than the amount requested by President Eisenhower.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 4876, as approved by the House:

Treasury

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,650,000
Bureau of Accounts	18,075,000
Bureau of the Public Debt	44,500,000
Office of the Treasurer	15,000,000
Bureau of Customs	41,200,000
Internal Revenue Service	278,500,000
Bureau of Narcotics	2,990,000
U.S. Secret Service	4,028,000
Bureau of the Mint	3,650,000
U.S. Coast Guard	185,225,000
TOTAL	$595,818,000

The bill also:

Authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to use up to $1,400,000 of its available funds for the "administrative expenses" in fiscal 1956 of liquidating itself.

Reduced the number of Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury from three to two.

Post Office

Administration	$ 15,500,000
Operations	1,850,000,000
Transportation	648,000,000
Finance	17,200,000
Facilities	155,000,000
TOTAL	$2,685,700,000

The bill also:

Authorized the transfer, with Bureau of Budget approval, of up to 5 percent of fiscal 1956 Post Office Appropriations.

Authorized transfer of additional appropriations, with Budget Bureau approval, to the extent necessary to improve administration and operations.

The Tax Court of the United States was allotted the amount it requested, $1,035,000.

DEBATE -- Rep. Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- The lease-purchase plan for acquiring post offices and other federal buildings would produce a "truly alarming" hidden public debt if carried over to the highway program and other public agencies. The plan permitted federal agencies "to do indirectly what they are prevented from doing directly...have buildings erected for purchase by the government." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 402-3.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Treasury-Post Office Appropriations Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 21-24 on HR 4876.

TESTIMONY -- March 23 -- Secretary Humphrey asked for restoration of a $30,000 item to provide a special Assistant Secretary of Treasury to handle liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. T. Coleman Andrews, Internal Revenue Commissioner, asked the Subcommittee to restore the $7.5 million cut made by the House. He said the reduction would "drastically curb... long-range...increased tax enforcement."

ACTION -- Reporting the bill April 12 (S Rept 136), the Committee recommended that the position of a third Assistant Secretary of Treasury be continued as a "temporary measure," but that it be abolished "at the earliest possible date." It added $30,000 to the bill for the positions restored.

The Committee also restored the funds requested by the Internal Revenue Service for enforcement agents. Testimony showed, the report said, that funds granted for this purpose would "pay off at the rate of at least $10 to $1 in the first year and $20 to $1 by the third year."

The Committee recommended funds be restored, to the full amount of the requests, for the Operations, Transportation, and Facilities section of the Post Office. The Committee said the amounts were needed to handle the increased volume of mail and to speed up transportation of mail.

Floor Action

The Senate April 13 passed HR 4876 by voice vote. With committee amendments, it carried total appropriations of $3,358,622,000. The amount approved by the Senate was $76,069,000 more than approved by the House, and $1,763,000 less than the President's request to the Senate.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate, HR 4876 provided:

Treasury

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,680,000
Bureau of Accounts	18,075,000
Bureau of the Public Debt	44,500,000
Office of the Treasurer	15,000,000
Bureau of Customs	41,200,000
Internal Revenue Service	286,000,000
Bureau of Narcotics	2,990,000
U.S. Secret Service	4,028,000
Bureau of the Mint	3,650,000
U.S. Coast Guard	185,225,000
TOTAL	$603,348,000

The bill also:

Authorized the RFC to use up to $1,400,000 of its available funds for liquidation.

Deleted a House provision that reduced the number of Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury from three to two.

Post Office

Administration	$ 15,500,000
Operations	1,886,363,000
Transportation	675,241,000
Finance	17,200,000
Facilities	159,800,000
TOTAL	$2,754,104,000

The bill also:

Authorized the same transfers of Post Office funds as had the House.

Budgeted $10,362,000 for "payments for special services" of the Post Office Department. The amount would not increase the total of the bill as amounts withdrawn from the Treasury would be deposited to the credit of "postal revenues."

The Tax Court was allotted $1,170,000, following the President's supplemental request.

DEBATE -- HR 4876 was passed after less than a half hour's debate, most of which was used by Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) for explanation of the bill and committee amendments.

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- "I think the Post Office Department not only justified the restorations, but I think it would be most damaging to the postal service if they had been eliminated...There has been a great increase in efficiency in the Post Office Department."

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- If any "fundamental change" in ways of transporting mail is contemplated by the Post Office, the Postmaster General should advise the Appropriations Committees.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees recommended, in a report (H Rept 610) filed May 23, a total appropriation of $3,322,488,500. It provided $599,598,000 for the Treasury, $2,721,720,500 for the Post Office, and $1,170,000 for the Tax Court. Increases for the Internal Revenue Service and the major Post Office sections that the Senate had approved were compromised by the conferees.

The conference recommended deletion of a $10,362,000 Post Office Department budget for "special services" which was included in the Senate version of the bill. The group suggested that the item "might be better considered by the proper legislative committees."

The report said that the principal question in the appropriations for the Post Office was one of mail volume -- the House said the volume was overstated, the Senate that it was understated. The conference committee reached a compromise amount which it said would "certainly alleviate this situation."

ACTION -- The Senate May 20 and the House May 23 agreed, by voice votes, to the conference report, thus clearing the bill for the President's signature.

INTERIOR, FOREST SERVICE

HR 5085 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 239) March 21, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $298,271,246.

- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, March 24. Appropriations voted: $297,925,546.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 261) May 2. Recommended: $327,987,088.
- Passed without floor amendment, by voice vote of the Senate, May 5.
- Conference report (H Rept 731) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate, June 8.

P.L. 78 -- Signed into law June 16. Final total: $317,573,627.

The fiscal 1956 appropriations bill for the Interior Department and 10 related agencies granted over $3 million more than the President requested. The chief beneficiary was the Agriculture Department's Forest Service, which received $5.7 million more than the President's Budget proposed.

PROVISIONS -- Funds provided in the bill were:

Interior

Office of the Secretary	$ 3,540,000
Bureau of Land Management	15,750,000
Bureau of Indian Affairs	71,832,498
Geological Survey	26,635,000
Bureau of Mines	18,863,000
National Park Service	45,029,300
Fish and Wildlife Service	12,675,500
Office of Territories	24,009,500
Administration	2,065,000
Subtotal	$220,399,798

Related Agencies

Commission of Fine Arts	$ 21,200
Federal Coal Mine Safety Board of Review	70,000
Agricultural Research Service, Agriculture Department	150,000
Forest Service, Agriculture Department	90,315,129
Indian Claims Commission	119,500
Jamestown-Williamsburg-Yorktown Celebration Commission	100,000
National Capital Planning Commission	643,000
Smithsonian Institution	5,355,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration Commission	10,000
Virgin Islands Corporation	390,000
Subtotal	$ 97,173,829
TOTAL	$317,573,627

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 5085 also:

Transferred funds to the Army Engineers for continuing building Devils Kitchen Dam at Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge, Ill.

Authorized use of $3.1 million from funds held in trust for Indian tribes.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower requested $222,734,356 for the Interior Department and $91,788,700 for the related agencies. Included in the latter was a budget of $84,623,000 for the Forest Service.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 21 reported HR 5085 (H Rept 239), recommending $207,025,856 for the Interior Department and $91,245,390 for the other agencies. It represented a cut of 4.8 percent in the President's total request.

The Committee recommended cuts in funds for construction requested by several agencies because, the report said, unobligated balances from previously appropriated funds would be sufficient to carry out the fiscal 1956 programs. Groups involved were the Bureau of Indian Affairs, National Park Service, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Office of Territories' Alaska Public Works Program.

Floor Action

HR 5085 was passed by voice vote of the House March 24 after acceptance of an amendment reducing National Park Service funds by $345,700.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5085, as approved by the House:

Interior

Office of the Secretary	$ 3,565,000
Bureau of Land Management	15,700,000
Bureau of Indian Affairs	66,510,856
Geological Survey	26,285,000
Bureau of Mines	18,863,000
National Park Service	43,304,300
Fish and Wildlife Service	11,387,000
Office of Territories	19,000,000
Administration	2,065,000
Subtotal	$206,680,156

Related Agencies

Commission of Fine Arts	$ 21,200
Federal Coal Mine Safety Board of Review	70,000
Forest Service, Department of Agriculture	84,536,690
Indian Claims Commission	119,500
Jamestown-Williamsburg Yorktown Celebration Commission	100,000
National Capital Planning Commission	643,000
Smithsonian Institution	5,355,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration Commission	10,000
Virgin Islands Corporation	390,000
Subtotal	$ 91,245,390
TOTAL	$297,925,546

DEBATE -- Rep. Frank Chelf (D Ky.) introduced an amendment to cut from the bill $345,700 requested for construction of a new superhighway at Mammoth Cave National Park, Ky. Chelf said the highway would destroy the natural beauty of the park and jeopardize private investment in tourist facilities.

Rep. Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) introduced an amendment, which was rejected, to add $400,000 to the Department of Agriculture Forest Service for a new seedling program.

Sam Rayburn (D Texas), Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) -- Sought assurance that inclusion of Forest Service funds in the Interior Department appropriation bill was not "an entering wedge" for the Department to take over the Service from the Agriculture Department.

Michael J. Kirwan (D Ohio) -- Considering funds for the Forest Service, Park Service, and Land Management in one bill "is the only way" to uncover overlapping among agencies administering public lands.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Chelf -- Delete $345,700 from the $20,000,000 requested for National Park Service Highway construction. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Gavin -- Provide an additional $400,000 for the state and private forestry cooperation of the Department of Agriculture Forest Service. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 2 reported HR 5085 (S Rept 261), recommending amendments to provide $30,061,542 more than the House had voted. The Committee version came to $13,464,032 more than the President requested. (After House action on the bill Mr. Eisenhower had made a supplemental request of $1,170,000 for the Forest Service's pest control program.)

With the exception of a $25,000 cut in Office of Minerals Mobilization funds (in the Interior Secretary's office), all changes made by the Committee were additions to the House-approved total. The major additions recommended by the Committee were:

$5,421,642 for the Bureau of Indian Affairs to carry out its construction program, as requested in the budget, to finance timber sales, and to increase education and welfare services.

$2,500,000 for the Bureau of Mines to construct a new laboratory and conduct research in the distillation of coal and the direct reduction of low-grade iron ores to their minerals.

$2,076,400 for the National Park Service for park and recreation programs and construction.

$1,313,500 for management of resources and the construction program of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

$8,519,000 for the Office of Territories for administration and public works and construction of roads in Alaska. The Committee included the request of $5 million for Alaska public works which had been refused by the House because, the Senate group said, the program was "essential to the civilian needs due largely to the activities of the military in the area."

$9,290,000 for the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture for activities such as forest protection and management, control of forest pests, research, and state and private forestry cooperation.

In addition, the Committee recommended $150,000 for the Agriculture Department's Research Service, to build roads in the National Arboretum. Neither the Budget nor the House included the item.

Floor Action

The Senate May 5 passed HR 5085 by voice vote, with committee amendments bringing the total appropriation to $327,987,088. There were no floor amendments.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5085, as approved by the Senate:

Interior
Office of the Secretary	$ 3,540,000
Bureau of Land Management	15,800,000
Bureau of Indian Affairs	71,932,498
Geological Survey	26,985,000
Bureau of Mines	21,363,000
National Park Service	45,380,700
Fish and Wildlife Service	12,700,500
Office of Territories	27,519,000
Administration	2,081,000
Subtotal	$227,301,698
Related Agencies
Commission of Fine Arts	$ 21,200
Federal Coal Mine Safety Board of Review	70,000
Agricultural Research Service, Department of Agriculture	150,000
Forest Service, Department of Agriculture	93,826,690
Indian Claims Commission	119,500
Jamestown-Williamsburg-Yorktown Celebration Commission	100,000
National Capital Planning Commission	643,000
Smithsonian Institution	5,355,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration Commission	10,000
Virgin Islands Corporation	390,000
Subtotal	$100,685,390
TOTAL	$327,987,088

The Senate version of the bill also:

Provided for transfer of funds for the continuation of the construction of the Devils Kitchen Dam in Illinois to the Corps of Engineers, Department of Army.

Authorized the use of $3.1 million from funds held in trust for the various Indian tribes.

DEBATE -- Brief debate preceding passage of the bill centered on the appropriation to the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- The appropriation in the bill "will not only safeguard what we have, but encourage more tree planting, and...will definitely assure some road construction which will assure better fire protection."

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- "The appropriation for this purpose should be far more liberal than it is in this bill... Small experiment stations...have been unable to develop because of lack of funds...they have already shown their worth...and the $300,000 included in the bill will give them a tremendous boost."

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate conference committee June 6 reported (H Rept 731) a compromise version of HR 5085. The report listed 13 amendments on which House and Senate managers disagreed, two instances of Senate managers acquiescing to the House version, and 22 cases in which House managers bowed to the Senate-approved version.

ACTION -- As approved by both the House and Senate June 8, the final version of HR 5085 appropriated $317,573,627 for the Interior Department and related agencies in fiscal 1956. The sum was $3,050,571 more than the President requested, $19,648,081 more than the original House version, and $10,413,461 less than the initial Senate grant.

The House approved the compromise version without debate. The chamber receded and concurred in 11 Senate amendments and changed two of them. It insisted on its disagreement with two Senate amendments dealing with the Bureau of Mines.

The Senate, after brief discussion, receded from the two of its amendments with which the House disagreed and concurred in the two House changes. The action cleared the bill for the President.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

HR 6499 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 634) May 26, 1955. Appropriations recommended: $21,890,700.

- Passed, unamended, by voice vote of the House June 1.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 573) June 17. Recommended: $27,166,300.
- Passed by the Senate, without floor amendment, by voice vote June 21.
- Conference report (H Rept 900) agreed to by the House and Senate June 23, by voice votes.

P.L. 110 -- Signed into law June 29. Final total: $27,166,300.

Funds for the Executive Office of the President and several small agencies were provided in the General Government Matters appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 6499).

FINAL PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in the bill, as signed by the President, were:

Executive Office of the President
President's compensation	$ 150,000
White House office	1,882,500
Special projects	1,250,000
Executive mansion and grounds	366,200
Bureau of the Budget	3,349,000
Council of Economic Advisers	325,000
National Security Council	240,000
Office of Defense Mobilization	2,125,000
President's Advisory Committee on Government Organization	60,000
Subtotal	$ 9,747,700
American Battle Monuments Commission	$ 3,920,000

Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, payment of Korean claims	$12,200,000
President's emergency fund	$ 1,000,000
Subversive Activities Control Board	$ 298,600
TOTAL	$27,166,300

The bill also would:

Establish the maximum amount payable for passenger motor vehicles, exclusive of buses, ambulances, and station wagons, at $1,350.

Continue the prohibition on the employment of certain aliens in continental United States.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower's budget called for $27,700,700. Revised estimates brought the total request to $28,777,700.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 26 reported a bill (HR 6499 -- H Rept 634) carrying recommended appropriations of $21,890,700 for the Executive Office of the President and general government agencies for fiscal 1956. The total approved by the Committee was $5,810,000 less than President Eisenhower requested.

The principal cut in the budget figures was a $4.2 million decrease in funds provided the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission for Korean war claims.

Floor Action

The House passed HR 6499 June 1 by voice vote, without change in the appropriations recommended by the Committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 6499, as approved by the House:

Executive Office of the President
President's compensation	$ 150,000
White House office	2,055,500
Executive mansion and grounds	366,200
Bureau of the Budget	3,349,000
Council of Economic Advisers	325,000
National Security Council	240,000
Office of Defense Mobilization	2,125,000
President's Advisory Committee on Government Organization	60,000
Subtotal	$ 8,670,700
American Battle Monuments Commission	$ 3,920,000
Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, payment of Korean claims	$ 8,000,000
President's emergency fund	$ 1,000,000
Subversive Activities Control Board	$ 300,000
TOTAL	$21,890,700

The bill would also:

Establish the maximum amount payable for passenger motor vehicles at $1,350.

Continue the prohibition on the employment of certain aliens in the continental United States.

DEBATE -- Members of the House Appropriations Committee explained the appropriations in HR 6499.

John F. Shelley (D Calif.) -- Discussed the funds appropriated to the President's Advisory Committee on Government Organization and criticized the Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government for going into "basic policy matters".

(See Congressional Record, June 1.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 17 reported HR 6499 (S Rept 573), recommending a $5,275,600 increase over the funds voted by the House. The Committee favored granting $1,250,000 asked by the President for special projects. It also urged the full amount for Korean war claims and a small cut in funds for the Subversive Activities Control Board.

Floor Action

The Senate June 21 passed the bill by voice vote, after agreeing to the Committee amendments.

PROVISIONS -- For the Senate version of HR 6499, see FINAL PROVISIONS, above.

DEBATE -- Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Explained the effect of the amendments.

(See Congressional Record, June 21.)

Conference

REPORT -- The House-Senate Conference Committee in its report (H Rept 900) agreed on the Senate's amendments except for the item for special projects, which was reported in dispute.

ACTION -- The House June 23 agreed to the conference report by voice vote and receded and concurred in the disputed Senate amendment. The Senate also accepted the report by voice vote June 23.

HOUSE FUNDS

H J Res 365 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1032) June 30, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $12,000.

- Passed by voice vote of the House, without amendment, June 30.
- Passed, unamended, by voice vote of the Senate, June 30.

P.L. 120 -- Signed into law June 30.

The joint resolution provided an additional sum, $12,000, for fiscal 1955 to operate the House of Representatives document folding room.

The House's regular funds for fiscal 1955 had been provided in the Legislative-Judiciary Appropriation bill, enacted in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 165ff.) Additional funds for the House and Senate also were provided in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1955. (See p. 247.)

INDEPENDENT OFFICES

HR 5240 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 304) March 26. Recommended appropriations: $5,845,595,375.

- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House March 30. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 144.) Appropriations voted: $5,845,595,375.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 411) June 2. Recommended: $5,882,379,500.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate June 6. Voted: $5,848,394,500.
- Conference report (H Rept 871) agreed to by voice vote of the House June 22, and the Senate June 23.

P.L. 112 -- Signed into law June 30. Final total: $5,842,458,500.

The Independent Offices appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 5240) granted nearly $4.5 billion for the Veterans Administration and $1.3 billion for 16 other agencies and the disaster relief fund of the President. The final total was less than either the House or Senate had voted originally.

PROVISIONS -- The final version provided the following funds:

Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial Commission	$ 15,000
Civil Service Commission	251,387,500
Federal Civil Defense Administration	56,350,000
Disaster relief	3,500,000
Federal Communications Commission	6,870,000
Federal Power Commission	4,650,000
Federal Trade Commission	4,262,500
General Accounting Office	31,981,000
General Services Administration	720,185,500
Housing & Home Finance Agency	149,950,000
Interstate Commerce Commission	12,121,000
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	72,700,000
National Capital Housing Authority	37,000
National Science Foundation	26,000,000
Renegotiation Board	4,150,000
Securities & Exchange Commission	4,955,000
Selective Service System	27,216,000
Veterans Administration	4,466,128,000
TOTAL	$5,842,458,500

The bill also would:

Authorize the Housing and Home Finance Agency to spend $23,095,000 for administrative expenses, the agency's administrator's office to use $10,750,000 for non-administrative expenses, and the Home Loan Bank Board to spend $2,995,000 for non-administrative expenses. These sums were non-appropriated funds.

Limit VA payments to educational institutions for attendance certificates and reports to $1 a month for each enrolled veteran.

Earmark $16,185,000 more than the President had requested for modernizing old VA hospitals, particularly for neuropsychiatric treatment.

Earmark $80,000 of FCC funds for a study of radio and television network broadcasting.

Earmark $50 million for HHFA capital grants for slum clearance and urban renewal.

Prevent the federal government from refusing to hire persons for classified Civil Service jobs because they were too old.

BACKGROUND -- The President, in his Budget and supplemental requests, asked for $5,640,140,000. In addition, the Budget Bureau suggested a $216 million payment for the government's share of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund.

Included in the President's requests were: $19,495,000 for the Civil Service Commission; $59,300,000 for the Federal Civil Defense Administration; $719,261,000 for the General Services Administration; $174,450,000 for the Housing and Home Finance Agency; and $4,452,370,000 for the Veterans Administration.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 26 reported HR 5240 (H Rept 304). The Committee recommended a total appropriation of $5,845,595,375. Included in it was $250 million for the government's payment to the Civil Service Retirement Fund. At the time, the Budget Bureau had not made a formal request for the payment but was working on a plan for permanent legislation to finance the government's share of the system.

The report said "the Committee is in accord with plans to put the fund on a sound financial basis and pending the submission of such legislation certainly a contribution should be made this year...as no contribution has been made for the last two years...The amount in the bill will keep the fund from deteriorating further."

The Committee denied funds for the National Security Training Commission until "the legislative committee acts on the subject matter of UMT (Universal Military Training.)" The Commission was established in 1951 to supervise the projected UMT program. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 274ff.) It had a part in drawing up the 1955 military reserve plan. (See p. 334.) The President had asked for $55,000 for the Commission.

The Committee approved in full the $548,900,000 requested for strategic stockpiling activities by the General Services Administration.

Floor Action

HR 5240 was passed by voice vote of the House March 30, without change in the appropriations recommended by the Committee. Points of order were successfully raised against six legislative provisions that the Committee had included in the bill. (House rules prohibit legislation in appropriation bills.)

The House rejected, by a 154-227 roll-call vote, an amendment by John Phillips (R Calif.) to restore one of the provisions deleted by a point of order. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.) It would have limited to $1 per month the fee paid educational institutions for reports on veterans enrolled. (Under PL 550, 82nd Congress, the fee per veteran was set at $1.50 but the fiscal 1955 appropriation reduced it to $1.)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5240, as approved by the House:

Civil Service Commission	$ 268,387,500
Federal Civil Defense Administration	53,400,000
Disaster Relief	2,000,000
Federal Communications Commission	6,870,000
Federal Power Commission	4,650,000
Federal Trade Commission	4,225,000
General Accounting Office	31,981,000
General Services Administration	716,610,000
Housing and Home Finance Agency	156,800,000
Interstate Commerce Commission	11,975,000
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	67,700,000
National Capital Housing Authority	37,000
National Science Foundation	22,250,000
Renegotiation Board	3,750,000
Securities & Exchange Commission	4,875,000
Selective Service System	26,958,875
Veterans Administration	4,463,126,000
TOTAL	$5,845,595,375

In addition to appropriating funds, HR 5240 also:

Set a limitation of $22,720,000 on the amounts of corporate funds to be expended by the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

DEBATE -- An amendment offered by Harold C. Ostertag (R N.Y.) to provide funds for protection against atomic fallout was agreed to by voice vote. Also agreed to, by voice vote, was an amendment by Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) to correct a federal government restriction of employment on the basis of maximum age. The House rejected three amendments to increase funds provided in HR 5240.

During debate on the bill, points of order against certain sections resulted in deletion from HR 5240 of provisions which would have:

Prohibited the Civil Service from imposing a requirement or limitation of maximum age in connection with certain positions in the competitive service.

Limited authority of the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency in connection with reorganizations and reallocations.

Required approval by the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees of any proposed advance, loan, contract for a capital grant, or contract for actual contributions of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Authorized $300,000 for a special study by the President of the Veterans Administration compensation and pensions program.

Provided that no part of a Veterans Administration appropriation would be available for outpatient dental services and treatment unless the dental condition was shown to be in existence at the time of discharge and application for treatment was made within one year after discharge.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Ostertag -- Provide for procurement and distribution to the states by the Federal Civil Defense Administration of devices to detect atomic fallout. Voice vote.

Yates -- Prevent allocation of classified civil service positions with a requirement of maximum age for such position. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Phillips -- Limit to $1 per month the fee to be paid to educational institutions for reports on veterans enrolled therein. Roll call, 154-227.

John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.) -- Increase appropriations to the Securities and Exchange Commission by $13,360 and $80,000. Voice.

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- Increase by $2,750,000 funds provided for salaries and expenses of the National Science Foundation.

Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) -- Set aside $1 million of the funds appropriated for hospital facilities of the Veterans Administration for surveys, plans and specifications for a VA hospital in the metropolitan area of Washington, D.C. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 2 reported HR 5240 (S Rept 411). In proposing total appropriations of $5,882,379,500, the Committee:

Recommended the following major increases over the House version: $8,800,000 for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $7,750,000 for the National Science Foundation, $7,151,000 for the General Services Administration, $6,004,000 for VA general operating expenses, $5,300,000 for Federal Civil Defense Administration stockpiling of emergency equipment, and $3 million for disaster relief.

Cut $10 million from the House allotment for the Housing and Home Finance Agency's slum clearance and urban renewal program, explaining the cut was based on lack of need for the money rather than on any attempt "to handicap" the program.

Agreed with the House in providing $16,185,000 more than the budget request for modernizing old VA hospitals, particularly for neuropsychiatric treatment.

Recommended new quarters for the Federal Communications Commission, whose housing it said was in "deplorable condition."

Earmarked $80,000 for a Federal Communications Commission study of radio and TV network broadcasting.

Restored $75,000 cut by the House from the Federal Trade Commission budget for studying mergers or pharmaceuticals.

Eliminated a House amendment to bar maximum age requirements for classified civil service jobs.

Recommended $25,000 to continue operation of the National Security Training Commission, for which the House provided nothing.

Floor Action

The Senate June 6 passed HR 5240 by voice vote. As amended on the floor, the measure would have granted nearly $34 million less than the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee, though the changes had the informal approval of Committee members. The total was $2,799,125 more than the House had voted.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5240, as approved by the Senate:

Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial Commission	$ 15,000
Civil Service Commission	234,387,500
Federal Civil Defense Administration	59,300,000
Disaster relief	5,000,000
Federal Communications Commission	6,870,000
Federal Power Commission	4,650,000
Federal Trade Commission	4,300,000
General Accounting Office	31,981,000
General Services Administration	723,761,000
Housing and Home Finance Agency	153,450,000
Interstate Commerce Commission	12,267,000
National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics	76,500,000
National Capital Housing Authority	37,000
National Science Foundation	30,000,000
National Security Training Commission	25,000
Renegotiation Board	4,250,000
Securities & Exchange Commission	4,997,000
Selective Service System	27,474,000
Veterans Administration	4,469,130,000
TOTAL	$5,848,394,500

In addition to appropriating funds, the bill as passed by the Senate also set a $22,985,000 limit on corporate funds the Housing and Home Finance Agency might spend.

DEBATE -- Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee that took testimony on the bill, explained the measure and offered several amendments that he said were approved by the Committee, but not included in the group's report.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), offering an amendment to cut the federal payment to the Civil Service Retirement Fund, said the Budget Bureau expected to propose a fixed, annual $216 million payment.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Magnuson -- Provide $15,000 for the Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial Commission, not considered by the House. Voice.

Magnuson -- Make $300,000 of the $161,004,000 Veterans Administration operating expense allotment available for a special study of the VA compensation and pensions program. Voice.

Magnuson -- Limit VA payments to educational institutions for attendance reports and certificates to $1 a month for each enrolled veteran. Voice.

Magnuson -- Forbid use of VA funds for out-patient dental care in service-connected dental disability cases unless the disability was manifest at time of discharge and application for treatment was made within a year of discharge. Voice.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Appropriate $216 million for the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, instead of $250 million as passed by the House and recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate Conference Committee June 21 reported (H Rept 871) a compromise version of HR 5240 that granted less money than had either the House or Senate. The report recommended that the Senate recede from 15 amendments and that the House recede from its disagreement to three other Senate amendments. Compromises were reached on 39 other differences between the bill's two versions. Three amendments were reported in dispute.

Conferees eliminated Senate provisions that would have:

Provided $25,000 for continuing the National Security Training Commission. The agency thus was left without funds.

Earmarked $300,000 for a special Presidential study of veterans' compensation and pensions.

Forbidden use of VA funds for out-patient care in service-connected dental disability cases unless the disability had been manifest at the time of the veteran's discharge.

The government's payment to the Civil Service Retirement Fund was compromised at $233 million.

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 22 agreed to the conference report and receded and concurred in two Senate amendments that had been reported in dispute. One other House provision -- which would prevent the government from refusing to hire persons solely because of advanced age -- was in dispute. The provision, which had been deleted by the Senate, was restored June 22 by the House, which added a proviso that "ability...and qualifications for employment to such positions" would govern hiring of older persons.

DEBATE -- Yates -- The provision for hiring persons regardless of age "is a significant and progressive step toward breaking down one of the most unfair and unreasonable employment evils confronting our aging citizens."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 23 agreed to the conference report and concurred in the disputed House amendment on federal hiring of old persons. The action cleared the $5,842,458,500 bill for the President.

DEBATE -- Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- The House had insisted on eliminating $25,000 for the National Security Training Commission, leaving it without funds. "I hope it can obtain some money from the President's emergency fund, or from some of the White House services."

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "...This is false economy." He hoped a way would be found to provide the Commission with funds.

Funds for the National Security Training Commission and the President's Commission on Veterans' Pensions, headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, later were included in the Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 7278), which Congress passed shortly before adjournment. (See p. 242.)

COMMERCE

HR 6367 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 603) May 19, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $1,121,435,000.

- Passed by the House, with amendments, by voice vote May 24. Appropriation voted: $1,123,685,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 512) June 10. Recommended: $1,314,617,300.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote June 16. Voted: $1,317,192,300. (For roll-call votes on amendments, see p. 128.)
- Conference report (H Rept 994) agreed to by the House and Senate June 29, both by voice votes.

P.L. 121 -- Signed into law June 30. Final appropriation: $1,245,360,000.

Controversy over the Department of Commerce and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1956, centered on subsidies -- for airlines, maritime operations, and ship construction.

The final version carried $52.5 million for airline subsidies. In the Senate, Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) led a fight to hold payments to airlines to the $40 million House figure, but Senators approved $55 million, by a 51-24 roll-call vote.

The Senate also approved, by a 53-20 roll-call vote, $102.8 million for ship-building subsidies. The House had voted $64.7 million. The final version appropriated $86,450,000, including $10 million for a high-speed, conventionally-propelled, prototype tanker. In compromising the two chambers' versions of the bill, Congress discarded a Senate plan to build two prototype dry cargo vessels.

The Senate also agreed, by division vote, to boost maritime operating subsidies to $115 million. The House had voted $90 million. In the final version, Congress compromised on $110 million.

The final overall appropriation was $121,033,000 less than the President requested.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6367, as it became law:

Commerce Department

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,172,000
Census Bureau	16,400,000
Civil Aeronautics Administration	160,175,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	56,625,000
Coast and Geodetic Survey	10,225,000
Business and Defense Services Administration	6,198,000
Bureau of Foreign Commerce	4,650,000
Office of Business Economics	900,000
Maritime Activities	219,545,000
Patent Office	14,000,000
Bureau of Public Roads	689,000,000
National Bureau of Standards	7,995,000
Weather Bureau	39,500,000
Subtotal	$1,227,385,000

Related Agencies

Panama Canal Zone Government	$ 16,300,000
Advisory Committee on Weather Control	275,000
Tariff Commission	1,400,000
Subtotal	$ 17,975,000
TOTAL	$1,245,360,000

The bill also:

Appropriated $52.5 million for airline subsidies, $110 million for maritime operating subsidies, and $86,450,000 for ship-building subsidies.

Appropriated $7.5 million for new Weather Bureau meteorological facilities, and $4,250,000 for improving storm warning services.

Appropriated $25,250,000 for accelerated construction of the Inter-American Highway.

Set a $1.5 million limit on use of vessels operations revolving funds for ships involved in forfeiture or foreclosure proceedings instituted by the government.

Authorized $14,000 for the Inland Waterways Corporation.

Authorized the Panama Canal Co. to spend $3,740,000 out of corporate funds for administrative expenses.

Authorized the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation to spend $280,000 out of corporate funds for administrative expenses.

Provided that unexpended balances of previous appropriations for the "federal-aid airport program" would be merged with "grants-in-aid for airports."

BUDGET REQUESTS

President Eisenhower originally requested $1,277,555,000 for the Commerce Department and $18,593,000 for related agencies in fiscal 1956. On April 12, he submitted additional requests of $70,245,000 for Commerce Department agencies, including $69,230,000 for Bureau of Public Roads' use in speeding construction of the Inter-American Highway. These supplemental requests boosted the amount sought for the Department to $1,347,800,000 and the overall budget estimate for HR 6367 to $1,366,393,000.

The President sought the following subsidies: airlines, $63 million; maritime operations, $115 million; and ship-building, $102.8 million.

After the bill was signed, the President requested a supplemental grant of $60 million, chiefly for ship construction subsidies, and $12,650,000 for building the hull of an atomic merchant vessel. Congress refused these requests when it considered the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation Act (HR 7278 -- PL 219), enacted Aug. 4. (See p. 242.)

In all, the President submitted supplemental requests for the Commerce Department totaling $129,454,000, plus $27.7 million for the related Small Business Administration, which had been extended till 1957 in S 2127 (PL 268).

TOTAL FUNDS

The regular fiscal 1955 Commerce Department appropriation was $837,022,000. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 169ff.) Supplemental appropriations boosted fiscal 1955 Commerce funds to $1,130,632,746. Another $810,000, net, was transferred to other agencies.

Fiscal 1956 Commerce Department supplemental appropriations, totaling $41,689,000, were: CAA operation and regulation, $600,000; CAA construction, Washington, D.C., National Airport, $2.6 million; Coast and Geodetic Survey, $159,000; maritime training, $100,000; Bureau of Public Roads, Inter-American Highway, $37,730,000; and Weather Bureau, hurricane and tornado warning service, $500,000. The supplemental appropriation brought fiscal 1956 funds for the Inter-American Highway to $62,980,000, and funds for improved Weather Bureau storm warning facilities to $4,750,000.

Regular and supplemental fiscal 1956 Commerce Department appropriations voted in 1955 totaled $1,269,-074,000. A $27 million Small Business Administration supplemental grant raised the 1956 sum for related agencies to $44,975,000. Altogether, then, the Commerce Department and related agencies got $1,314,049,000 for fiscal 1956.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Department of Commerce and Related Agencies Subcommittee.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- May 13 of closed hearings held April 18 - May 3 on budget requests of the Department of Commerce and related agencies for fiscal 1956.

TESTIMONY -- April 18 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks outlined his Department's request for fiscal 1956 appropriations totaling $1,347,800,000. Weeks said this amount would provide for 37,311 employees of the Department as compared with 36,196 employees in fiscal 1955.

The Secretary said the request of the Civil Aeronautics Administration showed an increase of $30 million which would be used principally for the establishment of air navigation facilities.

ACTION -- May 19 a bill was reported (HR 6367 -- H Rept 603) to provide $1,121,435,000 for the Department of Commerce and related agencies for fiscal 1956. The total recommended was $244,958,000 less than the Administration's request.

The breakdown of funds in HR 6367, as approved by the Committee:

Commerce Department	$1,103,560,000
Panama Canal Zone	16,300,000
Advisory Committee on Weather Control	175,000
Tariff Commission	1,400,000

The bill also would limit administrative expenses of the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation to $280,000.

The Committee cut the funds requested by the Civil Aeronautics Administration by $3,150,000, but said this was done "in such a manner that safety in aviation will not be affected." The grants-in-aid program for airports was increased $9 million by the Committee, which said "the need for more adequate airports throughout the country...fully supports the increase." The report added that it was uneconomical to continue to appropriate funds in small amounts.

The Committee cut the Civil Aeronautics Board subsidy payments to air carriers by $23 million because, it said, "substantial reductions" could be made if a "careful and thorough audit of each claim is made and if realistic practices in the handling of these claims are followed."

The Patent Office received an increase of $2 million over its estimate because, the Committee said, it was necessary to place patent work on a more current basis "as rapidly as is feasible and practicable." The group reported "close to a four-year backlog of patent applications."

It was recommended that the federal-aid highway program of the Bureau of Public Roads be cut to $80 million less than the fiscal 1956 estimate. The Inter-American Highway program was cut $66,980,000 below the request.

Floor Action

The House May 24 passed HR 6367 by voice vote. An amendment to add $2,250,000 to the Weather Bureau funds recommended by the Appropriations Committee brought the bill's total to $1,123,685,000. That was $242,708,000 less than President Eisenhower had requested.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 6367, as approved by the House:

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,172,000
Census Bureau	15,700,000
Civil Aeronautics Administration	159,525,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	43,900,000
Coast and Geodetic Survey	10,200,000
Business and Defense Services Administration	6,198,000
Bureau of Foreign Commerce	4,300,000
Office of Business Economics	975,000
Maritime Activities	177,445,000
Patent Office	14,000,000
Bureau of Public Roads	628,500,000
National Bureau of Standards	7,995,000
Weather Bureau	34,900,000
Panama Canal Zone	16,300,000
Advisory Committee on Weather Control	175,000
Tariff Commission	1,400,000
TOTAL	$1,123,685,000

The bill also would:

Provide that unexpended balances of previous appropriations made to the "federal-aid airport program, Federal Airport Act" would be merged under the provision for "grants-in-aid for airports."

Limit the number of contracts, negotiated by the Federal Maritime Board, which would obligate the government to pay certain operating differential subsidies.

DEBATE -- Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.) -- Her amendment to publish monthly reports on U.S. coffee stocks was "intended to close a serious gap in our statistical information involving America's biggest import item...Hundreds of millions of dollars were taken out of the pockets of American consumers (in 1953-54) in tribute to a shortage which never existed...but we did not know that for sure, for the statistics once kept by the Census Bureau on coffee stocks on hand had been discontinued."

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "I support the...amendment. I only wish that statistics regarding the importation of canned Polish hams and bacon could be included."

Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) -- During hearings, Census Bureau representatives said they had made a census of coffee in 1954 and "they could make it quarterly on the present budget...I hope the amendment will be defeated."

John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) -- His amendment to increase hurricane warning facilities would cost "less than 1 percent of the total property damage that occurs every year in storms in the United States."

James T. Patterson (R Conn.) -- "I feel that our citizens should be guaranteed a much greater reduction in unnecessary loss of life and property damage from storms...than can be procured through such a meaningless amount ($2,250,000) as adopted today."

(See Congressional Record, May 24.)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) -- Increase Weather Bureau funds by $2,250,000 to improve hurricane warning system. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.) -- Increase Bureau of the Census funds by $25,000 in order to gather and publish monthly reports of coffee stocks in the United States. Teller, 54-61.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Department of Commerce and Related Agencies Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 24-June 4 on HR 6367.

TESTIMONY -- May 24 -- Secretary of Commerce Weeks said: "Crowded condition of the airways is one of the real problems today, and is getting worse all the time." He stressed that "we are not well advised unless we put our emphasis on (air) navigation facilities and... research."

HIGHER FUNDS REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 10 reported HR 6367, with amendments, recommending $1,314,617,300 for the Commerce Department and related agencies. The amount was $190,932,300 more than the House voted.

Major Committee increases over the House version included: $4,125,000 for CAA operation and regulation, $15 million for CAB subsidies to airlines, $38.1 million for ship construction, $25 million for maritime operating differential subsidies, $80 million for liquidation of obligations for federal aid to state highway construction, $6.5 million for liquidation of contract authority granted for forest highways, $17,250,000 for the Inter-American highway, and $2.1 million for the Weather Bureau.

The Committee also:

Allotted $4,250,000 of the Weather Bureau's funds for improvement of hurricane, storm, and tornado warning services, including stationing a weather ship in the Gulf of Mexico.

Provided $500,000 for a Census Bureau interim survey of housing.

Directed the CAA to continue operating all air navigation aid stations and facilities.

Cut $2.5 million from the House-approved fund for CAA establishment of air navigation facilities and cautioned the Administration to "proceed slowly" with new equipment installations "while the question of the type (of navigation aids) permanently to be used is being determined."

Increased from 1,847 -- the number approved by the House -- to 2,000 the number of yearly voyages for which the Federal Maritime Board could contract under obligation to pay operating differential subsidies.

Provided funds for construction of one prototype high speed tanker and two prototype cargo ships, all conventionally propelled, as defense measures.

Provided that the Vessel Operations Revolving Fund, established in 1951, would be available for expenses of mortgage-foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the U.S. against ships.

Floor Action

The Senate June 16 passed the bill by voice vote, amended to appropriate $1,317,192,300 for the Commerce Department and related agencies. Before passage, the Senate amended one Committee amendment, agreed to all other Committee amendments, including three controversial ones, and agreed to two amendments from the floor.

The Senate accepted, by a roll-call vote of 51-24, a Committee amendment to increase airline subsidies to $55 million; the House had voted $40 million. By a 53-20 roll-call vote, the Senate agreed to a Committee amendment to boost funds for ship construction from $64.7 million to $102.8 million. (For voting, see chart, p. 128.)

The chamber also agreed, by division vote, to a Committee amendment to increase maritime operational subsidies from $90 million to $115 million.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6367, as approved by the Senate and sent to conference:

Office of the Secretary	$ 2,217,300
Census Bureau	17,100,000
Civil Aeronautics Administration	161,915,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	59,125,000
Coast and Geodetic Survey	10,225,000
Business & Defense Services Administration	6,975,000
Bureau of Foreign Commerce	5,000,000
Office of Business Economics	900,000
Maritime Activities	241,245,000
Patent Office	14,000,000
Bureau of Public Roads	732,250,000
National Bureau of Standards	8,445,000
Weather Bureau	39,500,000
Panama Canal Zone	16,600,000
Advisory Committee on Weather Control	295,000
Tariff Commission	1,400,000
TOTAL	$1,317,192,300

The bill also would:

Limit administrative expenses of the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation to $280,000.

Provide that unexpended balances of previous appropriations for the "federal-aid airport program, Federal Airport Act," would be merged with "grants-in-aid for airports."

DEBATE -- June 14 -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- A total of $126.5 million of the proposed Senate increase over House-approved funds was for paying government obligations.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Opposed a Committee amendment to increase airline subsidies from $40 million to $55 million. If the amendment were accepted, fiscal 1956 government payments to airlines would total $132 million. Pan American Airways, recipient of a large share of the payments, wholly owns the International Hotels Corp., which operates a chain of nine luxury hotels. A subsidy to Pan American is a subsidy to the hotel chain. "We talk a great deal about economy. There seems, however, to be a tendency to apply the paring knife only when any expenditure involving the poor or the weak is involved, but Congress and the Administration go ahead and dish out the money in profusion for those groups which need it the least."

Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- Proposed an amendment to increase from $5 million to $10 million the Weather Bureau's appropriation for establishing meteorological facilities. The larger sum would provide "55 modern long-range radar stations to locate, analyze, and track hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms." The $5 million would allow for only 12 such stations. With $10 million, also, 150 -- rather than 45 -- airports could be equipped with cloud-height and visibility measuring devices. "We no longer should endorse the snail's pace of storm warning improvements which extremely limited funds have forced on our weather forecasters." (Green June 16 amended his proposal to add $2.5 million -- instead of $5 million -- to Weather Bureau funds).

June 15 -- The Senate agreed to non-controversial Committee amendments.

June 16 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "I am not in favor of having the federal government spend $23 million as a subsidy for the construction of tankers on the understanding that they will have a speed of 18 knots, and then have these subsidies paid to companies building ...slow speed tankers.... In the past the money was used...to pay for tankers...which did not have that speed (of 18 knots). The money has been spent and we still have an obsolete tanker fleet...It is a complete waste of the taxpayers' money."

(See Congressional Record, June 14-16.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 16 -- Holland -- Add $375,000 to the limit on funds that might be transferred from other accounts to the authorization for administrative and warehouse expenses under the ship construction program. Voice.

Green -- Add $2.5 million to Weather Bureau funds for establishing meteorological facilities. Voice.

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Amend a Committee amendment, by adding $75,000 to Business and Defense Services Administration funds and earmarking $345,000 of the agency's funds for the Area Development Division. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate Conference Committee June 28 reported (H Rept 994) a compromise version of HR 6367.

Conferees directed that the CAA continue to operate all its air safety, control and navigation aids until after the House and Senate Appropriations Committees received "a comprehensive plan for future air-traffic-control routes, facilities and stations."

Conferees also:

Deleted $500,000 for a Census Bureau intercensal housing survey.

Eliminated a Senate provision earmarking $345,000 for the Business and Defense Services Administration's Area Development Division.

Authorized transfer of $1 million from other accounts to administrative and warehouse expense funds under the ship construction program. (The House had voted $900,000 and the Senate added $345,000.)

HOUSE ACTION

The House June 29 agreed, by voice vote, and without debate, to the conference report.

The chamber concurred in four Senate amendments that had been reported in dispute. Representatives agreed to amend two other Senate amendments on which conferees could not compromise. The first House amendment set a $1.5 million limit on use of vessels operations revolving funds for craft involved in forfeiture or foreclosure proceedings initiated by the government. The other provided for promoting the Army's Panama Canal Zone governor to the rank of major general on the day before his retirement (instead of on July 1, 1955, as the Senate voted).

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 29 agreed to the conference report and concurred in the two House amendments, clearing the bill for the President.

DEBATE -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- The final bill split the difference between the $600 million voted by the House and the $680 million approved by the Senate for Bureau of Public Roads liquidation of federal aid to highway contracts.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

HR 6239 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 589) May 12, 1955. Recommended District of Columbia budget: $166,547,509. Recommended federal payment (appropriation) to the District: $17,892,700.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote, May 19. Budget voted: $166,901,780. Federal payment voted: $17,892,700.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 623) June 22. Recommended budget: $169,456,749. Recommended federal payment: $21,892,700.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote, June 23. Budget voted: $169,456,749. Federal payment voted: $21,892,700.
- Conference report (H Rept 1031) agreed to June 30 by the House and Senate, both by voice vote.

PL 131 -- Signed into law July 5. Final budget: $168,843,440. Final federal payment: $19,892,700.

The District of Columbia Appropriation Act, 1956, carried a budget for the capital's operating expenses and capital outlay that was $6,618,580 lower than budget recommendations. Federal appropriations, $2 million less than requested, and loans, of the same value as recommended to Congress, were made to augment District revenues.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of the fiscal 1956 D.C. budget, as it became law:

Sanitary sewage works fund	700,000
Water fund	3,000,000
TOTAL	$ 9,700,000

BACKGROUND -- The Eisenhower Administration originally sent Congress a $175,184,000 District budget for fiscal 1956. The Administration later submitted $221,300 in additional budget requests, which the House considered for HR 6239, and $56,720, which the Senate considered. Total budget requests for HR 6239, therefore, were $175,462,020.

The Administration sought a $21,892,700 federal payment, and $9.7 million in federal loan authorizations for capital outlay.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, District of Columbia Subcommittee.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- May 9 of closed hearings held April 14-29 on the budget requests of the District of Columbia for fiscal 1956.

TESTIMONY -- April 14 -- Samuel Spencer, president of the D.C. board of commissioners, said the fiscal 1956 request for the District was $175,405,300.

ACTION -- May 12 reportd HR 6239 (H Rept 589). The Committee's report said that "fiscal irresponsibility seems to be the keynote of the 1956 District budget." Such "fiscal irresponsibility," the report said, "leaves the Committee with but one alternative and that is to reduce the budget."

The group recommended reducing the federal payment to the general fund by $4 million, and said it was "well aware of the furor that will ensue." The Committee said such action was "justified since the local officials, who are aware of the situation, are not doing everything within their own power to alleviate...the financial crisis of the District." The recommended federal payment, thus, was $17,892,700.

The House Committee also proposed a $166,547,509 District budget and federal loans of $9.7 million.

Floor Action

The House May 19 passed the bill by voice vote, with an amendment to increase the D.C. budget to $166,901,780. The bill carried, unchanged, the federal contribution toward D.C. operating costs and loan authorizations recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

A recommittal motion by Rep. H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) was rejected by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Much of the debate was on the $4 million cut in the federal contribution to the District.

Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- The government bargained with the District to put up $15 million a year, and said it would add $9 million to D.C. funds. It was up to the House whether it would "carry out this contract or bargain which in all propriety we made with the people...

under which we raised their taxes $15 million a year."

Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) -- Would not pass judgment on the efficiency of the District officials who were criticized in the Committee report, but said "Congress should not take out our wrath" on the D.C. citizens. "If they lived in another city in America, (they) could go to the polls...and turn out of office any officials who had proved to be irresponsible or lackadaisical...but in Washington... Congress will not let them."

Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.) -- "If you do not want these schools and these additions which are so badly needed... you could not more effectively cut them off" than by cutting the federal contribution.

(See Congressional Record, May 19.)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.) -- Increase budget for Public Welfare Department by $354,271. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) -- Increase budget for Public Schools by $267,499 to provide for additional teaching positions, clerks, and for maintenance and repair of schools. Voice.

Smith -- Increase amount of federal contribution to the District by $4 million. Standing, 59-71; teller 85-86.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, District of Columbia Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 8-10 on the District budget.

TESTIMONY -- June 8 -- Commissioner Spencer "strongly urged" restoration of the $4 million the House cut from the federal payment, lest the city's public works program be jeopardized.

ACTION -- June 22 the Committee reported (S Rept 623) the bill, recommending a $169,456,749 D.C. budget, a $21,892,700 federal payment, and $9.7 million in federal loans.

In contrast to the House Committee's views, the Senate Committee commended the District Commissioners and their associates for their "high degree of fiscal responsibility."

Floor Action

The Senate June 23 passed HR 6239, by voice vote, with amendments. The Senate version included the same budget, federal payment, and loan provisions as the Appropriations Committee recommended.

DEBATE -- John Stennis (D Miss.) -- "As to the $2.5 million increase (in the District budget) recommended by the Committee, about $1.1 million relates to capital outlay items, including" funds for a new library, fire house, Women's Bureau building, "and $1.5 million to begin construction of the new Potomac River bridge." (The Committee cut $2.6 million from the $3.2 House allowance for starting constructing on a Youth Correctional Center at Lorton, Va.).

(See Congressional Record, June 23.)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Permit a bridge authorized across the Potomac River from Washington to Virginia to cross or touch the south end of Theodore Roosevelt Island if the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Association agreed by Aug. 1, 1955. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House Conference June 29 reported (H Rept 1031) a compromise version of HR 6239. The major compromise was to appropriate an $18 million federal payment to District general funds. The House had voted $16 million; the Senate $20 million. Conferees reported agreements on all differences between Senate and House versions of the bill.

ACTION -- The House and Senate, by voice votes June 30, agreed, without debate to the conference report recommending a compromise $168,843,440 District of Columbia budget.

STATE, JUSTICE, JUDICIARY

HR 5502
- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 417) April 13, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $450,398,227.

U.S. Information Agency	$ 85,000,000
Refugee relief	$ 15,000,000
TOTAL	$466,302,415

In addition to appropriating funds, the bill:

Authorized non-appropriated fund expenditures of $2,800,000 by the Office of Alien Property, $2,801,900 by referees in bankruptcy, and $850,000 by Federal Prison Industries, Inc.

Limited administrative expenses for State Department acquisition of buildings abroad to $900,000.

Restricted administrative spending for international educational exchange activities to $3.3 million.

Prohibited use of international educational exchange activities funds for "sending foreign students from their country to study at a foreign university of another foreign country."

Provided for transfer of funds for the Rama Road, Nicaragua, from the State Department to the Commerce Department.

Barred use of funds for "promotion of the principles ...of one world government or one world citizenship."

Declared it "the sense of Congress that the Communist Chinese Government should not be admitted to... the United Nations as the representative of China."

Background

President Eisenhower initially requested $483,531,912 for the agencies in fiscal 1956. The breakdown: State, $147,267,197; Justice, $201,485,000; judiciary, $30,279,715; United States Information Agency, $88.5 million; refugee relief, $16 million. Included in the President's request was $22 million for State Department international education exchange activities.

Considered in the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation Act (HR 7278 -- PL 219) were additional Presidential requests of $5,756,000 for State; $18,635,000 for Justice, including $17.1 million for new federal prisons; $2,915,500 for the judiciary; $430,000 for USIA, and $6 million for the President's emergency fund for international affairs (see p. 242.) Total budget requests for fiscal 1956, therefore, were $517,268,412.

FISCAL 1955 FUNDS

Fiscal 1955 regular appropriations were $113,910,000 for State Department, $176,864,500 for Justice Department, $27,501,740 for the judiciary, and $73,914,000 for USIA. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 165, 169.) In addition, the first fiscal 1955 supplemental money bill carried $800,000 for State, $4.5 million for Justice, $225,835 for the judiciary, $8 million for refugee relief, and $5 million for the President's emergency fund for international affairs. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 175.)

The first session of the 84th Congress voted $4,698,267 for Justice and $1,436,800 for the judiciary in the second fiscal 1955 supplementary appropriation (HR 4903 -- PL 24). (See p. 247.) The 84th Congress also voted an additional $710,000 for Justice in H J Res 252 -- PL 13. (See p. 249.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPTS -- April 4, 5, 11, and 12 of closed hearings on budget requests presented to the Departments of State and Justice, Judiciary, and Related Agencies Subcommittee.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 2 -- Supreme Court Justice Harold H. Burton said the increase in the $1,536,785 request for the Court was caused by additional court building maintenance. Expenses of the operation of the Court showed a slight decrease, he said.

Feb. 9 -- Samuel C. Waugh, Assistant Secretary of State for economic affairs, said the State Department would favor sale of "any perishable material (such as) agricultural surpluses to Russia for any needed strategic material" the United States could get.

Feb. 10 -- Dennis A. Flinn, Office of Security director, said three persons had been separated from the State Department during the past year as security risks.

Feb. 22 -- Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., said the Justice Department's Internal Security Division sought the largest increase of all legal branches "to carry forward the investigative work...to which it was directed -- successful prosecution of the Communist conspirators in the courts."

Feb. 24 -- J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, requested $88 million for the FBI. Hoover said Communist activities in labor unions posed a "tremendous threat to the nation's security."

March 3 -- USIA Director Theodore C. Streibert said the Soviet bloc had spent $3 billion on propaganda in 1953, the last year for which figures were available. He requested a fiscal 1956 appropriation of $88.5 million for USIA.

STUDENT EXCHANGE CUT

ACTION -- The Committee April 13 reported HR 5502 (H Rept 417), recommending appropriations of $450,398,227.

Budget requests for the State Department were cut by $20,497,220, including a slash of $10 million in the international education program. The Committee said "with the fiscal situation of the nation as it is...certain limitations" had to be made on programs "which cannot be classified as 'necessary'."

Justice Department requests were cut $3,960,000, and those of the judiciary by $676,465.

The request for the United States Information Agency was cut by $8 million, and the Committee's only critical remarks were aimed at USIA. The report said the agency was "expanding beyond the need...in some of the more friendly countries." It cited Switzerland as an example of a country where "Communist influence is practically negligible," but where a 30 percent increase in funds was requested.

The Committee refused a USIA request for $225,000 for distribution of "Profile of America," a book by Emily Davie.

Floor Action

The House April 14 passed HR 5502 by voice vote, after rejecting all floor amendments.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 5502, as approved by the House:

State Department
Salaries and expenses	$ 63,760,000
Foreign Service representation allowance	475,000
Building acquisition abroad	7,000,000
Diplomatic and Consular Service emergencies	1,000,000

Legal activities and general administration	$ 33,175,000
Federal Bureau of Investigation	88,000,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service	44,000,000
Federal prison system	32,350,000
Subtotal	$197,525,000
Judiciary
Supreme Court	$ 1,536,785
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals	235,755
Customs Court	598,270
Court of Claims	634,700
Courts of appeals, district courts, and other judicial services	26,597,740
Subtotal	$ 29,603,250
U.S. Information Agency	$ 80,500,000
Refugee relief	$ 16,000,000
TOTAL	$450,398,227

The bill also:

Limited funds for administrative expenses for acquisition of State Department buildings abroad to not more than $750,000.

Limited funds for administrative expenses for International Educational Exchange activities to not more than $2,400,000.

Provided for transfer of funds from the Rama Road appropriation to the Department of Commerce for performance of work on the road.

Prohibited the use of State Department funds in the bill to promote, directly or indirectly, the doctrine of one-world government or one-world citizenship.

Declared it the "sense of Congress" that the Communist Chinese government should not be admitted to membership in the United Nations as the representative of China.

Authorized $2,500,000 for fiscal 1956 for general administrative expenses of the Office of Alien Property, and provided that the Attorney General should report to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees by Nov. 1, 1955, on expenses incurred in connection with activities of the Office.

Authorized $850,000 for fiscal 1956 for the administrative expenses and the vocational training program of the Federal Prison Industries, Inc., of the Department of Justice.

FURTHER CUTS DEFEATED

DEBATE -- During five hours of debate on HR 5502, H.R. Gross (R Iowa) offered five amendments to cut amounts in the bill. All five, plus another by Clement J. Zablocki (D Wis.) to increase international education funds, were rejected.

Joseph P. O'Hara (R Minn.) offered an amendment to provide $350,000 for translating, printing, and distributing of American classics abroad by a non-rpofit organization. A point of order raised by John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) against this amendment was sustained. Rooney said the amendment was legislation on an appropriation bill for which there was no authority in law.

Considerable debate centered on the $10 million cut in the request for the State Department's international education activities.

Frances P. Bolton (R Ohio) -- "The reduction of the Department's student program would result in a decrease...in private support of student exchanges...and would eliminate from the general flow of students a very important group...contributing significantly to...international good will...."

James W. Trimble (D Ark.) -- "A drastic reduction... will confirm what many people abroad say about us -- that we care only about military expediency and have no real interest in their problems and...aspirations...."

Peter Frelinghuysen, Jr. (R N.J.) -- "...there is no case where the 'scalpel' has been used more clumsily than in the $10 million cut...(The program) should not be crippled by false economy."

O'Hara -- "The classics of American democracy that were the inspiration of our forefathers" should be distributed abroad. "I think we have a great deal that is unnecessary in the way of frills in our present program. This is no frill."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Gross (R Iowa) -- Delete all funds for the National Commission on Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Cooperation (National Commission for UNESCO). Voice vote.

Gross -- Decrease by $1,860,000 the amount provided for salaries and expenses of the Department of State. Voice.

Gross -- Place limitation on amount provided for salaries and expenses of the State Department which could be used to purchase foreign currencies or credits owed to or owned by the U.S. Treasury. Voice.

Gross -- Delete the $475,000 provided for entertainment funds of the Foreign Service Division of the State Department. Voice.

Gross -- Reduce by $6 million the U.S. contributions to the United Nations and other international organizations. Voice.

Clement J. Zablocki (D Wis.) -- Increase by $6.5 million the funds provided for international education exchange activities of the Department of State. Standing, 38-56.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 18 to May 17 on HR 5502 before the Departments of State and Justice, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Subcommittee.

TESTIMONY -- April 26 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said House budget cuts in his Department's funds would increase chances that "the cold war will become a hot war." Dulles said Department requests were "austere" and the House cut of $5 million in salaries and expenses for the Department would "undermine" efforts to train and recruit personnel. Dulles said he was "particularly concerned" about a cut in the embassy building program abroad.

April 27 -- Vice President Richard M. Nixon said the $10 million House cut in funds for the State Department international education program was "penny-wise and pound-foolish." He said that if he had to pick one information program as "indispensable," this was the one he would choose.

ACTION -- The Committee May 26 reported HR 5502 (S Rept 378), recommending the appropriation of $481,985,418 -- some $31.5 million more than the House had voted.

Floor Action

The Senate May 31 passed HR 5502 by voice vote, without floor amendments. The bill carried the amount recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 5502, as approved by the Senate:

State Department
Salaries and expenses	$ 68,700,000
Foreign Service representation allowance	700,000
Building acquisition abroad	12,201,000
Diplomatic and Consular Service emergencies	1,000,000
Contributions to international organizations	28,247,608
Missions to international organizations	$ 1,075,000
International contingencies	1,500,000
U.S.-Mexican International Boundary and Water Commission	1,635,000
American sections, International commissions, salaries and expenses	286,000
International fisheries commissions	455,000
International educational exchange activities	22,000,000
Occupied area governments	7,750,000
Rama Road	2,000,000
Subtotal	$147,549,608
Justice Department
Legal activities and general administration	$ 34,945,000
Federal Bureau of Investigation	88,000,000
Immigration and Naturalization Service	44,500,000
Federal prison system	33,000,000
Subtotal	$200,445,000
Judiciary
Supreme Court	$ 1,536,785
Court of Customs and Patent Appeals	235,755
Customs Court	598,270
Court of Claims	634,700
Courts of appeals, district courts, and other judicial services	27,635,300
Subtotal	$ 30,640,810
U.S. Information Agency	$ 88,350,000
Refugee relief	$ 15,000,000
TOTAL	$481,985,418

The bill also:

Limited administrative expenses for acquisition of State Department buildings abroad to $1 million.

Provided for transfer of Rama Road funds to the Department of Commerce for work performed on the road.

Prohibited use of State Department funds to promote one-world government or citizenship.

Declared it the "sense of Congress" that the Communist Chinese government should not be admitted to the United Nations as a representative of China.

Authorized $2,800,000 for general administrative expenses of the Office of Alien Property.

Authorized $850,000 for the administrative expenses and the vocational training program of the Federal Prison Industries, Inc., of the Department of Justice.

Authorized the Justice Department to interchange not to exceed 5 percent of its appropriations for legal activities, but to increase no appropriation by more than 5 percent.

DEBATE -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) submitted a statement on the administrative costs of the State Department's International Education Program. The amount for this program, as approved by the Senate, was increased $10 million over the amount approved by the House.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- There were "no dollars more profitably and more soundly expended" than those for the United States Information Agency.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee June 30 reported (H Rept 1043) a compromise version of HR 5502. Conferees deleted Senate language authorizing the USIA to use funds for "presentation of American books, including Profile of America."

A spokesman for Sen. Harley M. Kilgore (D W.Va.), conference committee chairman, said the book had not been "banned," the USIA could use its funds to buy whatever books it pleased, and the reference to "Profile of America" had been deleted because names of books usually were not mentioned in money bills.

Rep. John J. Rooney (D N.Y.), Appropriations Subcommittee chairman, said of the conferees' action: "I take it to mean that USIA at its peril -- that is, subject to Congressional criticism -- can buy whatever books it wants."

The author, Emily Davie, said that Rep. Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) and Rooney objected to her book because it did not flatter the United States. Congressional criticism reportedly centered on these items in the book: a picture entitled "Little Red Schoolhouse, 1750;" a photograph of a typical rural American school teacher said to be less attractive than a teacher shown in a Russian propaganda book; a picture of a dust bowl scene, and portions of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah! Wilderness" and Henry Thoreau's "Walden."

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 1 agreed to the conference report, concurred in seven of the nine Senate amendments that conferees had reported in disagreement, and amended the remaining two disputed Senate amendments. The House amendments:

Appropriated $300,000 (instead of $600,000 as the Senate proposed) for salaries and expenses of special temporary attorneys and assistants in the Justice Department.

Authorized at least $200,000 (instead of $350,000 as the Senate proposed) of the USIA appropriation for contracts with "private international" broadcasters beaming radio programs to the "free world."

DEBATE -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "I think it is shocking that more than a half-million dollars is earmarked for so-called entertainment" by the Foreign Service representation allowance.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 1 agreed to the conference report and concurred in the two House amendments, which brought total appropriations in the bill to $466,302,415.

DEBATE -- J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Opposed the conference agreement to cut international educational exchange activities to $18 million -- $4 million less than the Senate had voted, and $6 million more than the House had approved. "The $18 million figure represents an actual cut of $577,000 below the 1955 appropriation.... The effort to restrict the program" by barring use of funds for educating foreign students at a foreign university in another foreign country "is but another example...of the usurpation...of a legislative function" by the Appropriations Committee. The cut "will seriously cripple the program.... I have seen or heard nothing... that would justify this apparently arbitrary limitation...."

DEFENSE

HR 6042 --
- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 493) May 5, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $31,488,206,000.
- Passed by the House, with amendments on a 384-0 roll-call vote May 12. (See p. 148.) Appropriation voted: $31,488,206,000.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 545) June 14. Recommended: $31,836,521,336.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, on an 80-0 roll-call vote June 20. (See p. 129.) Voted: $31,882,915,726.
- Conference report (H Rept 1030) agreed to June 30 by the House and Senate, by voice votes.

P. L. 157 -- Signed into law July 13. Final appropriation: $31,882,815,726.

Congressional controversy about the Department of Defense Appropriation Act of fiscal 1956 (HR 6042) centered on armed forces manpower levels. Another conflict between lawmakers and the Administration developed when President Eisenhower protested against "riders" in the bill and said he would have vetoed it if defense funds were not so "urgently needed."

Armed forces active duty strength as of June 30, 1955; the number of men in uniform President Eisenhower sought by June 30, 1956; and the number Congress authorized for June 30, 1956, follow:

	Actual (1955)	Requested (1956)	Voted (1956)
Army	1,114,000	1,027,000	1,027,000
Navy	672,000	664,000	664,000
Marines	205,000	193,000	215,000
Air Force	970,000	975,000	975,000
TOTAL	2,961,000	2,859,000	2,881,000

Amendments offered in the House by Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) to add $413,793,500 to keep the Army and Navy at June 30, 1955, strength and to boost Marine Corps manpower to 215,000 were rejected by voice vote.

In the Senate, despite Democratic objections to the President's proposed military cuts, an effort was made to increase only Marine Corps strength. This was an amendment by Stuart Symington (D Mo.), former Air Force Secretary in the Truman Administration, to add $46,394,390 to bring the Marines up to 215,000 men. The Senate agreed to Symington's amendment by a 40-39 roll-call vote, after Russell B. Long (D La.) switched his vote from "nay" to "yea." (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

The Marine Corps increase was retained in the final version of the bill.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson July 14 impounded the funds voted to increase Marine Corps strength. The money would be held aside while he took "another look" at the manpower picture, Wilson said.

EISENHOWER OBJECTIONS

When President Eisenhower signed the bill into law July 13, he sent a message to Congress (H Doc 218) criticizing two "riders."

One provision granted the House and Senate Appropriations Committees authority to block the shifting to private industry of Defense Department work performed by civilians for three or more years. Describing the provision as "an unconstitutional invasion" of executive powers, Mr. Eisenhower said: "Congress has no right to confer upon its committees the power to veto executive action or to prevent executive action from becoming effective." He said he would regard the section "as invalid...unless otherwise determined by a court of competent jurisdiction."

The White House July 14 said Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr. believed the provision violated "the constitutional principle of separation of powers."

The second "rider" barred the Department from purchasing foreign-made spun silk yarn. Mr. Eisenhower said there was "no reason" to exempt the cloth from the Buy American Act and that "such provisions could effect a deadly attrition of our whole international trade policy." He asked Congress to repeal the provision "as soon as possible."

The bill also provided:

Non-appropriated expenditures of $31 million from the "account for preparation for sale or salvage of military property" and $7,960,000 from Navy ships' stores funds.

$356 million for speeding up B-52 bomber procurement.

A "Buy American" restriction on the indirect importation of spun silk yarn from China.

In addition, the bill:

Directed continuation of government civilian employees at work on projects they had conducted "for a period of three years or more," unless the Senate and House Appropriations Committees approved shifting the work to private industry. The Defense Department was required to give the Committees 90 days' notice of its intent to shift work to private firms.

Directed the Defense Department to make a special effort to give American small business an opportunity "to participate equitably in the furnishing of commodities and services" financed with funds in the bill.

Prohibited the use of funds in the bill to pay more than 475,000 full-time graded civilian employees at any one time during fiscal 1956.

Barred the use of funds in the bill "for the payment of a price differential on contracts...made for the purpose of relieving economic dislocations."

Placed a limitation of $3,270,000 on funds provided for public information and public relations.

Granted an increase from an average $235 to $240 a student in the amount the Department of Defense would be authorized to spend for the schooling of dependents of military and civilian personnel in foreign countries where adequate educational facilities were not available.

Authorized the Defense Department to transfer $50 million to the emergency fund from other department appropriations.

Background

Fiscal 1955 Defense Department appropriations were $28,800,070,486. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 153ff., 175ff.) The breakdown:

Office of Defense Secretary	$ 12,750,000
Interservice Activities	527,500,000
Army	7,619,066,986
Navy	9,712,823,500
Air Force	10,927,930,000
TOTAL	$28,800,070,486

In his fiscal 1956 Budget, President Eisenhower originally requested $31,405,000,000 for the Defense Department, later boosted the figure to $32,232,815,000. The breakdown of funds requested for the regular appropriation:

Office of the Secretary	$ 12,750,000
Interservice Activities	682,250,000
Army	7,573,980,000
Navy	9,180,157,000
Air Force	14,783,678,000
TOTAL	$32,232,815,000

During Senate Appropriations Committee hearings, Secretary of Defense Wilson requested another $356 million to speed up B-52 bomber procurement.

For consideration in the first fiscal 1956 supplemental appropriation bill (HR 7278 -- PL 219), the President submitted additional requests of $6,450,000 for interservice activities, $528,550,000 for Navy construction, and $945 million for Air Force construction. (See p. 242.)

NATIONAL SECURITY PLANS

In his Budget Message for fiscal 1956, the President Jan. 17 told Congress that national security measures would continue to be guided by "the concept of no assumed fixed date of maximum danger." Emphasis would be placed, he said, "on the development and maintenance of effective nuclear-air retaliatory power of the Air Force and naval aviation as the principal deterrent to military aggression."

Summarizing plans for greater national security, the President said "new weapons for defensive and retaliatory action are being developed and produced in increasing quantities. High priority is being given to strengthening our continental defense system." He added that the U.S. planned "to deliver about the same amount of military equipment to friendly nations as in 1954 and 1955."

The Budget projected a Defense Department spending program for fiscal 1956 of $34 billion -- $375 million less than fiscal 1955, and $6.3 billion under defense spending in fiscal 1954. The defense spending budget actually programmed for fiscal 1956 totaled $35,750,000,000, but it was anticipated that $1,750,000,000 would not be spent.

The President said "about two-thirds of the projected Defense Department expenditures in fiscal 1956 will be devoted to air power and related programs -- both offensive and defensive." And he said these expenditures would be "the largest in our peacetime history."

New obligational authority and spending estimates for the armed services as of Jan. 17, were, in billions:

	New Money	Spending
Army	$ 7.3	$ 8.9
Navy	8.9	9.7
Air Force	14.5	15.6

Later, new money requests boosted the total for the three service branches to $31.5 billion.

The Navy budget called for operation of 1,000 active ships, including 400 warships, an additional attack carrier, an increase to 17 carrier air groups (from 16), and maintenance of 15 antisubmarine warfare squadrons and some 10,000 Naval and Marine aircraft.

The Air Force would continue to build toward a goal of 137 air wings and was expected to have 130 wings -- 119 of them combat wings -- by June 30, 1956. The Army was expected to maintain 3,600 aircraft, with a 20 percent increase over the next two years in the number of helicopters.

The President said that by the end of fiscal 1956, "the total number of aircraft in combat units...will be approximately one-fourth greater than at the beginning of the current fiscal year," with a one-third increase in jet aircraft. He said the "present objective" was about 40,000 aircraft, with an expected increase from 34,000 to 36,000 by the end of fiscal 1956.

Fiscal 1956 supplemental appropriations made after enactment of the regular funds bill were: interservice activities, $6,450,000; Navy construction, $442,628,300; Air Force construction, $739,291,000 (net). (See p. 242.) These funds had been authorized in the Military Construction Act (HR 6829 -- PL 161). (See p. 343.)

For appropriations for Army civil functions, see the Public Works Appropriation (HR 6766 -- PL 163), p. 227.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HELD HEARINGS -- On the status of U.S. military strength.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 26 -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said he saw no need for "important increases" in the military forces "short of war," and intended to proceed with cutback plans which would reduce the Army from an approximate strength of 1,300,000 men to 1,027,000 by June 30, 1956. After enumerating planned increases in the Air Force and slightly decreased Navy and Marine strength by mid-1956, Wilson said he expected to stabilize the military forces by that date at about 2,850,000.

Jan. 27 -- Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott said the Air Force was "four wings ahead of schedule" in its buildup, and would have 131 wings, instead of 127, in active service by June 30, 1956.

Jan. 28 -- Secretary of Navy Charles S. Thomas said the Navy's planned strength at the end of fiscal 1956 -- 1,001 ships and 657,000 men -- was designed as a permanent level, barring a marked change in world conditions. Projected strength would reflect a 62,000-man reduction.

Adm. Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, said the Navy's striking force would be increased, despite a reduction in men and ships, by the addition of one attack carrier and an air group, providing for an increase of 120 operating aircraft.

Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Marine commandant, said about half of the cut projected for the Marines would come out of supporting and servicing units of combat forces, thus diminishing their "staying power." He said the Corps' three divisions and three air wings "are prepared to go into combat today, if need be."

Jan. 31 -- Secretary of Army Robert T. Stevens said the Army would maintain 13 mobile divisions, two fixed divisions (chiefly in Alaska, Hawaii and Panama), and three training divisions. Stevens defended the proposed Administration reduction. He said: "From fiscal year 1953 through fiscal year 1956, Army expenditures are being reduced from $16.2 billion to an estimated $8.9 billion." He said the Army cut represented 76 percent of the total "saving" on defense spending, adding, "we have a balanced program that is best for the country."

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, told the Committee that the proposed cutback in Army ground forces "jeopardizes" the safety of the United States. He declined to testify publicly whether the Joint Chiefs of Staff approved manpower cuts ordered by President Eisenhower for the armed services, nor how the reduction would affect U.S. capabilities to meet a crisis in the Far East. He said the cut would necessitate a "worldwide" redeployment of the Army.

WILSON DEFENDS BUDGET

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- On Defense Department budget requests. Subcommittee hearings were closed.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 31 -- Secretary of Defense Wilson said the "joint capabilities" of the armed services would be "greater" under the fiscal 1956 budget than they were under the 1955 spending program. Wilson said it was necessary for the United States to "reposition our expenditures and our manpower."

Feb. 7 -- Gen. Ridgway said the Russians were "increasing the combat effectiveness, the training level, and equipment" of their ground forces.

Feb. 10 -- Secretary of Air Force Talbott and Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff, agreed that the 1956 air program was adequate to meet the initial phase of any war and could be mobilized quickly.

Feb. 11 -- Secretary of Navy Thomas said 100 ships would be taken from active service by August, 1956, but they could "be reactivated very fast."

Feb. 15 -- Gen. Shepherd said he "would like to see a Marine Corps of 215,000 because I feel that is a well-balanced force." But he said he had accepted a manpower cut "as the decision of my superior."

March 4 -- Rear Adm. William L. Rees, assistant chief of naval operations for air, said the Navy air arm, then about 50 percent modernized, would be 85 percent modernized by December, 1957.

ACTION -- The Committee May 5 reported HR 6042 (H Rept 493), recommending a $31,488,206,000 appropriation.

The report said budget estimates were approved "substantially as presented." It said reductions were due to:

Elimination of funds provided to offset the use of foreign currencies.

Savings made by the Air Force through a review of older, outstanding contracts.

A balance of unobligated Navy funds not anticipated in the budget.

Savings made by Air Force reduction in flying hour requirements.

The Committee said it was "in full accord with the Department's plans to place an increasing emphasis on our reserve forces...(and) on continental air defense."

Floor Action

The House May 12 passed HR 6042 by a 384-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 148.) The House approved appropriation of $31,488,206,000.

Amendments designed to offset Administration plans to cut down the existing size of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps were defeated by voice votes. An attempt to delete a section requiring Congressional approval before the Defense Department could transfer certain work to private industry was voted down on a 184-202 roll call.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6042, as recommended by the Appropriations Committee and voted by the House:

Air National Guard	202,841,000
Subtotal	$14,401,904,000
TOTAL	$31,488,206,000

The Defense bill also included many legislative "riders," the most important of which would:

Direct the Defense Department to make a special effort to give American small business an opportunity "to participate equitably in the furnishing of commodities and services" financed with funds in the bill.

Prohibit the use of funds in the bill to pay more than 475,000 full-time graded civilian employees at any one time during fiscal 1956.

Bar the use of funds in the bill "for the payment of a price differential on contracts...made for the purpose of relieving economic dislocations."

Place a limitation of $3,250,000 on funds provided for public information and public relations.

Increase from an average $235 per student to an average $240 per student the amount the Department of Defense would be authorized to spend for the schooling of dependents of military and civilian personnel in foreign countries where adequate educational facilities were not available.

Require approval by "appropriate committees of Congress" of Defense Department transfer to private industry of work "traditionally" performed by civilian government employees.

CONTRACTS CRITICIZED

DEBATE-- May 11 -- George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- "Before we...get down to rock bottom on defense contracts, we have to take men from business who will put... vigor into contracting for the government...I think the civilian rather than the man in uniform will do a better job in the contracting field."

Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) -- "If circumstances would permit all Department of Defense procurement contracts to be put on a strictly competitive-bid basis... there might be sufficient saving to pay all the costs of the farm parity price program."

Mahon -- "A real two-fisted campaign to save money by getting better bargains from industry in defense buying has not been launched. It is long overdue."

May 12 -- Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) -- "We are doing the wrong thing if we make the defense cuts...The cuts come purely and simply as a budgetary matter."

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- "A great play is being made about saving the dollars and putting the fleet into mothballs...This is part of a deal...to make the Marines policemen."

Errett P. Scrivner (R Kan.) -- "After spending... billions of dollars for new and modern weapons, better and faster transportation, and advanced communications, if we cannot now reduce the number of men in the Army a modest amount, we have wasted a lot of money.... The modest cut will not materially affect our military strength."

Edith Nourse Rogers (R Mass.) -- Opposed shifting Defense Department work to private industry. "Where are you going to get your trained workers (in case of war) if they leave to go into other business because they have lost their highly trained work in the navy yards... and...arsenals? You cannot replace them. You are endangering your national defense."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 12 -- Sikes -- Make two installments out of the $700 million to be returned to the Treasury from the Army Stock Fund. Voice.

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- Stop payment of rent on all recruiting space and limit to 50 percent of the current appropriation the amount allowed for all recruiting programs. Standing, 106-68.

Paul F. Schenck (R Ohio) -- Delete language requiring Congressional committee approval of use of funds for the moving of any major permanent facility. Standing, 131-125.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Flood -- Two amendments, considered together, to add $249,574,000 to keep the Army at its 1,114,000-man level. Voice.

Flood -- Five amendments, considered together, to add $85,740,000 to keep the Navy at its 672,000-man level. Voice.

George W. Andrews (D Ala.) -- Three amendments, considered together, to add $78,489,500 to keep the Marine Corps at its 205,000-man level. Voice.

Flood -- Three amendments, offered as substitutes for Andrews' amendments and considered together, to add $78,479,500 to boost the Marine Corps to 215,000 men. Voice.

Flood -- Delete language barring payment of price differentials in contracts made to relieve economic dislocations. Voice.

L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.) -- Require approval by House and Senate Armed Services Committees, rather than by "appropriate committees of Congress," of Defense Department transfer to private industry of work "traditionally" performed by civilian employees. Rivers' amendment was accepted, by a 121-120 standing vote, with the Chair casting the deciding vote. However, it was offered as a perfecting amendment to an amendment by Carl Vinson (D Ga.). Vinson's amendment was rejected, thereby nullifying Rivers' amendment.

Vinson -- Delete the provision requiring Congressional approval of Defense Department transfer of work to private industry. Accepted (as modified by Rivers) on a teller vote, 160-134; rejected on a roll call, 184-202.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HELD HEARINGS -- To receive briefings in executive session by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and other military leaders.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 9 -- Wilson said the military manpower program "provides an adequate defense structure for the United States, particularly on a long-term basis." He said that, in preparing the plans, "we have carefully considered the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Radford said the planned strength was "commensurate with the threat facing the country and is one which can be maintained in an improved state of readiness over an extended period of time."

Feb. 23 -- Secretary of Army Robert T. Stevens supported the Administration plan to cut Army strength and keep more men stationed in the U.S. than abroad. Men could be rushed overseas "in case of emergency," he said.

Feb. 25 -- Secretary of Navy Charles S. Thomas testified that despite planned manpower reductions in the Navy and Marine Corps, their strength would be "adequate to carry out whatever mission may be assigned to them outside of a major conflict."

Feb. 28 -- Chairman Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) quoted Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, as having testified that projected cuts in Army manpower would "endanger national security" and make it impossible for the Army to perform its mission. Russell said Ridgway also testified that plans for the Air Force to help supply the Army through airlifts were inadequate.

LEADERS BACK CUTS

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- On Defense Department budget requests.

TESTIMONY -- April 4 -- Secretary Wilson -- in a letter -- and Adm. Radford backed the Administration proposal for a 150,000 reduction in military manpower by June 30, 1956.

April 5 -- Adm. Robert B. Carney, chief of naval operations, said he had never predicted that Red China would start a war in the Formosa Strait by April 15, as newspapers had reported. Carney approved the proposed cut in naval manpower, provided the international situation did not worsen.

April 6 -- Gen. Ridgway said that when Army manpower cuts were being considered, he "strongly recommended a very substantially higher figure" for the Army. But once "duly constituted civilian authorities" made their decision, it was "wholeheartedly accepted" by military leaders, he said.

Charles C. Finucane, Under Secretary of Army, said "the manpower problem" of the Army "is not nearly as serious as material and equipment." He said the requested budget would allow the Army to be "ready to go at any moment."

Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff, said the fiscal 1956 budget for the Air Force was "very good."

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- Publication June 15 of closed hearings on Defense appropriations disclosed a $2 billion program to put the Air Force's home defense communications on a semi-automatic basis. The leased equipment would link all points in the air defense system. The project, called "SAGE" -- Semi-Automatic Ground Environmental System -- was already under way but would not be completed until 1958 or 1959.

INCREASE RECOMMENDED

ACTION -- The Committee June 14 reported HR 6042 (S Rept 545) with amendments to appropriate $31,836,-521,336 for the Defense Department for fiscal 1956. The sum was $348,315,336 more than the House had voted.

The Committee rejected, 6-14, a motion to add $250 million to prevent an Army cutback of 87,000 men. The Committee also rejected, 7-13, a move to add $38 million to block a Marine Corps cut of 12,000 men. The Committee urged the Defense Department to terminate "without delay" the practice of carrying over unobligated balances from one fiscal year to the next.

Major increases recommended by the Committee over House-approved funds were: $356 million for speeding up B-52 bomber production by 35 percent, $10 million for the interservice emergency fund, and $10,650,000 for Air Force personnel. The Committee cut $18,003,430 from Air Force maintenance and operations funds, and $10,650,000 from Air National Guard funds.

The Committee also:

Inserted a "Buy American" provision to block indirect importation of spun silk yarn from China.

Modified a House provision that would have prevented the Defense Department, without Congressional approval, from shifting to private contractors work "traditionally" done by government civilian employees. The modification was to prevent the shift of work done by civilian employees "for a period of 25 years or more."

Floor Action

The Senate June 20 passed, by an 80-0 roll-call vote, a Defense Department appropriation carrying $31,882,-915,726 in new funds.

An amendment by Stuart Symington (D Mo.) to raise the Marine Corps appropriation by $46,394,390 in order to provide a 22,000-man increase over Administration plans for the Corps was agreed to by a 40-39 roll call after Russell B. Long (D La.) switched his vote from "nay" to "yea." (For voting, see chart, p. 129.) Thirty-seven Democrats and three Republicans supported the amendment; 37 Republicans and two Democrats opposed it.

The Senate defeated, on a 33-48 roll call, an amendment to drop the provision for Congressional approval of the transfer of Defense Department work to private industry.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds as approved by the Senate:

Office of Secretary of Defense
Salaries, expenses	$ 12,250,000
Public Information Office	420,000

Military construction, Naval reserve forces	28,061,400
Research and development	431,933,000
Servicewide supply and finance	295,600,000
Servicewide operations	94,320,000
Naval petroleum reserves	2,851,000
Subtotal	$ 9,118,179,556
Air Force
Aircraft and related procurement	$ 6,306,000,000
Major procurement other than aircraft	349,862,600
Research and development	570,000,000
Maintenance and operations	3,597,496,570
Military personnel	3,680,650,000
Reserve personnel	43,563,000
Air National Guard	192,191,000
Subtotal	$14,739,763,170
TOTAL	$31,882,915,726

The bill also would provide:

Non-appropriated expenditures of $31 million from the "account for preparation for sale or salvage of military property" and $7,960,000 from Navy ships' stores funds.

$356 million, sought from the Senate after the House had acted, to speed up B-52 bomber production.

A "Buy American" restriction on the indirect importation of spun silk yarn from China.

A requirement that House and Senate Appropriations Committees approve Defense Department shifting to private industry of work that government civilian employees had performed "for a period of 25 years or more."

MANPOWER LEVELS SET

Also included in the Senate version were:

Armed forces active duty manpower levels, by June 30, 1956, of: Army, 1,027,000; Navy, 664,000; Marine Corps, 215,000; and Air Force, 975,000.

A directive that the Defense Department make a special effort to give American small business an opportunity "to participate equitably in the furnishing of commodities and services" financed with funds in the bill.

A prohibition on the use of funds in the bill to pay more than 475,000 full-time graded civilian employees at any one time during fiscal 1956.

A prohibition on the use of funds in the bill "for the payment of a price differential on contracts...made for the purpose of relieving economic dislocations."

A limitation of $3,270,000 on funds provided for public information and public relations.

An increase from an average $235 to $240 a student in the amount the Department of Defense would be authorized to spend for the schooling of dependents of military and civilian personnel in foreign countries where adequate educational facilities were not available.

Defense Department authorization to transfer $200 million to the emergency fund from other department appropriations.

DEBATE -- June 20 -- Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) -- At the end of fiscal 1955, unobligated balances of the Defense Department would be $11.5 billion; at the end of fiscal 1956, they would be $6.5 billion. "Huge unobligated balances lend themselves to our armed forces purchasing large amounts of materials...not really needed."

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "The present Secretary of Defense has reduced unobligated balances very substantially."

Stuart Symington (D Mo.) -- He was "earnestly opposed to...further reductions" in U.S. military strength. "Justification for further cuts next year in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, are now given by this Administration on the basis of air supremacy. But that supremacy is becoming more and more questionable."

The Soviets "have in operation units thousands more modern jet fighters...(and) light jet bombers than the United States and the entire free world combined possess. We have hundreds more medium size bombers than the Communists.... The Communists have passed us in the production of modern long-range jet intercontinental bombers.... The Communists are ahead in the missile field -- well ahead with the intercontinental ballistic missile, the ultimate weapon...." In January, 1946, there were eight Secretaries of the defense establishment. "Now the number of Secretaries has grown to the incredible figure of 31."

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- "I cannot support his (Symington's) attempt to discredit President Eisenhower as a capable analyst and evaluator of the defense needs of our country."

Saltonstall -- "There is absolutely no basis for the contention that the cut of 12,000 men will impair the ability of the Marine Corps to do its job." Only four percent of the proposed reduction would affect combat troops. "No trained men will be dropped."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- Continue operation of John Moses Veterans Hospital, Minot, N.D. Voice.

Symington -- Increase Marine Corps funds by $33,706,000 for military personnel, $3,733,390 for procurement, and $8,855,000 to troops and facilities. (Three amendments presented and considered en bloc.) Roll call, 40-39.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- "It is the sense of the Congress that the funds...appropriated for aircraft and related procurement shall be obligated and expended as speedily as possible" so the U.S. "shall not fall behind any nation in the world in air power." Voice.

John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- Continue operation of Army-Navy hospital at Hot Springs National Park, Ark., and Murphy General Hospital, Boston, Mass. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Eliminate the section barring use of funds for transferring (to private industry) work done by Defense Department civilian personnel for as long as 25 years, unless approved by the Appropriation Committees. Roll call, 33-48.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House Conference Committee June 29 reported (H Rept 1030) a compromise version of HR 6042. Appropriations recommended were those in the Senate version, except for a $100,000 cut in funds for the Army's Rifle Practice Board. The increase in Marine Corps appropriations was retained.

House Action

The House June 30 agreed to the conference report by voice vote. The House concurred in two Senate amendments that had been reported in disagreement, and amended two other Senate items in dispute. The House amendments would:

Allow the Secretary of Defense to transfer $50 million to emergency funds from other department appropriations, instead of $200 million, as the Senate voted.

Prevent shifting to private industry work that had been performed by government civilian employees for at least three years. (The House originally voted to prevent the shift of work "traditionally" performed by civilian workers, and the Senate agreed to substitute "a period of 25 years or more" for the word "traditionally.")

DEBATE -- June 30 -- George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- In addition to the sum appropriated, the Defense Department will have an "estimated unobligated amount" of $10,462,000 at the end of fiscal 1955. "There will be available for expenditure purposes, as distinguished from funds available for obligation, a total of approximately $75 billion. This amount includes a carryover from (fiscal) 1955 of an estimated $43,162,000,000." Army combat strength at the end of fiscal 1956 will be "18 divisions, 11 regiments and regimental combat teams, 136 anti-aircraft battalions, and an active aircraft inventory of nearly 3,600." The Navy's 1956 shipbuilding program "includes construction of 33 ships,...including a fifth Forrestal carrier and 8 submarines, of which 4 are to be nuclear-powered, plus some 13,370 tons of landing craft. It also provides for conversion of 28 ships...to help modernize the fleet." Air Force funds "will provide for continuing expansion toward the goal of 137 wings by June 30, 1957, but more immediately for 131 wings by June 30, 1956.... Congress has not reduced the military budget of the President. It has rather increased it."

Richard B. Wigglesworth (R Mass.) -- "I do not agree with the decision of the conferees to add some $46 million" to increase Marine Corps strength. "I think the action is a mistake.... If there is anyone in America who should know how large a Marine Corps we require... it is President Eisenhower...."

John Taber (R N.Y.) -- The amendment to bar transfer of work performed by civilians to private industry "is very undesirable and creates a great deal of embarrassment to the proper administration of the Defense Department. I hope that next year we can...get rid of it entirely."

Mahon -- "Defense Department officials are liquidating some of their business operations within the Department, and I hope that they will continue to liquidate them. It can be done under the procedure outlined in section 638 (of HR 6042), but the Congress will be conferred with before the liquidation is done."

Senate Action

The Senate June 30 agreed to the conference report and concurred in the House amendments by voice vote, without debate. The action cleared the bill for the President.

Mr. Eisenhower, in signing the bill into law (PL 157) July 13, criticized two "riders" in the bill. He objected to the bar against shifting Defense Department work to private industry, and to the ban on purchase of foreign-made silk yarn.

PUBLIC WORKS

HR 6766 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 747) June 10, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $1,285,746,242.

- Passed by the House, with amendments, by voice vote, June 16. Appropriation voted: $1,372,122,800.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 700) July 1. Recommended: $1,377,491,000.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote, July 5. Voted: $1,377,571,000.
- Conference report (H Rept 1085) agreed to July 13 by the House, on a 316-92 roll-call vote (see p. 158); and by the Senate, by voice vote, July 13.

PL 163 -- Signed into law July 15. Final appropriation: $1,365,613,500.

The omnibus Public Works Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956, which granted funds for the Atomic Energy Commission, Tennessee Valley Authority, Bureau of Reclamation, Army Corps of Engineers, and other agencies, generated controversy on three fronts: the Dixon-Yates power plant, AEC operating expenses, and rivers and harbors projects.

The so-called Dixon-Yates project derived its name from Edgar H. Dixon, president of Middle South Utilities, Inc., and Eugene A. Yates, chairman of The Southern Co. The two power companies formed the Mississippi Valley Generating Co., which, with President Eisenhower's backing, negotiated a contract with the AEC to build a $107 million power plant at West Memphis, Ark. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 538ff. and pp. 533ff., this volume.)

The Dixon-Yates plant was to replenish the power drained from the TVA generating system by the AEC installation at Paducah, Ky. Dixon-Yates opponents urged that the TVA meet its own and AEC's growing power needs by building a $90 million TVA steam generating plant at Fulton, Tenn.

Controversy during Congressional action on the public works appropriation focused on whether $6.5 million should be granted to start construction of power transmission lines from the TVA system to a point midway across the Mississippi River, where they would be linked with lines built by Dixon-Yates. Some Democrats favored using the $6.5 million to start building the TVA plant at Fulton.

The House, by a 198-169 teller vote, struck out an Appropriations Committee provision to appropriate $6.5 million for the Fulton plant.

The Senate voted $6.5 million for the Dixon-Yates transmission line, with the proviso -- set forth in the Senate Appropriations Committee report on the bill -- that the money would be available for that purpose only if the city of Memphis, Tenn., failed to build its own power plant, and construction of the Dixon-Yates plant proceeded as planned. Meanwhile, Memphis, hitherto supplied with TVA electricity, carried out plans to build a municipal power plant to offset the drain on TVA. Assured that Memphis would build its plant, Mr. Eisenhower July 11 ordered the Dixon-Yates contract canceled.

Another point of contention between Capitol Hill and the White House was the Atomic Energy Commission appropriation. The President sought $1,525,251,000 in new obligational authority for AEC operating expenses in fiscal 1956. -- $1,045,000,000 to be new funds. Congress appropriated $575 million in new funds, authorized transfer of $481,400,000 from prior grants and use of $324,447,000 in leftover funds -- a total of $1,380,847,000, or $144,404,000 less than the President's request.

ACTIONS CRITICIZED

Mr. Eisenhower July 15 said he had signed the bill into law "with great reluctance," because of the slash in AEC funds. "A reduction of this magnitude," he said, "could seriously interfere with the Commission's plans to produce atomic weapons, to develop propulsion reactors for the Navy and the Air Force, and to develop peaceful applications of atomic energy, including the production of electric power."

The President also objected to Congressional approval of 107 unbudgeted rivers and harbors projects, including the Cougar, Ore., power dam. "Initiation of the added projects cannot be undertaken until the detailed engineering plans have been completed and we have a sound basis for cost estimates," he said.

The President's statement produced a flood of Congressional criticism. The Bureau of the Budget July 18 announced: "No funds have been impounded."

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6766, as it became law:

Atomic Energy Commission, operating expenses	$ 575,000,000
Tennessee Valley Authority	27,053,000
Southeastern Power Administration	1,160,000
Southwestern Power Administration	1,250,000
Bonneville Power Administration	21,200,000
Bureau of Reclamation	179,995,000
Army Quartermaster Corps, cemeterial expenses	6,000,000
Army Engineer Corps, civil functions	553,955,500
TOTAL	$1,365,613,500

The bill also:

Authorized the Atomic Energy Commission to transfer $481,400,000 from prior grants for "plant and equipment" to fiscal 1956 operating expenses and to use leftover operating funds in fiscal 1956.

Earmarked $1 million for an Army Engineers' study of hurricane winds and tides (authorized by S 414 -- PL 71, enacted June 15).

Earmarked $4.5 million for Army Engineers' use in "small authorized projects" which were to cost less than $150,000 each and to be completed with fiscal 1956 funds.

Authorized a $6-million continuing fund to reactivate Southwestern Power Administration contracts with certain Rural Electrification Administration generating and transmission cooperatives. (The last such authorization had been for fiscal 1953. The President did not request the $6 million fund for fiscal 1956. By reinstating the continuing fund, Congress authorized the Southwestern Power Administration to use power sale revenues to meet emergency expenses, buy electric power, and rent transmission lines.)

Granted $51,962,500 for Mississippi River flood control projects.

Granted $7.5 million for construction of the controversial Tuttle Creek Reservoir dam, Kan.

Background

For fiscal 1956 President Eisenhower requested $1,789,165,000 from the House, later boosted his estimate to $1,801,465,000 for Senate consideration. The breakdown: new funds for AEC operating expenses, $1,045,-000,000; TVA, $27,550,000; Southeastern Power Administration, $1,160,000; Southwestern Power Administration, $1,134,000; Bonneville Power Administration, $22,-003,000; Bureau of Reclamation, $179,616,000; Army Quartermaster Corps cemeterial expenses, $6,027,000; Army Engineers, $518,975,000.

For consideration in the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation bill (HR 7278 -- PL 219), the President requested an additional $313,282,014, including: AEC plant and equipment, $294,700,000; Bonneville Power Administration, $2,038,000; Bureau of Reclamation, $7,-198,000; Army Engineers, $11,384,014. (See p. 242.)

Fiscal 1955 public works appropriations were: AEC, $1,209,844,700, including $1,098,962,300 for operating expenses; TVA, $120 million; Southeastern Power Administration, $1,228,000; Southwestern Power Administration, $2,165,000, including $400,000 granted in the second fiscal 1955 Supplemental Appropriation (HR 4903 -- PL 24, see p. 247); Bonneville Power Administration, $30,514,000; Bureau of Reclamation, $163,207,000; Army Quartermaster Corps, cemeterial expenses, $5,489,200; Army Engineers, $442,364,100.

Items included in the fiscal 1956 Public Works bill had been scattered among three fiscal 1955 appropriation bills. For fiscal 1955, AEC and TVA grants were in the Independent Offices bill, power administration and Bureau of Reclamation funds were in the Interior Department bill, and Engineer and Quartermaster Corps appropriations were in the Army Civil Functions bill. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 151, 158, 161.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- On public works funds before Subcommittees in closed sessions.

TESTIMONY -- May 5 -- Southwestern Power Administrator Douglas G. Wright told the Public Works Subcommittee that Congress should reinstate SPA contracts with REA generating and transmission cooperatives, lest the cooperatives "go bankrupt."

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) said Congress' failure to appropriate money for the contracts since fiscal 1953 had left the cooperatives "at the mercy of private industry and prohibited (them) from securing power from any other source."

May 23 -- Cannon said it seemed "absurd" to grant $6.5 million for Dixon-Yates transmission lines two and a half years before they would be needed. Cannon spoke up at an AEC and TVA Subcommittee meeting.

May 26 -- AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss, in a prepared statement, told the same Subcommittee a recent high-altitude shot in Nevada suggested "a defensive anti-aircraft use" for nuclear weapons. "We have been encouraged by developments during the past year in the aircraft nuclear propulsion program," he said. "Experiments warrant a sharp intensification and expansion of these efforts."

TVA PLANT APPROVED

ACTION -- On June 7 the AEC and TVA Subcommittee voted 6-9, in closed session, against appropriating $6.5 million for the Dixon-Yates transmission lines. Instead, the Subcommittee voted 8-5 to grant $6.5 million to start constructing a TVA steam generating plant at Fulton, Tenn.

The full Committee June 10 reported HR 6766 (H Rept 747), recommending $1,285,746,242 for public works in fiscal 1956.

In approving the $6.5 million grant for the Fulton power plant, the Committee said TVA "should proceed at once to meet the impending shortage of power by 1958." For two years, the Committee said, "the Administration has failed to recommend any new starts in generating capacity for TVA although the load is growing rapidly in this area and installations vital to defense are located there.... The Dixon-Yates arrangement is in litigation... and there is no indication it will be settled soon.... TVA must be assured of adequate generating capacity."

The group also eliminated a $100,000 contingency item under TVA administrative expenses. Only Gen. Herbert D. Vogel, TVA Board Chairman, advocated the item, intended for a special management staff. The Committee called Vogel's testimony supporting the item "confused and unconvincing." During a Subcommittee hearing May 23, Cannon accused Vogel of seeking to set up a "dictatorship" over the other TVA Board members.

The Committee instructed TVA to limit its 1956 production of diammonium phosphate fertilizer to 5,000 tons. TVA had expected to produce 20,000 tons, but the Committee said private industry was willing to expand production of this type of fertilizer.

RECLAMATION, FLOOD CONTROL FUNDS

The group also:

Noted the government had lost an estimated $868,000 because of the Interior Department's "inability...to negotiate an acceptable contract for the sale of power" from John H. Kerr Dam, in North Carolina and Virginia.

Allocated $113,821,000 for Bureau of Reclamation projects, including: Solano, Calif., $12 million; Central Valley, Calif., $11.3 million; Columbia Basin, Wash., $11 million; Missouri River Basin, $44,534,000.

Cut $500,000 from Bureau of Reclamation operating funds and accused the Bureau of "lethargy" and harboring a desire "to perpetuate itself as a federal bureaucracy" because it had failed to transfer responsibility for operating irrigation projects to local interests.

Allocated $322,262,800 for Army Engineer construction projects, including: Los Angeles, Calif., drainage area, $14 million; Buford Dam, Ga., $10 million; Table Rock Reservoir, in Missouri and Arkansas, $11 million; Gavins Point Reservoir in Nebraska and South Dakota, $12 million; Garrison Reservoir, N.D., $18 million; Oahe Reservoir, S.D., $23 million; McNary lock and dam, in Oregon and Washington, $11 million; The Dalles Dam, Oregon and Washington, $58 million; and Chief Joseph Dam, Wash., $16 million.

Floor Action

The House June 16 passed HR 6766 by voice vote. The appropriation approved was $1,372,122,800, including $86,376,558 more than the Appropriations Committee had recommended for rivers and harbors projects.

The House deleted the Committee's provision for earmarking $6.5 million for the TVA power plant at Fulton. The action came on a 198-169 teller vote.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6766, as approved by the House:

Atomic Energy Commission, operating expenses	$ 618,000,000
Tennessee Valley Authority	26,214,000
Southeastern Power Administration	1,160,000
Southwestern Power Administration	684,000
Bonneville Power Administration	21,100,000
Bureau of Reclamation	178,745,000
Army Quartermaster Corps, cemeterial expenses	6,000,000
Army Engineer Corps, civil functions	520,219,800
TOTAL	$1,372,122,800

The bill also:

Authorized a $6 million continuing fund to reactivate Southwestern Power Administration contracts with certain generating and transmission cooperatives.

Earmarked $1 million for an Army Engineers' survey of hurricane winds and tides.

Authorized the Secretary of Army to spend $4 million "for the construction of small authorized projects," none to cost more than $150,000 and all to be completed with fiscal 1956 funds.

DEBATE -- June 15 -- Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) -- "This bill comes before us with certain definite weaknesses...It comes with no overall policy...Projects that are in...have been put there strictly on a pick-and-choose basis, because somebody on the Committee thought it ought to come in or somebody else thought it ought to come out."

George A. Dondero (R Mich.) -- "Let us not...be hypnotized by the argument that TVA must expand solely for national defense reasons. The kilowatt manufactured by TVA is no different than the kilowatt manufactured by privately-owned, regulated utilities....Will we...endorse the theory of allowing TVA to expand in perpetuity knowing full well that we are encouraging a large-scale business operation...with the taxpayers of the entire United States financing this tax-free business operation for the benefit of a particular area...?"

Joe L. Evins (D Tenn.) -- "The achievements of TVA...have been great. The success and attainments of TVA provide the best answer to the critics and opponents of this agency.... This Congress should certainly not delay further in providing funds to start needed power generating facilities..."

June 16 -- John Phillips (R Calif.) -- "The construction of a steam plant at Fulton, (Tenn.) would... carry the Tennessee Valley Authority...outside the area designated in the act which created the...Authority. It would create a duplicating plant, a duplication of the power which already is contracted for in the plant that is presently being built at or near Memphis."

Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "...the Fulton site is definitely in the TVA area.... As we direct the TVA to ignore...(Dixon-Yates) and to begin instead construction of a plant in TVA's own service area, we are returning to the honored practice of relying upon sound engineering judgments to select locations for the addition of generating capacity.... We are through with political adventuring in technical fields. We can proceed with confidence that the efficiency and economy of the TVA power system will be preserved."

Clare Hoffman (R Mich.) -- "The people of...the Tennessee Valley want the rest of the people of the United States to contribute to the cost of cheap power, not only for their own domestic use but so that industries now in the North...will go South."

(See Congressional Record, June 15, 16.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 16 -- Phillips -- Delete authority for using $6.5 million of TVA funds for starting construction on a TVA steam plant at Fulton, Tenn. Teller, 198-169.

Hamer H. Budge (R Idaho) -- Increase the Bureau of Reclamation appropriation for investigative projects from $3,669,442 to $5,104,000, and bar use of those funds for investigating the Blue South Platte project. Standing, 124-23.

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- Increase Bureau of Reclamation construction and rehabilitation funds from $113,821,000 to $146,041,000. Standing, 108-56; teller, 103-79.

Henderson Lanham (D Ga.), as amended by Hale Boggs (D La.) -- Increase Army Engineers' funds for general investigations from $4,310,000 to $5,190,000. Voice.

Boggs (substitute for Lanham's amendment) -- Increase Army Engineers' investigative funds by $880,000, instead of $180,000. Voice.

William H. Natcher (D Ky.), as amended by Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) and James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Increase Army Engineers' general construction funds from $322,262,800 to $369,894,800. Voice.

Edmondson (substitute for Natcher's amendment) -- Add $47,607,000 to Engineers' construction funds, instead of $46,707,000. Division, 112-87.

Roosevelt -- Amend Edmondson's substitute to increase Engineers' construction funds by $25,000 of which $12,500 would be used for the Playa del Rey Inlet and Harbor project at Venice, Calif. Standing, 107-86.

Henry O. Talle (R Iowa) -- Authorize $68,000 of Engineers' construction funds for advance planning of the upper Iowa River project. Voice.

Edward J. Robeson, Jr. (D Va.) -- Increase from $2 million to $4 million funds for the Secretary of Army to authorize small projects that would cost less than $150,000 and be completed with fiscal 1956 funds. Voice.

Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- Increase the Engineers' Mississippi flood control appropriation from $46,675,000 to $50,885,000. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 16 -- Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) -- Require that the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, instead of the Bureau of the Budget, pass on TVA acquisition of an administration building. Voice.

Miller (R Neb.) -- Appropriate $9.3 million to complete a 230-kilovolt transmission line from Fort Randall Dam, S.D., to Grand Island, Neb. Voice.

Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.) -- Prohibit use of Army Engineers funds for continuation of an investigation of the Burns Waterway, Ind. Voice.

Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.) -- Amend Natcher's amendment to increase Engineer construction funds by $30 million, instead of by $46,707,000. Standing, 66-103.

Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) -- Add $18.5 million to Engineer construction funds for the Delaware River project. Teller, 77-107.

William H. Avery (R Kan.) -- Prohibit Engineer construction funds from being used at the Tuttle Creek, Kan., project. Standing, 87-114.

John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.) -- Add $100,000 to Engineer construction funds for Whitlow Branch Dam, Ariz. Standing, 64-104.

Thor C. Tollefson (R Wash.) -- Add $563,000 to Engineers' construction funds for dredging the Port of Tacoma Waterway. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- On public works funds before Subcommittees. Hearings were open, except those on AEC funds.

TESTIMONY -- June 13 -- Gen. Herbert D. Vogel, TVA chairman, opposed a grant of $6.5 million to TVA to start building a steam generating plant at Fulton, Tenn. However, if Congress wanted the Fulton plant, TVA "could move quite rapidly," Vogel said. Vogel also withdrew a request for a $100,000 contingency fund to set up a special management staff.

TVA Power Manager G.O. Wessenauer disagreed with Vogel, saying the Fulton plant would be more desirable than the proposed Dixon-Yates plant at West Memphis, Ark., because of location and size. The Fulton plant, Wessenauer added, would cost the government $3.5 million to $5 million less a year than the Dixon-Yates plant.

June 17 -- Spokesmen for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, the cities of Corinth, Miss., Memphis, Tenn., and Florence, Ala., and the American Public Power Association urged construction of the Fulton plant.

June 21 -- Gov. Frank G. Clement (D Tenn.) charged Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes with concealing "essential facts" about the Dixon-Yates contract. He said Tennessee would not purchase Dixon-Yates power. Clement said that Adolphe Wenzell, a former official of the First Boston Corp. which arranged Dixon-Yates financing, advised the Budget Bureau and Dixon-Yates interests at the same time he was an aide to Hughes. Wenzell June 18 told the Securities and Exchange Commission he had no part in the contract negotiations while he was Hughes' aide.

DIXON-YATES FUNDS VOTED

ACTION -- The Public Works Subcommittee June 28 voted to recommend $6.5 million to build transmission lines for the proposed Dixon-Yates power plant. The Subcommittee reportedly voted 6-9 against a motion by Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.) to eliminate funds for the lines. The Subcommittee agreed, however, to recommend withholding the funds until the Dixon-Yates plant was under construction.

The full Committee July 1 reported HR 6766 (S Rept 700), recommending $1,377,491,000 for fiscal 1956 public works funds.

The Committee reported that though it recommended only $575 million in new funds for AEC operating expenses, the Commission would have $1,481,847,000 in total funds available, by virtue of $582,400,000 to be transferred from the "plant and equipment" account and a $324,447,000 unobligated balance from previous grants. "The total funds available will amount to...$43,404,000 below the revised budget estimate," the report said. "The Committee feels that such a modest reduction will not hamper economical operation...."

The Committee directed that $6.5 million for building a TVA transmission line half-way to the proposed Dixon-Yates plant not be "obligated" if the city of Memphis made a "definite commitment" within 90 days to build its own power plant. The Committee also directed that if Memphis failed to act within 90 days the $6.5 million would be made available only after the Dixon-Yates plant was financed and under construction.

Floor Action

The Senate July 5 passed HR 6766 by voice vote. The appropriation was $1,377,571,000, including $6.5 million for the Dixon-Yates transmission lines. The bill itself did not mention the Dixon-Yates plant, for the Senate relied on language in its Appropriations Committee report governing use of the $6.5 million. Senate Dixon-Yates foes questioned whether the report was legally binding but made no effort to insert qualifying language in the bill.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 6766, as approved by the Senate:

Atomic Energy Commission, operating expenses	$ 575,000,000
Tennessee Valley Authority	27,053,000
Southeastern Power Administration	1,160,000
Southwestern Power Administration	1,250,000
Bonneville Power Administration	21,250,000
Bureau of Reclamation	180,095,000
Army Quartermaster Corps, cemeterial expenses	6,000,000
Army Engineer Corps, civil functions	565,763,000
TOTAL	$1,377,571,000

The bill also would:

Authorize a $6 million continuing fund to reactivate Southwestern Power Administration contracts with certain generating and transmission cooperatives.

Authorize $500,000 for an Army Engineers' survey of hurricane winds and tides.

Authorize the Secretary of Army to spend $4.5 million "for the construction of small authorized projects," none to cost more than $150,000 and all to be completed with fiscal 1956 funds.

Appropriate $7.5 million for construction of the controversial Tuttle Creek Reservoir dam, Kan., and $6 million for deepening the channel in the Delaware River.

DEBATE -- Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) -- "For the past 15 years at least, we have been sadly neglecting our obligation to preserve and conserve our soil, to keep our harbors up to date, to develop our inland waterways, and to protect the lives and property of our citizens from the destruction caused by floods." Sen. William F. Knowland (R Calif.) originally proposed that the time limit on withholding funds for the TVA-Dixon-Yates transmission line be set at 30 days. "I would not object to making it 120 days," Ellender said.

Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "There is no way under the sun by which the city of Memphis could make a definite commitment" to build its own power plant by signing "a contract within 30 days.... It will take almost 120 days for the city of Memphis to work out its bonding arrangements and advertise for bids on a plant of this size."

John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- "It is not the government's obligation to build steam plants with taxpayers' money simply to supply hydroelectric power in any area or community where there may be a shortage of or a demand for additional power."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "Is there a precedent for a transmission line to be built to connect a nonexistent plant with a nonexistent market?"

Ellender -- "I think there were some instances...of transmission lines having been built far in advance of even the starting of the building of the dam."

Humphrey -- "The Administration has falsified records and has deluded Congress and has refused to reveal pertinent documents in connection with" the Dixon-Yates contract. "Therefore, I do not believe that the Administration can be trusted very much to follow the language in the (Committee) report."

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- "The effort to hang a hammer over their heads when they have made an unequivocal statement that they are not going to accept Dixon-Yates power, is a gratuitous insult to the people of Memphis... Up to this time nothing has passed through both houses of Congress that gives any legitimate sanctity to the so-called Dixon-Yates contract. By appropriating $6.5 million, even though it may be on a deferred basis, we are putting Congress into the situation of giving Dixon-Yates legislative approval of a contract which is likely to cost the government a great deal of money."

(See Congressional Record, July 5.)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Increase the Army Engineers' appropriation for Mississippi River flood control projects from $52,960,000 to $53,040,000 for planning work at Vicksburg-Yazoo Harbor, Miss. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Increase the Army Engineers' construction funds by $550,000 for the Dardanelle Dam and by $75,000 for the Beaver Dam. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees July 7 reported (H Rept 1085) a compromise version of HR 6766. They agreed on total funds of $1,365,613,500.

Conferees reported they were "in agreement with the language in the Senate (Committee) report" deferring the $6.5 million grant for the Dixon-Yates plant transmission line.

Other major compromises:

Allowed the Atomic Energy Commission to transfer $481,400,000 from prior grants for "plant and equipment" to 1956 operating expenses. This sum had been voted by the House. The Senate set a $582,400,000 figure.

Restored the $1 million voted by the House for an Army Engineers' study of hurricane winds and tides. The Senate had allowed $500,000.

Appropriated $4.5 million for "small authorized projects" by Army Engineers, as voted by the Senate. The House figure was $4 million.

Dropped the Senate's $6 million grant for deepening the Delaware River channel.

House Action

The House July 13 agreed, by 316-92 roll-call vote, to the conference report. The House concurred in seven Senate amendments that conferees reported in dispute. (For voting see chart, p. 158.)

DEBATE -- July 12 -- John Taber (R N.Y.) -- He and Reps. Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.), T. Millet Hand (R N.J.), and John Phillips (R Calif.) "refused to sign the conference report because we felt that it started an enormous number of projects which would be a menace to the country for years and years to come." The bill appropriates funds for new projects that ultimately will cost $2 billion. "We should not approve this conference report."

Carl T. Durham (D N.C.) -- The conference report reduced "by more than $100 million the operating funds for the AEC...Congress is placing an unwarranted limitation on the Commission's vital work for the defense of this country, to say nothing of the highly necessary development of peacetime uses of atomic energy."

Hugh Scott (R Pa.) -- Conferees' deletion of $6 million for dredging the upper Delaware River to provide a 40-foot deep channel from Philadelphia, Pa., to Trenton, N.J., "is a reckless and unwarranted blow...The Congress seems to have endless funds for parasites, peanuts, and picayune projects. To deny funds for revenue-producing, job-making proposals such as the Delaware channel is completely short-sighted and discriminatory."

Usher L. Burdick (R N.D.) -- Opposed a provision for $100,000 for building dikes at Garrison Dam, N.D., to raise the water level. Landowners near the dam "know that a dike built on quicksand will not hold."

Otto Krueger (R N.D.) -- "The operating level of the Garrison Dam...affects not only" North Dakota, but also "is part of a whole system of control for the Missouri River Basin, needed for floodwater regulation and power all down the river...Governing bodies, organizations, and individuals" representing more than 86 percent of North Dakota's population favor raising the water level from 1,840 to 1,850 feet.

Senate Action

The Senate July 13 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report on HR 6766, clearing the bill for the President.

DEBATE -- Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- Opposed deletion of the $6 million item for dredging the upper Delaware River.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- The channel dredging project would require a $36 million expenditure "primarily and directly for the United States Steel Corp...I advocated...that...half the cost (of such projects be) met by the industries and communities which will be directly benefited. I think the only way we shall protect ourselves against demands for continuous appropriations for river and harbor projects is through some built-in deterrent, such as the sharing of costs...In past years I have made myself obnoxious by trying to delete provisions for specific projects...The task is more than any one person can carry out successfully...Such logrolling results in the waste of hundreds of millions of dollars -- not that the projects are not worthy, but that they are not sufficiently worthy to justify the costs..."

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- "The conference report would completely scuttle the development of the Atomic Energy Commission...The production of weapons will be curtailed. The civilian power reactor program will be sacrificed." The AEC may not be able "to pay for uranium and other raw materials which have already been contracted for."

LABOR AND H. E. W.

HR 5046 -- Reported by the House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 228) March 18, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $2,337,522,261.

- Passed by the House, with amendment, by voice vote, March 21. Appropriation voted: $2,337,522,261.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 410) June 2. Recomended: $2,404,-055,600.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote, June 6. Voted: $2,404,905,600.
- Conference report (H Rept 1272) agreed to July 20 by the House and Senate, both by voice votes.

P. L. 195 -- Signed into law Aug. 1. Final appropriation: $2,373,516,500.

The Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare and Related Agencies Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956 carried a record grant for medical research at the Public Health Service's National Institutes of Health.

Nearly a month elapsed while House and Senate conferees haggled over funds for medical research and hospital construction. They agreed finally on $97,573,000 for NIH and $111 million for hospital construction.

The House had voted $89,138,000 for NIH, the amount the Administration requested; the Senate appropriated $112,240,000. For hospital construction grants, the House voted $96 million; the Senate approved the Administration's request for $125 million.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 5046:

Labor

Office of the Secretary	$ 1,587,000
Office of the Solicitor	1,482,900
Bureau of Labor Standards	817,500
Bureau of Veterans' Re-employment Rights	360,500
Bureau of Apprenticeship	3,150,000
Bureau of Employment Security	396,156,250
Bureau of Employees' Compensation	2,174,500
Bureau of Labor Statistics	6,065,000
Women's Bureau	348,000
Wage and Hour Division	6,162,000
Subtotal	$ 418,303,650

Health, Education, Welfare

American Printing House for the Blind	$ 224,000
Food and Drug Administration	5,484,000
Freedmen's Hospital	2,880,000
Gallaudet College	2,764,000
Howard University	5,006,000
Office of Education	121,251,500
Office of Vocational Rehabilitation	36,825,000
Public Health Service	323,573,000
St. Elizabeths Hospital	3,396,000
Social Security Administration	1,437,510,850
Office of the Secretary	3,972,500

National Mediation Board	1,187,000
Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service	3,134,000
Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin	5,000
Subtotal	$ 12,326,000
TOTAL	$2,373,516,500

POLIO FUNDS

The bill also:

Authorized $6.1 million for the Railroad Retirement Board and $4.4 million for the United States Soldiers' Home.

Authorized the Surgeon General to transfer any Public Health Service funds to the polio vaccine program.

Provided that grants to states for vocational education should not exceed $26,325,000.

Authorized spending of $86 million from the federal old-age and survivors trust fund for administrative expenses.

HEALTH RESEARCH

Included these grants among appropriated funds:

$97,573,000 for the National Institutes of Health, a Public Health Service agency, including $5,125,000 for basic medical research; $24,828,000 for the National Cancer Institute; $17,751,000 for mental health activities; $18,778,000 for the National Heart Institute; $2,136,000 for dental health activities; $10,740,000 for arthritis and metabolic disease activities; $7,580,000 for microbiology activities; and $9,861,000 for research on neurology and blindness.

$111 million for hospital construction grants.

$65 million for payments to school districts and $24 million for school construction assistance.

$250 million for Bureau of Employment Security grants to states.

$120 million for veterans unemployment compensation.

$1.4 billion for grants to states for public assistance.

$34,156,600 for grants to states for maternal and child welfare.

Background

President Eisenhower requested $2,432,148,861 for the regular fiscal 1956 appropriation, including $470,116,000 for the Labor Department, $1,949,465,861 for the Health, Education, and Welfare Department, and $12,567,000 for related agencies. The largest single item in the budget request was $1.4 billion for Social Security Administration grants to the states for public assistance, which Congress approved.

The President later requested supplemental funds of $2,650,000 for the Labor Department and $8,088,000 for the Health, Education, and Welfare Department. These requests were considered in the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation (HR 7278 - PL 219). (See p. 242.)

FISCAL 1955 FUNDS

The 83rd Congress appropriated $392,805,000 for the Labor Department, $1,719,676,075 for the Health, Education, and Welfare Department (including fund transfers), and $12,759,500 for related agencies for fiscal 1955. Funds for the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, which were granted in the fiscal 1955 Independent Offices Appropriation bill, were carried in the Labor-HEW bill for fiscal 1956. Other related agencies' funds were in the Labor-HEW bills of both fiscal years. (See CQ Almanac, pp. 158, 163, 175.)

The 84th Congress appropriated another $7.5 million for the Labor Department and $306.5 million for the Health, Education, and Welfare Department in the second fiscal 1955 Supplemental Appropriation (HR 4903 - PL 24). (See p. 247.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- On Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies fiscal 1956 budget requests in closed sessions.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 2 -- Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell requested $470,116,000 for fiscal 1956, an increase of $77.3 million over 1955. Mitchell said the increase was due, in part, to new programs in the Department. He cited programs for increasing jobs for older workers and developing manpower mobilization and civil defense plans. He said the biggest increase was $307,500 in the Bureau of Employment Security for grants to the states, unemployment compensation for veterans, and a new program of unemployment compensation for federal employees.

Feb. 8 - Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said her Department's prospective budget totaled $2,033,125,517, which was $1,262,425 less than fiscal 1955. Mrs. Hobby said that about 88 percent of the amount requested would go for grants to the states. The rest, she said, would be divided among federal activities.

Feb. 21 -- Guy Farmer, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, said the Board's request of $8,150,000 was the smallest since 1949. Farmer said no provisions were included to deal with emergency strike votes or with any amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act.

ACTION -- The Committee March 18 reported HR 5046 (H Rept 228), recommending a $1,907,403,361 appropriation.

The Committee disapproved all requests for civil defense and defense mobilization activities in the departments covered in the bill and said that the "scattering of the basic program authorities through the executive branch, and piecemeal consideration of appropriations... by the legislative branch can only result in confusion and waste of public funds." It suggested the only "businesslike way" to handle the civil defense matter would be to set up a separate central agency.

The Committee allowed no funds for cooperative research in education or for the National Advisory Committee on Education. It said the "spreading of the activities and functions of the federal government in the field of education can only lead to further deterioration of the standing of the Office of Education." The Committee allowed $100,000 to complete the work of the White House Conference on Education and a small increase for expenses of the Office of Education.

Floor Action

The House March 21 passed HR 5046 by voice vote, with an amendment. The appropriation was $2,337,522,261, the sum recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds appropriated for the Labor Department and Health, Education and Welfare Department, as approved by the House in HR 5046:

Labor
Office of the Secretary	$ 1,527,000
Office of the Solicitor	1,467,900
Bureau of Labor Standards	817,500
Bureau of Veterans' Reemployment Rights	346,000
Bureau of Apprenticeship	3,150,000
Bureau of Employment Security	395,977,500
Bureau of Employees' Compensation	2,147,000
Bureau of Labor Statistics	5,850,000
Women's Bureau	348,000
Wage and Hour Division	6,162,000
Subtotal	$ 417,792,900

Office of Education	118,324,761
Office of Vocational Rehabilitation	35,300,000
Public Health Service	296,878,000
St. Elizabeths Hospital	3,379,000
Social Security Administration	1,433,300,500
Office of the Secretary	3,972,500
Subtotal	$1,907,403,361
Related Agencies
National Labor Relations Board	$ 8,000,000
National Mediation Board	1,187,000
Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service	3,134,000

Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin	5,000
Subtotal	$12,326,000
TOTAL	$2,337,522,261

The bill also:

Authorized $6,100,000, the amount requested, for salaries and expenses of the Railroad Retirement Board, to be derived from the Railroad Retirement Trust Fund.

Authorized $4,400,000, an increase of $190,000 above the request, for maintenance and operation of the United States Soldiers' Home.

Provided that grants to states for vocational education would not exceed $23,498,261 for fiscal 1956, and set a limit of $900,000 on appropriated funds used for such education in distributive occupations, such as sales and advertising.

DEBATE -- John Taber (R N.Y.) introduced an amendment that would provide that federal employees who voluntarily sever their employment would not receive unemployment compensation. Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) called unemployment pay in such cases "a reward for idleness."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Taber -- Provide that none of the funds appropriated in the bill should be paid to any person voluntarily severing employment with the United States government. Standing, 42-26.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- April 25 - May 20.

ACTION -- June 2 reported HR 5046 (S Rept 410) recommending a $2,404,055,600 appropriation.

Major increases over House grants recommended by the Committee were: $29 million for hospital construction, $22,602,000 to the National Institutes of Health for medical research, $4,156,600 for Social Security Administration grants to states for maternal and child welfare, $2,826,739 to the Office of Education for vocational education, $2,500,000 to the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation for grants to states and other agencies, and $100,000 for the November, 1955, White House Conference on Education.

The Committee also added to the House bill $1,600,000 earmarked for polio vaccine testing by the Public Health Service.

Floor Action

The Senate June 6 passed HR 5046 by voice vote. By accepting Committee amendments and three floor amendments, Senators agreed on a $2,404,905,600 total.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 5046, as approved by the Senate:

Labor

Office of the Secretary	$ 1,627,000
Office of the Solicitor	1,482,900

National Labor Relations Board	$ 8,000,000
National Mediation Board	1,187,000
Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service	3,134,000
Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin	5,000
Subtotal	$ 12,326,000
TOTAL	$2,404,905,600

The bill also:

Authorized $6,100,000 for the Railroad Retirement Board and $4,400,000 for the United States Soldiers' Home.

Authorized the Surgeon General to transfer any Public Health Service funds to the polio vaccine program.

Provided that grants to states for vocational education should not exceed $26,325,000 for fiscal 1956, while eliminating a House provision that not more than $900,000 could be used for vocational education in distributive occupations, such as sales and advertising.

DEBATE -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- The sums appropriated for medical research and vocational education were the largest ever granted for those purposes.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Criticism of Secretary Hobby and Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the Public Health Service because of their handling of the polio vaccine program was "not justified." Everyone working in that field is "exploring."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Pat McNamara (D Mich.) -- Increase the authorization for spending from the federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund from $84 million to $86 million. Voice.

John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- Add $500,000 for basic research to the $5,399,000 appropriation for operating expenses of the National Institutes of Health. Voice.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Add $350,000 to the $2 million appropriation for training personnel to rehabilitate the physically handicapped. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 19 reported (H Rept 1272) a compromise version of HR 5046. The bill, sent to conference June 22, was snagged for nearly a month on disagreements over funds for medical research and hospital construction.

Conferees agreed to delete Rep. Taber's floor amendment concerning federal employees, as the Senate had done. They retained Senate amendments by McNamara and Kennedy but cut Lehman's proposed additional funds for training personnel to rehabilitate the physically handicapped from $350,000 to $75,000, leaving $2,075,000 for this purpose.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 20 agreed to the conference report by voice vote. The House agreed to six Senate amendments that conferees reported in dispute.

DEBATE -- John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) -- House conferees "were opposed to blanket increases" in funds for medical research "unless accompanied by new or augmented programs, since beyond a certain point, giving more money in itself does not necessarily buy more progress...More attention must be given to the development of a larger pool of trained scientists and to the creation of additional research facilities where they can work."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 20 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report without debate, sending the $2,373,516,500 measure to the President.

MUTUAL SECURITY

HR 7224 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1086) July 8, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $2,638,741,750.

- Passed by the House, on a 251-123 roll-call vote, July 11. (See p. 158.) Appropriation voted: $2,638,741,750.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1033) July 19. Recommended: $3,205,341,750.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, on a 62-22 roll-call vote, July 22. (See p. 132.) Voted: $3,205,841,750.
- Conference report (H Rept 1501) agreed to July 28 by the House and Senate, both by voice votes.

P.L. 208 -- Signed into law Aug. 2. Final appropriation: $2,703,341,750.

The Eisenhower Administration's severest setback, money-wise, during 1955 was in the Mutual Security Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956.

Congress appropriated $563,300,000 less than the Administration sought for mutual security. The biggest slash was in military assistance, for which Congress gave the President $420 million less than he wanted.

At the root of the military assistance slash was Congressional pique over Administration use of unobligated (uncommitted) foreign aid funds in the final moments of fiscal 1955. The Administration "reserved" about $614 million on June 30 (the last day of fiscal 1955), to avoid having to return the money to the Treasury, Representatives said.

The House Appropriations Committee said a Defense Department official had made a written agreement not to commit $420 million of fiscal 1955 funds, and the Administration had violated the agreement. This was the $420 million the House refused to appropriate, and in the Senate-House conference on HR 7224, Representatives stood fast against granting that sum.

Administration defenders said the agreement had been made by honorable men and that the last-minute reservation of foreign aid money was made necessary by a new accounting system that had slowed fund obligations earlier in the fiscal year.

KOREAN WAR FIND

Congressional denial of the $420 million was partly offset at the last minute, however, when a Senate-House conference committee learned that $302 million appropriated for Air Force foreign aid programs before the Korean conflict had been diverted for U.S. use during the war. Conferees "reappropriated" the $302 million for fiscal 1956 mutual security programs.

Aside from Representatives' anger over the Administration's eleventh hour reservation of left-over funds, an important factor in the over-all mutual security cuts was growing congressional criticism of foreign aid "handouts."

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7224, as it became law:

Military assistance	$ 705,000,000
Direct forces support	317,200,000
Defense support
Europe	85,500,000
Near East and Africa	113,700,000
Asia	800,000,000
Development assistance
Near East and Africa	73,000,000
South Asia	51,000,000
American republics	38,000,000
Technical cooperation
General authorization	127,500,000
United Nations program	24,000,000
Organization of American States	1,500,000
Special Presidential fund	100,000,000
Special assistance in joint control areas	21,000,000
Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration	12,500,000
UN Refugee Fund	1,200,000
Escapee program	6,000,000
UN Children's Fund	14,500,000
UN Relief and Works Agency	58,366,750
NATO	3,700,000
Ocean freight charges
U.S. voluntary relief agencies	2,000,000
Surplus agricultural commodities	13,000,000
Control Act expenses	1,175,000

Administrative expenses	33,500,000
President's fund for Asian economic development	100,000,000
TOTAL	$2,703,341,750

The bill also:

Provided that no more than 20 percent of funds appropriated in HR 7224 might be "obligated and/or reserved during the last two months of the fiscal year."

Barred funds use "to assist directly in the migration to any nation in the Western Hemisphere of any person not having a security clearance based on reasonable standards...."

Limited spending of previously appropriated but unobligated funds to $62,533,250.

Authorized the Air Force to spend $302 million in previously appropriated foreign aid funds that had been diverted to U.S. use in the Korean war.

BUDGET REQUEST -- President Eisenhower requested $3,266,641,750 in new funds for mutual security appropriations in fiscal 1956.

The breakdown: mutual defense assistance, $2,442,500,000, including $1,125,000,000 for military assistance; development assistance, $182 million; technical cooperation, $172 million; other programs, $470,141,750.

BACKGROUND -- The 83rd Congress granted $2,781,499,816 in the mutual security appropriation bill for fiscal 1955. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 167ff.) Another $189,600,000, earmarked for Defense Department direct forces support in Korea, was included in the total for fiscal 1955 foreign aid funds.

Before considering the fiscal 1956 bill (HR 7224), Congress passed the Mutual Security Act of 1955 (S 2090 -- PL 138), authorizing foreign aid appropriations of $3,285,800,000 for fiscal 1956. (See p. 301.) For a table comparing authorizations with appropriations since 1951, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 167.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 9-29 on mutual security funds for fiscal 1956, before the Foreign Operations Subcommittee. Hearings were closed.

TESTIMONY -- June 10 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said, "The Soviets are overextended... They are seeking for new policies...which will grant them some respite against strains...they have been under in trying...to keep up with the pace...set by the free world." Asked by J. Vaughan Gary (D Va.) whether the Soviet change was "due to necessity and not to a change of heart," Dulles replied, "Yes, sir."

June 23 -- H. Struve Hensel, Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs, opposed a provision to require the Administration to return to the Treasury all but $200 million of previous grants not obligated by the end of fiscal 1955. This, Hensel said, would cut $420 million from available funds and cause "a great deal of difficulty...with our foreign policy."

June 28 -- Harold E. Stassen, Foreign Operations Administration director, said: "The cold war struggle in Europe has been won by the United States and the free world...under this program which...Congress made possible and carried forward. The focus of the struggle now is in Asia...."

METHODS CRITICIZED

ACTION -- July 8 reported HR 7224 (H Rept 1086), recommending $2,638,741,750 in new money for foreign aid. The Committee proposed a $627,900,000 cut -- about 20 percent -- in Presidential requests, but noted that $62,533,250 of previous grants had not been obligated and $6,767,200,000 had not been spent by the end of fiscal 1955.

The Committee voiced concern about "evidence of questionable administrative practices followed in obligating, deobligating, and reobligating funds." "There is reason to believe," the report said, "that funds are frequently obligated late in the fiscal year in order to carry them forward, even though the obligations are not based on firm agreements...."

The report assailed the "chaotic fiscal situation" of the military assistance program. A $420 million cut in this program, the report added, "is recommended...on the basis of a written understanding between responsible officials of the Department of Defense and the Committee that, of the estimated unobligated balance as of June 30 of $932,000,000, the amount of $420,000,000 should not be released by the Bureau of the Budget for immediate reservation by the Department of Defense. The Committee is advised, despite this understanding," that about $614 million "was reserved on June 30."

The report noted that "something in excess of $1,085,000,000" in foreign aid funds had been obligated or reserved in June alone, though "the average monthly rate of obligations and reservations for the preceding 11 months was $207,300,000."

The Committee recommended these major cuts from Presidential requests for new funds:

Military assistance, $420 million; direct forces support, $12.2 million; Asian defense support, $52.8 million; South Asian development assistance, $10 million; technical cooperation, $21.5 million; President's fund for Asian economic development, $100 million.

Floor Action

The House July 11 passed HR 7224 by a 251-123 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 158.) The appropriation voted was the amount the Appropriations Committee recommended.

The House rejected five amendments that would have hindered foreign aid administration. No move was made on the House floor to restore funds slashed by the Committee.

Harold E. Stassen, former head of the Foreign Operations Administration (which became the International Cooperation Administration on July 1, 1955), made a fruitless last-minute effort to salvage funds cut by the Appropriations Committee. He was turned down by Committee Chairman Clarence Cannon (D Mo.).

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7224, as approved by the House:

Military assistance	$ 705,000,000
Direct forces support	305,000,000
Defense support
Europe	70,000,000
Near East and Africa	102,500,000
Asia	775,000,000

Development assistance
Near East and Africa	$ 73,000,000
South Asia	61,000,000
American republics	38,000,000
Technical cooperation
General authorization	125,000,000
United Nations program	24,000,000
Organization of American States	1,500,000
Special Presidential fund	100,000,000
Special assistance in joint control areas	21,000,000
Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration	10,000,000
UN Refugee Fund	1,000,000
Escapee program	6,000,000
UN Children's Fund	14,500,000
UN Relief and Works Agency	56,366,750
NATO	3,700,000
Ocean freight charges
U.S. voluntary relief agencies	1,500,000
Surplus agricultural commodities	10,000,000
Control Act expenses	1,175,000
Administrative expenses	33,500,000
President's fund for Asian economic development	100,000,000
TOTAL	$2,638,741,750

The bill also would:

Provide that not more than 20 percent of funds appropriated in HR 7224 might be "obligated and/or reserved during the last two months of the fiscal year."

Bar use of funds "to assist directly in the migration to any nation in the Western Hemisphere of any person not having a security clearance based on reasonable standards to insure against Communist infiltration in the Western Hemisphere."

Limit spending of previously appropriated but unobligated funds to $62,533,250.

CUTS DEFENDED

DEBATE -- Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- "We will not" be cutting the ground out from under the President by reducing the appropriation.

James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- "Had the...executive branch not worked out some means of obligating over $600 million of fiscal 1955 funds in a single day (before the fiscal year ended June 30), the limitation on carryover in the bill reported by the Committee would have resulted in a cut of $400 million...."

Richard B. Wigglesworth (R Mass.) -- "Seventy-four percent of the new money (appropriated in HR 7224), or 87 percent of the total (available for foreign aid)...is to be used...for military assistance. Only $685 million carried in the bill is available for other purposes... There is practically no economic aid whatever here for any of the original Marshall plan countries. Of the new money, a maximum of $400 million, or 15 percent, is said to be intended for Europe." The rest would be used in Asia, Africa, the Near East, and Latin America. "I frankly do not believe that the amounts (the Committee) recommended to be withheld...will in any way cripple the program in fiscal 1956."

Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) -- "We and our constituents know that the time has come to put an end to our excessive round the world handouts.... Our major foreign aid programs have outlived their usefulness."

Winfield K. Denton (D Ind.) -- "Notwithstanding the splendid recovery Europe has made," the U.S. will continue to spend previously appropriated funds there, though the $70 million for European aid in HR 7224 is "practically all for Spain and Yugoslavia.... If we hope to make friends by a lavish expenditure of money, I am afraid that is a vain hope. Mercenary friends have never proved of much value to anyone in an emergency.... It is rather shocking to see the small amount of taxes, especially on the wealthy, that are levied in some countries to which we grant aid."

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "I regret the Committee cut" of $2.5 million from "the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration.... This will mean a reduction of 25,000 in the number of refugees and others in Europe who can be resettled" in fiscal 1956.

Passman -- "The Committee has gone just as far as it can without actually crippling this bill."

(See Congressional Record, July 11.)

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- Bar use of funds for United Kingdom manufacture of military aircraft. Agreed to on a standing vote, 76-66; rejected by teller vote, 91-92.

Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Prohibit use of HR 7224 funds until all but $3 billion of previously appropriated foreign aid moneys had been spent. Standing 50-139.

Whitten -- Bar use of funds for "technical or other assistance" for farm products to be exported. Voice.

T. Millet Hand (R N.J.) -- Limit the U.S. contribution to UN organizations to one-third of their budget. Standing, 84-146.

John Dowdy (D Texas) -- Bar spending of any funds in HR 7224 that would result in increasing the U.S. public debt. Standing, 62-163.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 12 - 15 on mutual security funds for fiscal 1956. Hearings were closed.

TESTIMONY -- July 12 -- Chairman Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) announced after a closed-door session with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles: "The Secretary stated his understanding from the military authorities that the cut made by the House would affect programs in several key countries. If so, he said it would do considerable harm to our foreign policy objectives in those areas." (Dulles' comments were "off-the-record.")

ACTION -- July 19 reported HR 7224 (S Rept 1033), recommending a $3,205,341,750 appropriation. The Committee added $566,600,000 to the funds voted by the House, including these increases:

Military assistance, $420 million; direct forces support, $12.2 million, earmarked for Formosa and Thailand; defense support, $79.5 million (net), including an additional $22 million for Spain, $11.2 million for Greece, and $52.8 million for Asia; and $50 million for the President's fund for Asian economic development.

The Committee cut $10 million from development assistance to India, limited new funds to India to $50 million, and cut $6.5 million from Yugoslav defense support funds.

The Committee directed that aid to Yugoslavia be withheld until U.S. "officials are satisfied that they are permitted to make proper inspections." The report said: "The Committee is insistent on proper inspection of aid sent under the mutual security program" so the U.S. "may be as certain as possible" that funds are used for the intended purpose.

Floor Action

The Senate July 22 passed HR 7224, by a 62-22 roll-call vote. With two floor amendments, the appropriation totaled $3,205,841,750. (For voting, see chart, p. 132.)

The Senate agreed to all but one Appropriations Committee amendment. By roll-call votes, the chamber agreed, 50-38, to add $420 million for military assistance; agreed, 68-16, to cut $10 million from development assistance funds for India; and agreed, 46-38, to add $50 million to the President's fund for Asian economic development.

The Senate rejected, by voice vote, a Committee amendment that would have limited spending of new aid funds in India to $50 million, and prevented the President from using any part of his $250 million special funds for that nation.

Also rejected, by a 22-63 roll-call vote, was a floor amendment by Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) that would have cut European defense support funds by 25 percent. Another Ellender amendment, which would have cut Asian defense support funds by 25 percent, was rejected by a 24-60 roll-call.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7224, as passed by the Senate:

Military assistance	$1,125,000,000
Direct forces support	317,200,000
Defense support
Europe	85,500,000
Near East and Africa	113,700,000
Asia	827,800,000
Development assistance
Near East and Africa	73,000,000
South Asia	51,000,000
American republics	38,000,000
Technical cooperation
General authorization	130,000,000
United Nations program	24,000,000
Organization of American States	1,500,000
Special Presidential fund	100,000,000
Special assistance in joint control areas	21,000,000
Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration	12,500,000
UN Refugee Fund	1,400,000
Escapee program	6,000,000
UN Children's Fund	14,500,000
UN Relief and Works Agency	60,366,750
NATO	3,700,000
Ocean freight charges
U.S. voluntary relief agencies	2,000,000
Surplus agricultural commodities	13,000,000
Control Act expenses	1,175,000
Administrative expenses	33,500,000
President's fund for Asian economic development	150,000,000
TOTAL	$3,205,841,750

The bill also would:

Provide that not more than 20 percent of funds appropriated in HR 7224 might be "obligated and/or reserved during the last two months of the fiscal year."

Bar use of funds "to assist directly in the migration to any nation in the Western Hemisphere of any person not having a security clearance based on reasonable standards..."

Limit spending of previously appropriated but unobligated funds to $83.9 million.

Allow spending of all but $100 million of previously appropriated and obligated funds.

AID CALLED "SIN AND SHAME"

DEBATE -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- Without foreign aid "we could balance the budget and reduce taxes across the board by 5½ percent.... The United States should not continue military assistance for countries now able to provide for their own defense...."

Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) -- "Since every dollar we spend this year on foreign aid will undoubtedly be a borrowed dollar, I think it is a sin and a shame that we should continue to burden the government and the American people in this manner..."

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- "I believe the term 'foreign aid' is a very unhappy one. It implies and connotes a giveaway or welfare program.... This is the most selfish program I know of. We are not undertaking it out of the charity of our hearts.... We are doing it for our own skins.... I remember the day when I used to attack this program. I did it with a great deal of verve and vigor. I take it back. Publicly and privately, I take it back."

BOONDOGGLING CHARGED

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- The President's fund for Asian economic development was "designed to fit the will-o'-the-wisp nonsense that...American spending in poor areas of the world will prevent Communists from getting in. This idea is so completely fallacious that it has been used again and again by the Communists to help us spend our way to bankruptcy." The fund "is for worldwide boondoggling...." It is "pure executive absolutism."

Dirksen -- Half of the President's fund for Asian economic development may be used only for loans. No more than 25 percent of the fund may be used in any one country.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- "Why do we insist on treating foreigners better than we treat Americans?"

John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- "I can no longer tolerate the philosophy that we must purchase friendship."

(See Congressional Record, July 22.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- Bar use of funds for other than military assistance for any country with a dependent area that failed to comply with a treaty between the U.S. and the dependency. (The amendment was designed to force French Moroccans to honor treaty obligations.) Voice vote.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Add $500,000 to grants for ocean freight charges for U.S. voluntary relief agencies. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Ellender -- Reduce European defense support funds from $85.5 million to $64 million. Roll call, 22-63.

Ellender -- Reduce grants for Spain for purposes other than exchange of technicians from $50 million to $37.5 million. Voice.

Ellender -- Reduce the sum earmarked for sending farm products to Spain from $22 million to $16.5 million. Voice.

Ellender -- Reduce Near Eastern and African defense support funds from $113.7 million to $85.3 million. Voice.

Ellender -- Reduce the sum earmarked for Greece in the Near Eastern and African defense support fund from $26.2 million to $19.7 million. Voice.

Ellender -- Reduce Asian defense support funds from $827.8 million to $621 million. Roll call, 24-60.

Ellender -- Reduce Near East and African development assistance funds from $73 million to $54.8 million. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 27 reported (H Rept 1501) a compromise version of HR 7224. Conferees agreed to House figures for military assistance, cutting out $420 million added by the Senate. The committee also cut the Senate's $150 million grant for the President's Asian economic development fund to the $100 million House figure.

Conferees deleted the Hickenlooper amendment but retained the Humphrey amendment.

Dirksen, a Senate conferee, refused to endorse the slash in military assistance funds.

Conferees agreed to allow the Administration to use only $62,533,250 of previously appropriated but unobligated mutual security funds, as the House had voted, instead of $83.9 million, as the Senate had agreed.

House Action

The House July 28 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report. Of the five Senate amendments conferees reported in dispute, the House concurred in three, including a Senate provision to grant "at least" $50 million to Spain, exclusive of funds for exchange of technicians.

The House amended two Senate provisions that had been reported in dispute. One of the House amendments had the effect of deleting the Senate restriction on the spending of left-over, obligated funds. The other authorized the Air Force to spend $302 million in previously appropriated funds that had been diverted to U.S. use in the Korean war.

DEBATE -- Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- The $302 million would "permit further deliveries of aircraft and related items by the Air Force. It was not the purpose of the House conferees to take advantage of the technical situation that developed with respect to the $302 million item, because during the year there are hundreds of millions of dollars in the mutual security program obligated and then, for legal reasons if not sufficient reasons, deobligated and reobligated; and the $302 million item is one...that was brought to light at -- shall we say, the psychological moment;...however, the procedure in permitting such items to be validated and reappropriated is not unusual."

Senate Action

The Senate July 28 agreed to the conference report, by voice vote, and concurred in House amendments to two of the Senate provisions that had been reported in dispute. The final appropriation was $2,703,341,750.

DEBATE -- Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- The $302 million in Air Force funds authorized for the fiscal 1956 mutual security program "is not a new appropriation." The money "was found as a result" of new accounting methods prescribed by Congress in 1954.

LEGISLATIVE FUNDS

HR 7117 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1036) June 30, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $66,298,175.

- Passed by the House, by voice vote, July 1. Appropriation voted: $66,298,175.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1184) July 28. Recommended: $92,924,027.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote July 29. Voted: $93,025,527.
- Conference report (H Rept 1627) agreed to Aug. 2 by the House and Senate, by voice votes.

P. L. 242 -- Signed into law Aug. 5. Final appropriation: $92,808,972.

Differences between the Senate and House versions of the Legislative Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956 set obstacles in its passage. The Senate voted pay hikes for some of its employees, but the House had not written wage boosts for its workers into the measure. The House, under usual procedure, could not add provisions that were in neither House nor Senate versions of the bill. To overcome this obstacle, the House adopted a resolution (H Res 337) waiving points of order against the conference report and allowing insertion of almost all of another bill (HR 7440) that provided wage increases for some House employees.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7117 as sent to the White House:

Senate	$16,315,720
House of Representatives	31,123,305
Capitol Police	94,840
Legislative Counsel	290,000
Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures	22,500
Pages' education	47,280
Miscellaneous	1,986,000
Capitol Architect	21,163,890
Botanic Garden	246,000
Library of Congress	9,767,937
Government Printing Office	11,650,000
Theodore Roosevelt Centennial Commission	10,000
Commission on Government Security	50,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration	41,500
TOTAL	$92,808,972

The bill:

Raised salaries of certain Senate employees, including the Secretary, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Architect of the Capitol.

Raised wages of certain House employees in the lower echelons.

Granted $5 million to extend the center of the Capitol on the east side.

Granted $8.5 million to continue construction of the new $21 million Senate office building.

Granted $100,000 for preparing a revised edition of the United States Code.

Granted $20,000 for studying the revising of copyright laws.

BACKGROUND -- Congress appropriated $86,178,484 for the legislative branch's fiscal 1955 expenses.

Of this sum, the 83rd Congress granted $70,590,754 (exclusive of $105,000 for fiscal 1954) in the regular fiscal 1955 Legislative Appropriation Act, and $6,244,795 in the first fiscal 1955 Supplemental Appropriation Act. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 165, 175.) The 84th Congress appropriated $853,950 for the legislative branch in the first fiscal 1955 Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act (HR 2091 -- PL 3); $8,291,450 (exclusive of $21,139 for fiscal 1954) in the second fiscal 1955 Supplemental Appropriation Act (HR 4903 -- PL 24); $12,000 for fiscal 1955 in a joint resolution (H J Res 365 -- PL 120); and $185,535 for fiscal 1955 in the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation Act (HR 7278 -- PL 219). (See pp. 246, 247, 206, 242.)

BUDGET REQUESTS -- For fiscal 1956, the House considered requests for $67,572,138. The figure was upped to $92,641,411 for Senate consideration.

House

COMMITTEE -- Legislative Appropriations Subcommittee.

RELEASED TRANSCRIPT -- June 15 of closed hearings on legislative appropriations for fiscal 1956. Major increases over 1955 appropriations sought were: $2,935,500 for salaries of Congressmen, and $5 million for extension of the Capitol. Officials of agencies supported by the legislative appropriation and other interested persons testified June 6 and 7.

ACTION -- The Appropriations Committee June 30 reported a bill (HR 7117 -- H Rept 1036) recommending a $66,298,175 appropriation -- $1,273,963 less than budget estimates.

The Committee recommended a $5 million grant to extend the center of the Capitol on the east side, in accordance with a plan reported to Congress on March 3, 1905 (H Doc 385, 58th Congress).

Other items in the bill would provide $9,896,000 for Representatives' salaries, $100,000 for revising the United States Code, and $20,000 for studying revamping of copyright laws.

The Committee declined to recommend pay raises for certain House employees but indicated it would consider salary boosts if the House Administration Committee drafted recommendations.

"As is customary," the Committee reported, "no funds are provided in the bill for the Senate," which would add its own fund requirements.

Floor Action

The House July 1 passed HR 7117 by voice vote, approving the funds reported by the Appropriations Committee.

An amendment by Earl Wilson (R Ind.) to increase the base pay of Members' clerks from $6,000 to $8,000 was ruled out of order.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds passed by the House:

House of Representatives	$31,123,305
Capitol Police	93,590
Legislative Counsel	274,000
Pages' education	47,280
Miscellaneous	1,984,000
Capitol Architect	11,220,000
Botanic Garden	246,000
Library of Congress	9,660,000
Government Printing Office	11,650,000
TOTAL	$66,298,175

DEBATE -- Discussion centered on the proposal to increase salaries of Representatives' assistants.

Wilson -- The Senate can hire "anybody -- a plain inexperienced typist -- and pay them more than we can pay our top assistants. This is indeed a sorry state of affairs."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Amplify a reference to the House Restaurant as a facility "for the feeding of Members of the House, their guests and their employees." Agreed to by the Committee of the Whole, by standing vote, 82-67; rejected after the Committee rose, on a voice vote.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- July 28 reported HR 7117 (S Rept 1181), recommending a $92,924,027 appropriation. The Committee provided pay boosts for several Senate employees.

The Committee recommended $26,625,852 more than the House voted and $282,616 more than budget requests. The Senate's customary addition of its own funds in the bill accounted for $25,802,410 of the increase over the House figure.

Floor Action

The Senate passed HR 7117, amended, by voice vote July 29, and asked for a conference. Adoption of three floor amendments raised the appropriation total to $93,025,527.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds voted by the Senate:

Senate	$16,315,720
House of Representatives	31,123,305
Capitol Police	94,840
Legislative Counsel	290,000
Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures	22,500
Pages' education	47,280
Miscellaneous	1,986,000

Capitol Architect	$21,316,490
Botanic Garden	246,000
Library of Congress	9,831,892
Government Printing Office	11,650,000
Theodore Roosevelt Centennial Commission	10,000
Commission on Government Security	50,000
Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration	41,500
TOTAL	$93,025,527

DEBATE -- Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) offered an amendment to delete the existing $14,800 ceiling on Senate employees' salaries. -- "Why should we downgrade the legislative branch employees and rate them inferior to the executive branch employees?" (Under HR 7619, top pay for classified, executive employees would have been raised to $16,000, from $14,800. The bill was passed by the House but not by the Senate.)

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- The matter should be considered when HR 7619 reaches the Senate floor.

Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) -- Committee conflicts in the House had prevented its acting on pay increases for House employees.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "I have always felt that there should be some reasonable relationship - perhaps with certain exceptions - as between the respective salaries paid in the two Houses."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Add $50,000 for Commission on Government Security. Voice.

A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Add $41,500 for the Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration Commission. Voice.

Knowland -- Add $10,000 for Theodore Roosevelt Centennial Commission. Voice.

Robertson -- Increase the salary of the Legislative Counsel to $15,500. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) -- Delete the $14,800 ceiling on Senate employees' salaries. Standing vote.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee Aug. 2 reported (H Rept 1627) a compromise version of HR 7117. Most of the Senate's amendments were included in the final version.

House Action

The House agreed Aug. 2, by voice vote, to the conference report, adding provisions to increase the pay of certain House employees. The House had not written wage boosts for its workers into the measure originally and, under usual procedure, could not add provisions in the conference version that were in neither House nor Senate versions of the bill.

To overcome this, the House first adopted H Res 337, waiving points of order against the conference report. Then it agreed to the conference report. Finally, it changed the Senate wage provision to incorporate almost all of another bill (HR 7440 -- H Rept 1269), reported July 19 by the House Administration Committee, authorizing the increases.

DEBATE -- Karl M. LeCompte (R Iowa) -- "I am unalterably opposed...after we have already voted a 7.5 percent (pay) increase (for Congressmen) to adding an increase for practically all the help around the Capitol."

Harry R. Sheppard (D Calif.) -- "It is very unfortunate that Members of the House find themselves in the embarrassing position of not paying competent people at the same ratio that is being paid for like or comparable work" in the Senate.

Senate Action

The Senate Aug. 2 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report and concurred in the House amendment providing for House employees' pay boosts.

DEBATE -- Mrs. Smith -- Asked if it were true that under the conference report the House Parliamentarian received $20,500, while the Senate Parliamentarian received only $14,800.

Clements -- "In accordance with the traditional comity between the two bodies, each house arranges its own pay scale and each provides for its own housekeeping as it sees fit."

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "It has been the custom...that the House attends to its own knitting, and the Senate attends to its own knitting...The House pays its Parliamentarian out of the contingent fund...the Senate, under its rules, cannot make such payments out of its contingent fund."

TEMPORARY FUNDS

H J Res 366 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1033) June 30, 1955.
- Passed by the House by voice vote, amended, June 30.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (no written report) June 30.
- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, June 30.

P. L. 123 -- Signed into law June 30.

House Joint Resolution 366 was a customary stopgap measure to provide temporary appropriations for federal agencies awaiting Congressional action on regular fiscal 1956 funds. The measure was passed and signed on the last day of fiscal 1955.

PROVISIONS -- H J Res 366, as enacted:

Granted temporary appropriations at the fiscal 1955 rate, or at the rate allowed by fiscal 1956 budget estimates, whichever was lower, for the legislative branch, Mutual Security programs, conservation services, wind-erosion control, Federal Civil Defense Administration, Small Business Administration, Export-Import Bank, and the President's Commission on Veterans Affairs.

Granted temporary appropriations at the House- or Senate-proposed rate for fiscal 1956, whichever was lower, for the Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare Departments and related agencies; State and Justice Departments and related agencies; and for public works.

Provided funds for retroactive payments of salary increases for government employees.

Provided that the temporary funds would be available until enactment of the fiscal 1956 appropriations measures, or until July 31, 1955, whichever occurred first.

SUPPLEMENTAL, 1956

HR 7278 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1116) July 12, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $1,648,876,128.

- Passed by the House, with amendments, by voice vote, July 14. Appropriation voted: $224,276,628.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1094) July 23. Recommended: $1,826,111,614.
- Passed by the Senate, with amendments, by voice vote, July 26. Voted: $1,830,078,614.
- Conference report (H Rept 1586) agreed to July 30 by the House and Senate, by voice votes.

P.L. 219 -- Signed into law Aug. 4. Final appropriation: $1,656,625,802.

The highlight of Congressional action on the first fiscal 1956 Supplemental Appropriation Act was House deletion of $1,452,499,500 on points of order.

Angered because the House Rules Committee had failed to grant a rule barring the raising of points of order during floor debate, Rep. Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.), of the Appropriations Committee, successfully raised 30 points of order against provisions in the bill. He used this parliamentary tactic, he said, to show how the Rules group could bring about emasculation of a bill.

Rabaut's points of order were based on contentions that some items were legislation in a money bill or that the President had not yet approved certain measures authorizing funds slated for appropriation in HR 7278. For example, Rabaut raised points of order against all funds for military construction, for which the House Appropriations Committee had recommended $1,395,879,000. A bill (HR 6829 -- PL 161) authorizing military construction appropriations was then at the White House, but President Eisenhower did not sign it until the next day.

The Senate subsequently restored most of the funds eliminated in the House on points of order.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY

Controversial items in HR 7278 included funds for the new Air Force Academy, the Atomic Energy Commission, and an atomic-powered merchant ship.

After hearing adverse comments on architectural plans for the Air Academy, the House Appropriations Committee denied the President's request for $79,527,000 for building the institution.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, assured by Air Force officials that plans would be revised, recommended -- and the Senate approved -- the full $79,527,000. A Senate-House conference committee agreed on $20 million to start construction but withheld additional funds because plans were not final.

The Senate inserted a provision in HR 7278 authorizing the Atomic Energy Commission to use $101 million of left-over construction funds for operating expenses. A conference committee had chopped this amount out of a similar Senate provision in the Public Works Appropriation Act (HR 6766 -- PL 163). (See p. 227.) Conferees on HR 7278 agreed on AEC's use of $90 million for operating expenses, in addition to the $481.4 million authorized for this purpose in PL 163. Congress also appropriated, in HR 7278, $259,227,000 for AEC construction.

"PEACESHIP," POLIO FUNDS

Congress denied the President's request for $12,650,000 for the hull and $21 million for the power plant for an atomic merchant ship. The President said the ship would be used for worldwide good-will tours, but Democratic opponents dubbed it a "showboat." (See p. 463.)

Congress also denied another Presidential request for $60 million for maritime activities, chiefly for ship-construction subsidies.

Another major item in HR 7278 was federal grants to the states for polio inoculations. The President requested $30 million, the Senate voted $60 million, but conferees knocked the sum back to $30 million.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7278, as it became law:

Agriculture Department	$ 673,000
Commerce Department	68,689,000
Defense Department	1,193,869,300
Foreign operations	3,000,000
General government matters	750,000
Health, Education, Welfare	37,060,000
Independent offices	33,937,500
Interior Department	19,420,500
Judiciary	2,915,500
Justice Department	1,435,000
Labor Department	2,400,000
Legislative branch	185,835
President's emergency fund for international affairs	5,000,000
Public works	264,778,014
State Department	4,045,000
Treasury Department	10,013,000
U.S. Information Agency	336,630
Claims and judgments	8,117,523
TOTAL	$1,656,625,802

The bill:

Authorized use of $5 million of previously appropriated Agricultural Conservation Program funds for emergency wind erosion control measures in the Southern great plains.

Authorized the Export-Import Bank to spend $1.5 million of non-appropriated funds for administrative expenses.

Barred use of Defense Department funds for "construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or dry-cleaning facility" at U.S. military bases, unless the Secretary of Defense certified that similar services were unavailable from "commercial sources at reasonable rates."

Authorized $15 million for Farmer's Home Administration loans under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

Authorized the Army to spend $485,077,000 and the Air Force to spend $255 million of previously appropriated funds for construction.

Authorized the AEC to use $90 million of unspent construction funds for operating expenses.

Authorized $1,203,951 for District of Columbia operating expenses.

CONSTRUCTION FUNDS

Funds were appropriated for the following purposes:

Additional Coast Guard loran stations, $4.2 million.

Navy construction, $442,628,300 including new auxiliary air stations at Port Isabel, Texas, $5,544,000, and at New Iberia, La., $24,361,000.

Air Force construction, $739,291,000, including Air Academy, $20 million; new Air Defense Command facility in the Greater Milwaukee, Wis., area, $16,608,000, and new installation at Buckingham Weapons Employment Center, Fort Myers, Fla., $11,577,000

AEC construction, $259,227,000 (granted under Public Works).

Inter-American Highway, $37,730,000.

Central Intelligence Agency planning for new headquarters construction, $5.5 million.

Weather Bureau research on hurricane and tornado forecasting, $500,000.

Federal Civil Defense Administration study of evacuation, shelter, and operational plans for U.S. critical target areas, $10 million.

Small Business Administration, $27 million.

Public Health Service grants to states for polio inoculations, $30 million, and for polio vaccine distribution, $4.5 million.

Food and Drug Administration prevention of black market polio vaccine sales, $300,000.

U.S. participation in the Big Four Geneva conference and subsequent meetings, $1 million.

Administration of home loans to tenant farmers, $350,000.

Included in the appropriation was $4,560,535 for fiscal 1955 expenses. The breakdown: Justice Department, $275,000; legislative branch, $185,535; Public Housing Administration, $4,100,000.

OVER $2 BILLION REQUESTED

BUDGET REQUEST -- The budget requests for supplemental funds were $1,927,785,868, as transmitted to the House. The Senate received requests totaling $2,123,351,072. Among the President's requests were:

Agriculture Department, $3,598,000; Commerce Department, $129,454,000, including $49,730,000 for the Inter-American Highway and $60 million for maritime activities, chiefly for ship construction subsidies; military construction, $1,473,550,000; Federal Civil Defense Administration, $16,050,000; General Services Administration, $18,245,000; Interior Department, $16,415,000; Labor Department, $4 million; Health, Education, and Welfare Department, $44,981,700; Atomic Energy Commission, $294.7 million; Army Engineers' construction projects, $11,384,014; State Department, $5,756,000; Justice Department, $18,635,000; the judiciary, $2,915,500; the President's emergency fund for international affairs, $6 million; and Treasury Department, $10,013,000 all but $185,000 of it for the Coast Guard.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 7 to July 7 on fiscal 1956 supplemental appropriations, in closed session.

TESTIMONY -- June 20 -- Secretary of Army Robert T. Stevens said the Army's "planning for the modern atomic age takes the form" of new dispersal tactics in combat, "rather than any major change in the (Army) installations themselves."

Rep. John J. Riley (D S.C.) urged the Army to take a "new look" at sites of Army facilities with a view to dispersing them to avert a "major disaster."

July 7 -- Architect Frank Lloyd Wright said the design for the Air Force Academy was commercial in conception, rather than "human" and "poetic."

ACTION -- The Committee July 12 reported HR 7278 (H Rept 1116), recommending appropriations of $1,648,876,128. The Committee:

Denied a $12,650,000 request for the hull of an atomic-powered merchant ship, as well as a $21 million request for a merchant ship reactor, because Congress had not authorized either project.

Denied a budget request of $59.5 million for a new CIA headquarters.

Deleted a $2 million grant for a new Navy drydock at Puget Sound Shipyard, Bremerton, Wash., for repairing battle damage to Forrestal class aircraft carriers.

Withheld "all new funds" ($79,527,000) for construction of the Air Force Academy because of criticism of preliminary designs of the institution.

Denied $25 million for AEC reactor research and development. The Committee said it was "fully in accord" with the project's purpose, but inadequate information had been supplied to justify it.

Denied the Federal Prison System $17.1 million for a new maximum-security prison and a new "close custody reformatory."

Barred federal funds for construction of transmission lines for the proposed Dixon-Yates power plant at West Memphis, Ark.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7278, as reported by the Committee:

Agriculture Department	$ 3,000,000
Commerce Department	29,879,000
Defense Department	1,402,329,000
Foreign operations	3,000,000
General government matters	700,000
Health, Education, Welfare	5,250,000
Independent Offices	29,050,000
Interior Department	9,460,500
Labor Department	1,860,000
Judiciary	2,915,500
Justice Department	1,435,000
President's emergency fund for international affairs	5,000,000
Public works	138,577,000
State Department	2,820,000
Treasury Department	8,013,000
U.S. Information Agency	243,260
Claims and judgments	5,343,868
TOTAL	$1,648,876,128

NO RULE GRANTED

COMMITTEE -- Rules.

ACTION -- July 13 declined to grant a rule waiving points of order against certain provisions in the supplemental appropriations bill. Rep. Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.) of the Appropriations Committee asked for the rule. Opposition to the rule was expressed by Reps. John Taber (R N.Y.), John Phillips (R Calif.) and Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.), of the Appropriations group, and by Olin E. Teague (D Texas).

In effect, the rule would have permitted legislative "riders" in the bill and appropriations for projects which had not yet been authorized, though such legislation was expected before Congress adjourned. Such a rule was usual procedure on an appropriations bill.

DIXON-YATES ISSUE

(On July 20 Chairman Clarence Cannon (D Mo.) of the Appropriations Committee singled out the ban on funds for Dixon-Yates transmission lines as the stumbling block to the granting of a rule. Although the Dixon-Yates contract had been cancelled by the President July 11, Cannon said there was a possibility that it might be revived and the Appropriations Committee majority wished to preclude such "creeping monopoly.")

Floor Action

The House July 14 passed HR 7278 by voice vote. The appropriation was $224,276,628.

Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.), floor manager for the bill, succeeded in eliminating $1,452,199,500 from it by raising 30 points of order, one of which was against the ban on funds for Dixon-Yates lines. Wright Patman (D Texas) deleted $300,000 for the President's Commission on Veterans Pensions by making another point of order. The Appropriations Committee's bill thus was slashed by $1,452,499,500 on points of order, but $27.9 million was added to the House bill by floor amendments.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7278, as passed by the House:

Agriculture Department	$ 2,620,000
Commerce Department	2,759,000
Defense Department	6,450,000
Health, Education, Welfare	5,250,000
Independent offices	12,750,000
Interior Department	7,090,000
Judiciary	2,915,500
Justice Department	1,435,000
Labor Department	110,000
Public Works	166,477,000
State Department	2,820,000
Treasury Department	8,013,000
U.S. Information Agency	243,260
Claims and judgments	5,343,868
TOTAL	$224,276,628

The bill also would:

Authorize the Export-Import Bank to spend $1.5 million of non-appropriated funds for administrative expenses.

Authorize $1,203,951 for District of Columbia operating expenses.

Appropriate funds for these major projects: Additional Coast Guard navigation aid stations, $4.2 million; AEC construction, $166,477,000; Federal Civil Defense Administration study of evacuation and operational plans for critical target areas, $8,650,000; Food and Drug Administration prevention of black market sales of polio vaccine, $300,000; Public Health Service grants to states for polio vaccine distribution, $4.5 million; U.S. participation in the Big Four meeting at Geneva and subsequent conferences, $1 million.

TACTICS CRITICIZED

DEBATE -- John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- "I strongly suspect that many of these items being objected to (on points of order) will be inserted in the bill" by the Senate.

Rabaut -- "I want to see how many times a person is able to sustain a point of order in this bill and ask you if there is reason for the indifferent treatment we received from the Committee on Rules.... This procedure today is...to bring forcibly to the attention of the House just how far the Rules Committee can go to frustrate the work of the Congress.... I am championing this bill."

John Phillips (R Calif.) -- "I have never seen a member of the majority party take the attitude that because there was not a rule he was obligated to get up and make points of order against every paragraph of the bill."

Ben F. Jensen (R Iowa) -- "This is the silliest and the most uncalled-for ceremony I have ever witnessed in this House...."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Carl T. Durham (D N.C.) -- Add $25 million to AEC construction funds to support a peacetime reactor research and development program. Voice.

Howard H. Baker (R Tenn.) -- Add $2.9 million to AEC construction funds for building a community hospital at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Standing, 72-44.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) -- Restore $4,350,000 to the Federal Civil Defense Administration grant for a study of evacuation, shelter, and operational plans for critical U.S. target areas. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 8 - 22 on fiscal 1956 supplemental appropriations, in open session.

TESTIMONY -- July 15 -- Frank Lloyd Wright, architect, called preliminary designs for the Air Academy "shocking...a fiasco...a glassified box on stilts."

July 18 -- Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott unveiled revised plans for the Air Academy. Talbott said the architects would make a fresh start on plans for the much-criticized Academy chapel.

July 20 -- Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), Joint Atomic Energy Committee chairman, and AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss, urged restoration of $101 million in AEC operating funds cut out of the final version of the Public Works Appropriation bill. (The Joint Atomic Energy Committee had agreed July 19 to support the restoration.)

ACTION -- The Committee July 23 reported HR 7278 (S Rept 1094), recommending a $1,826,111,614 appropriation. The group:

Retained House floor amendments adding $27.9 million to AEC construction funds -- $25 million for a peacetime reactor research and development program, $2.9 million for a community hospital at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Denied funds (voted by the House) for loans for low-income and part-time farmers.

Noted that with a supplemental $49,730,000 grant to the Bureau of Public Roads for the Inter-American Highway, the route "should be completed in three years."

Recommended cuts in requested public works funds of $48,735,000 for the Army, $80.8 million for the Navy, and $106,214,000 for the Air Force.

Denied $6 million for transferring the Air Force Air Research and Development Center from Baltimore, Md., to Wright-Patterson Field, Ohio.

Recommended doubling the Administration's $30 million request for polio inoculations.

Denied $21 million for AEC construction of an atomic merchant ship reactor requested by the President.

Omitted a rider barring use of AEC funds for building transmission lines to the Dixon-Yates power plant.

Recommended $500,000 for planning new prison facilities and denied $17.1 million for construction of a federal maximum security prison and a close custody reformatory.

Recommended $6 million for the President's emergency fund for international affairs and urged "that greater emphasis be placed on international fairs, particularly" for exhibiting foods.

Floor Action

The Senate July 26 passed HR 7278 by voice vote. The appropriation was $1,830,078,614, including $1,269,594,300 for military construction.

Added to the funds recommended by the Appropriations Committee were $3,967,000 for an Air Force hospital and administrative expenses for farmhouse loans.

PROVISIONS -- Breakdown of funds in HR 7278 as approved by the Senate:

Agriculture Department	$ 1,898,000
Commerce Department	83,004,000
Defense Department	1,283,044,300
Foreign operations	3,000,000
General government matters	825,000
Health, Education, Welfare	68,766,980
Independent offices	45,055,000
Interior Department	19,765,662
Judiciary	2,915,500
Justice Department	1,935,000
Labor Department	3,138,800
Legislative branch	185,835
President's emergency fund for international affairs	6,000,000
Public Works	286,289,014
State Department	5,695,000
Treasury Department	10,013,000
U.S. Information Agency	430,000
Claims and judgments	8,117,523
TOTAL	$1,830,078,614

FUNDS RE-AUTHORIZED

The bill would:

Authorize use of $5 million of previously appropriated Agricultural Conservation Program funds for emergency wind erosion control measures in the southern great plains.

Authorize the Export-Import Bank to spend $1.5 million of non-appropriated funds for administrative expenses.

Bar use of Defense Department funds for "construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or dry-cleaning facility" at U.S. military bases, unless the Secretary of Defense certifies that similar services are unavailable from "commercial sources at reasonable rates."

Authorize the Army to use $486,427,000 and the Air Force to spend $255 million of previously appropriated funds for construction.

Authorize the AEC to use $101 million of unspent construction funds for operating expenses.

Authorize $1,203,951 for District of Columbia operating expenses.

Appropriate funds for the following purposes:

Additional Coast Guard loran stations, $4.2 million.

WILDLIFE AREAS INVADED

DEBATE -- Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- "This is labeled a supplemental bill," but more than $1,290,000,000 "is regular appropriations."

James H. Duff (R Pa.) -- "There should be a law to require the military to consult" the Departments of Interior or Agriculture about the most suitable sites for new or expanded installations before taking "vast amounts of land."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "If we continue to turn over to the military all the wildlife refuges in the country, the only place...I will ever be able to see a buffalo will be either on the back of a nickel or in a zoo...."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.), as amended by John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- Authorize $15 million for Farmer's Home Administration loans under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act; authorize $25 million for loans under the Housing Act of 1949; appropriate $1.3 million for salaries and expenses of administering the loans. Voice.

Sparkman -- Amend Thye's amendment to authorize the $25 million in housing loans, and to appropriate $1.3 million for salaries and expenses of administering the loans, instead of $350,000, as Thye had proposed. Voice.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) -- Add $2,667,000 to the $1,078,649,000 Air Force construction appropriation to build a hospital at Lincoln Air Force Base, Neb. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- Cut the Army's public works authorization by $1,000 to prevent transfer by the Interior Department to the Army of 10,700 acres of the Wichita Mountains National Wildlife Refuge for use as an artillery range for Fort Sill, Okla. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees July 29 reported (H Rept 1586) a compromise version of HR 7278. They:

Deleted Senate amendments to authorize $25 million in farmers' home loans and to appropriate $950,000 to administer the loans and $2,667,000 for construction of a hospital at Lincoln Air Force Base, Neb.

Deleted $2.2 million for construction of drydock facilities to repair battle damage to Forrestal class aircraft carriers.

Halved the Senate's $60 million grant for polio inoculations.

Noted that the $20 million granted for the Air Academy would not impede construction.

Barred use of AEC construction funds for the new Reactor Training School, Argonne National Laboratory.

Cut Weather Bureau hurricane research funds to $500,000, from the Senate's $1.5 million.

ACTION -- The House July 30 agreed, by voice vote and without debate, to the conference report on HR 7278. The House concurred in 37 Senate amendments conferees had reported technically in disagreement. These items had been stricken by points of order in the House and reinserted by the Senate. The House agreed to 17 other Senate amendments after altering them.

The Senate July 30 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report and concurred in the 17 House amendments to Senate amendments. The action cleared the $1,656,625,802 bill for the White House.

URGENT DEFICIENCY, 1955

HR 2091 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 3) Jan. 13, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $25,000

- Passed by the House, without amendment, Jan. 13 by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 6) Jan. 17. Recommended appropriations: $993,950.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, Jan. 18 by voice vote. Appropriations: $1,013,950.
- Senate amendments agreed to by the House Jan. 20 without objection.

P.L. 3 -- Signed into law Jan. 25. Final total: $1,013,950.

The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill for fiscal 1955 was the first of the money measures cleared by the 84th Congress. The bill carried $1,013,950 in supplemental funds for Congress and the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 2091:

Appropriated $50,000 for the beneficiaries of deceased Members of Congress; $4,845 for the Office of the Senate Secretary; $440 for the Senate Policy Committees for insurance contributions; $115 for the Joint Committee on Printing; $795,000 for Senate investigations; $3,550 for Senate stationery; and $160,000, to remain available until June 30, 1955, for the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations -- effective on enactment of HR 2010.

Made Senate funds available for additional clerical help for the two Senators from Kentucky.

Authorized the transfer of an additional $130,000 for the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission.

Increased the limitation on funds for administrative expenses of the Commodity Credit Corporation by $7,290,000, and for expenses of the Federal Housing Administration in connection with "windfall profits" cases by $125.000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- In closed sessions Jan. 10-12 on requests for supplemental fiscal 1955 funds. Transcripts of the testimony were made public.

ACTION -- Reported HR 2091 Jan. 13 (H Rept 3) with recommended appropriations totaling $25,000.

The Committee report criticized the Commodity Credit Corporation for "failure" to sell its surplus farm commodities "competitively in world markets."

The report noted that "the majority of the Committee feels that steps should be taken as early as practicable to begin the movement of these commodities into world markets on a competitive bid basis through American exporters," and that "an immediate announcement of such change in policy should be made to discourage further increases in foreign production to the detriment of American farmers."

Floor Action

The House Jan. 13 passed HR 2091 by voice vote, without amendment or much debate.

PROVISIONS -- As it went to the Senate, the bill carried the following major provisions:

Appropriate $12,500 each to the estates of the late Reps. Paul W. Shafer (R Mich.) and Dwight L. Rogers (D Fla.), both of whom died in 1954.

Increase the amount available for administrative expenses of the Commodity Credit Corporation from $18 million to $25,290,000, as requested.

Increase the authorization for administrative expenses of the Federal Housing Administration by $125,000, as requested, for use in connection with "windfall profits" cases.

Authorize the transfer of an additional $90,000 from the War Claims Fund to the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission of the U.S. instead of the $130,000 transfer sought by the Administration.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- In closed session Jan. 14 and Jan. 17 on supplemental funds requests.

ACTION -- Reported HR 2091 Jan. 17 (S Rept 6) with proposed appropriations totaling $993,950.

The Senate group recommended: $828,950 for various Senate expenses, including $25,000 for beneficiaries of two deceased Senators and $795,000 for Senate inquiries and investigations; $140,000 for the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations rather than the requested $160,000; and an increase to $130,000 in funds for the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission. Other Senate Committee provisions were similar to those in the House bill.

Floor Action

The Senate Jan. 18 passed the deficiency money bill by voice vote after approving an amendment which raised the appropriation total to $1,013,950.

DEBATE -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- The Commission on Intergovernmental Relations needed an additional $160,000 "to complete its work." The Senate "should not exercise the fine art of cheese paring and take off $20,000."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Dirksen -- Appropriate $160,000 in lieu of $140,000 recommended by Senate Appropriations Committee for the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. Voice vote.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Make the additional funds available to the Commission until June 30, 1955, effective on enactment of HR 2010, in lieu of May 31 date proposed by Senate Appropriations group. Voice.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

The House Jan. 20 agreed without objection to the Senate amendments to HR 2091, clearing the bill for White House action.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL, 1955

HR 4903 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 207) March 15, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $855,212,429.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote March 18. (For roll-call vote, see p. 142.) Appropriations voted: $857,187,429.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 138) April 13. Recommended: $938,402,835.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote April 14. Voted: $945,412,835.
- Conference report (H Rept 426) agreed to by the House and Senate April 20, both by voice vote.

P. L. 24 -- Signed into law April 22. Final total: $898,805,875.

The Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1955 carried funds to meet the emergency needs of more than a dozen federal agencies for the remaining months of fiscal 1955. The final appropriations were $53,196,843 less than the President's final request.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 4903, as it became law:

Agriculture	$ 650,000
Commerce	159,875,000
Defense	(284,820,000)*
Foreign Operations	(6,500,000)*
Independent Offices	396,051,000
Interior	3,730,000
Labor-HEW	314,000,000
Public Works	400,000
State, Justice, Judiciary	6,135,067
Treasury-Post Office	148,000
Legislative	8,312,589
Claims and judgments	9,504,219
TOTAL	$ 898,805,875

*To be derived by transfer from previous appropriations.

Includes $21,139 for fiscal 1954.

BACKGROUND -- The First Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1955, granting over $1.6 billion, was enacted by the 83rd Congress. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 175-78.)

In January, 1955, the 84th Congress passed an Urgent Deficiency bill appropriating $1,013,950 in supplemental funds. (See p. 246.) Subsequently, President Eisenhower asked for $920,523,454 more for fiscal 1955, mainly for items such as veterans' pensions which could not be budgeted precisely. Prior to Senate action on the supplemental bill (HR 4903), he increased his requests to $952,002,718.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- In closed sessions Feb. 23 - March 3 on requests for fiscal 1955 supplemental funds. Transcripts of hearings were made public.

ACTION -- March 15 reported HR 4903 (H Rept 207) with a recommended total appropriation of $855,212,429.

The Committee recommended that the legislative branch of the government receive the amount requested, $2,824,820, which included $1,468,000 to cover salary increases for Members of Congress. (See page 357.)

The report recommended that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare receive the amount it requested -- $306,500,000 -- for assistance in operation, maintenance, and construction of schools, and for revised costs in the Social Security program.

The Third Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1954 made $15 million available for a program of sharing with farmers the cost of emergency wind erosion control measures in drought areas through 1954. HR 4903 would continue the payments during 1955 out of an uncommitted balance of $7,147,000, but eliminate the limitation of $1.25 an acre as carried in the act of 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 180.)

Floor Action

The House March 18 passed HR 4903 by voice vote. The House version of the bill carried appropriations of $857,187,429. Three floor amendments were accepted, one by roll-call vote that reinserted funds for the United Nations technical assistance program. (For voting, see chart, p. 142.)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds approved by the House:

Agriculture	$ 500,000
Commerce	133,980,000
Foreign Operations	(4,000,000)*
Independent offices	396,036,000

Interior	$ 3,730,000
Labor-HEW	306,500,000
Public Works	400,000
State, Justice, and Judiciary	4,971,767
Legislative	4,799,820
Claims and judgments	6,269,842
TOTAL	$857,187,429

*To be derived by transfer from previous appropriations.

DEBATE -- Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) raised a point of order against a provision authorizing transfer of $4 million unexpended funds to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization for its technical assistance program. The provision was deleted. Hoffman said the United States was committed to the UN program "without authority." The deleted provision, however, was restored through amendments by Reps. Prince H. Preston, Jr. (D Ga.) and John Taber (R N.Y.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Preston -- Reinsert a paragraph (deleted by a point of order) providing an additional $4 million for the UN technical assistance program for the period ending June 30, 1955. Teller vote, 89-63; roll-call, 175-107.

Taber -- Reinsert a paragraph (deleted by a point of order) providing that funds for the UN program would be derived by transfer from previous appropriations. Voice.

Sam Rayburn (D Texas) -- Provide $2 million for the purchase of land and construction of a third House Office Building with more money to be appropriated as needed. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John Phillips (R Calif.) -- Appropriate $2.5 million to the UN program. Standing, 52-74.

H. R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Appropriate $300,000 for construction of the Jones Point Bridge over the Potomac River, instead of $600,000 recommended by the Committee. Standing, 12-70.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HEARINGS -- March 21 - April 1 in open session on supplemental funds requests.

ACTION -- April 13 reported HR 4903 (H Rept 138) with recommended appropriations of $938,402,835. In all cases the Senate Committee recommended larger amounts than those approved by the House.

The Committee recommended the full amount of the budget estimate, $8 million, for contribution to the UN Technical Assistance program.

The Committee added $10.2 million for airline subsidies, $25 million for operating subsidies to U.S. shipping lines, and $10 million for federal grants to the states for highway construction. These additions brought the amounts recommended for these sections of the Department of Commerce to the amounts of the requests.

The Senate group recommended an addition of $14 million to the $8 million granted by the House for military functions of the Defense Department. The Committee said this addition was "necessary to provide for additional part-year military pay costs under the Career Incentive Act of 1955." (See p. 331.)

A request by the Federal Civil Defense Administration for $12 million (S Doc 14), not considered by the House, was approved in full by the Committee. The Committee recommended an appropriation of $5 million for the purchase of land and construction of a third House Office Building. The House approved a $2 million appropriation.

Floor Action

The Senate April 14 passed HR 4903 by voice vote, allocating $945,412,835 in supplemental appropriations. Two amendments were accepted by voice vote, adding $7,010,000 to the amount recommended by the Committee. The Senate insisted on its amendments and requested a conference.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 4903, as approved by the Senate:

Agriculture	$ 7,700,000
Commerce	181,908,000
Defense	(286,320,000)*
Foreign Operations	(8,000,000)*
Independent offices	408,057,000
Interior	3,730,000
Labor-HEW	319,500,000
Public works	400,000
State, Justice, Judiciary	6,149,567
Treasury-Post Office	148,000
Legislative	8,316,049
Claims and judgments	9,504,219
TOTAL	$945,412,835

*To be derived by transfer from previous appropriations.

DEBATE -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "How much reliance can we place on the claims for economy, which are made after the regular budget is passed, if the figure then stated is increased by means of supplemental appropriation bills, subsequently passed." It is a "bad practice...unfortunately, a common one -- for the Administration to claim it has achieved economy by cutting the amounts in the main budget and then -- a few months or a year afterwards -- to make requests for supplemental appropriations..." Administration claims for achievements of economy "are...illusory, extravagant, and ill-founded."

Styles Bridges (R N.H.) -- "It is distasteful to me, as it is to the Senator from Illinois, to have supplemental appropriation bills. I think we should live within our income....but there have been reductions in appropriations...there have been reductions in expenditures....the situation (of having supplemental bills) is not something new. The precedent was established under previous administrations, and the same thing has been happening year in and year out."

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- In "the vast areas affected by drought or by freezing weather...in some cases...more than 40 percent of the school children... have to rely upon federal participation in the school-lunch program, because of lack of food in the families of those children."

Bridges -- "We should certainly give warning...that next year the states should live within their budgets (for the school-lunch program), and that the funds should be so budgeted as to cover the entire school year..."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Increase by $10,000 Senate Office Building item so as to provide for a survey of and recommendations for illumination of that building. Voice.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Provide $7 million in additional funds for the school-lunch program. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House Conference Committee April 19 submitted its report on HR 4903 (H Rept 426). The compromise version had 21 amendments still in dispute.

Among the recommendations of the Conference Committee were provisions which would:

Eliminate the Senate proposal to appropriate an additional $7 million for the school lunch program.

Appropriate $8.9 million for payments due to subsidized airmail carriers, instead of $5 million proposed by the House and $15.2 million proposed by the Senate.

Appropriate $50 million for operating subsidies for U.S. shipping lines, instead of $35 million proposed by the House and $60 million by the Senate.

Provide $95 million for federal aid to state highway construction, instead of $90 million proposed by the House and $100 million by the Senate.

Appropriate $230,000, the House amount, for civil functions of the Defense Department, instead of $338,000 proposed by the Senate.

Provide, by transfer, $6.5 million for contributions to the United Nations Expanded Program for Technical Assistance, instead of $4 million proposed by the House and $8 million proposed by the Senate.

Delete $12 million for the Federal Civil Defense Administration proposed by the Senate.

Appropriate $7.5 million for unemployment compensation for federal employees, instead of $13 million as proposed by the Senate.

HOUSE ACTION

The House April 20 agreed, by voice vote, to recede and concur in 18 Senate amendments still in dispute, including one providing $5 million for purchase of land and construction of a third House Office Building. The House also approved, by voice vote, changes in three other disputed amendments.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate April 20 approved, by voice votes, the conference version of HR 4903 and the House changes in the disputed amendments.

JUSTICE DEFICIENCY

H J Res 252 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 205) March 14, 1955. Recommended appropriation: $710,000.

- Passed by the House, without amendments, March 14 by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee, unamended, (S Rept 106) March 15.
- Passed by the Senate, without amendment, March 16 by voice vote.

P. L. 13 -- Signed into law March 21. Final total: $710,000.

The bill was necessitated because the Justice Department failed to make its additional needs known in time to include them in the First Urgent Deficiency Act of 1955 (HR 2091). (See p. 246.)

PROVISIONS -- PL 13 made an additional appropriation of $710,000 to the Justice Department for fiscal 1955 for the payment of fees and expenses of government witnesses.

SECOND DEFICIENCY, 1955

H J Res 310 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 605) May 19, 1955. Recommended appropriations: $25,263,475.

- Passed by the House May 19, by voice vote, without amendment.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 371) May 23, without amendment.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, May 25 with a technical amendment.
- House approved Senate amendment by voice vote, May 25.

P. L. 48 -- Signed into law May 27. Final total: $25,263,475.

The Second Urgent Deficiency Appropriation bill for fiscal 1955 carried a total of $25,263,475.

PROVISIONS -- The Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government was granted $263,475 to cover its expenses during a 90-day liquidation period. (See p. 367.) The Veterans' Administration received $25 million to finance an unanticipated increase in the number of veterans receiving training, and to cover increased costs of the veterans' loan guaranty program.

Bills Acted On

How They Are Listed

Appropriations bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below, in order of bill number. (For all Bills Introduced in this Appropriations category, including bills not acted on, see page 567. For complete listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 104.)

The following summary of each bill gives description, sponsor, and date of action taken or page reference to a detailed legislative history.

In this Appropriations section, the Bills Acted On are divided only into those on which work was finished -- under the heading "Action Completed" -- and those not finished -- listed under "Unfinished Business."

HOUSING AMENDMENTS OF 1955

S 2126 -- Reported (S Rept 404) by Senate Banking and Currency Committee June 1, 1955.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a roll-call vote of 60-25, June 7. (See page 128.)
- Reported, amended, by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 913) June 25.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a roll-call vote of 396-3, July 29. (See page 164.)
- Conference report (H Rept 1622) agreed to by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 1, by the House on a roll-call vote of 187-168, Aug. 2. (See page 164.)

P.L. 345 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

Debate on the 1955 housing bill centered largely on attempts to revive the public housing program, which had lain almost dormant under restrictions imposed by the Housing Act of 1954.

The Senate passed a bill which authorized 135,000 public housing starts a year until the 810,000 permitted under the 1949 Housing Act had been completed. The House passed an amended version of the bill which cut out all reference to public housing. The final, compromise version permitted 45,000 public housing starts to be made before July 31, 1956.

The President signed the bill Aug. 11, saying he had "serious objections" to some of its provisions, but that others were "very important and desirable." Mr. Eisenhower said he had wished public housing aid extended only to those communities which had adopted workable slum clearance programs. He noted that "the Act fails to make adequate provisions for carrying out these objectives."

PROVISIONS -- The Housing Amendments of 1955:

Authorized an additional $4 billion for general Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance, with unused previous authorizations to be included in the figure.

Authorized Public Housing Administration contribution contracts for 45,000 units of public housing through July 31, 1956.

Removed restrictions imposed by the 1954 housing law on public housing contracts.

Extended the FHA's repair and modernization loan program through Sept. 30, 1956.

Set up a revolving fund, to reach $48 million in fiscal 1959, to make loans to public agencies for the planning of community facilities.

Limited aid to any one state to 10 percent.

Declared Congress had no obligation to appropriate funds for construction of any such project.

Authorized a $100 million revolving fund, to be administered by the Community Facilities Administration, for 40-year loans to state agencies and municipalities for construction of water, gas, and sewer systems.

Directed that priority be given to towns of less than 10,000 population.

Increased the authorization for assistance in slum clearance and urban renewal programs by $200 million annually in fiscal 1956 and 1957.

Permitted the President to increase the authorization by $100 million at any time.

Permitted loans to public agencies for non-residential development in slum clearance areas, limited to 2½ percent of the cost of projects undertaken by the agencies.

Eased limitations on the funds allotted each state.

BASIS FOR ESTIMATES

Provided that the maximum mortgage for cooperative housing and new construction in urban renewal projects should be based on "estimated replacement cost" rather than on "estimated value."

Authorized the Federal National Mortgage Association to make up to $50 million in advance commitments to buy cooperative housing mortgages, limited to $5 million in any state.

Provided a Special Assistant for Cooperative Housing, with staff, in the FHA.

Increased to $12.5 million the maximum mortgage limitation for each privately built multi-family project.

Permitted insurance on eight-family private or cooperative rental units.

Authorized FHA insurance on trailer parks, limited to $1,000 per trailer space and $300,000 per mortgage.

Authorized, in the College Housing Amendments of 1955, $500 million for 50-year loans to educational institutions for housing and other facilities, at low, specified interest.

Permitted $100 million to be used for facilities such as dining halls and infirmaries.

Authorized $1,363,500,000 in FHA insurance for military housing through Sept. 30, 1956, to be built by competitive bid at an average cost of no more than $13,500 per family unit. (It would provide 100,000 units for the military departments and 1,000 for the Coast Guard.)

Set 4 percent as the maximum interest rate and 25 years as the amortization period for the mortgages.

Authorized the Secretary of Defense to contract for the housing and maintain it for military and civilian personnel and their families.

Authorized FNMA to issue advance commitments of $200 million for military housing.

Permitted certain housing projects certified under the previous military housing program (Wherry Act) by the Defense Department or Atomic Energy Committee to continue.

Authorized $100 million in loans for farm houses and buildings in fiscal 1956, plus $12 million for farm improvements.

Terminated the defense housing program except for certain commitments made before Aug. 1, 1955.

Set up the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as an independent agency no longer affiliated with the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

FHA MORTGAGE RAISE

A stop-gap bill (S J Res 42 -- PL 10), raising the mortgage insurance authority of the Federal Housing Administration by $1.5 billion, had been enacted early in March, 1955, without controversy.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Omnibus Housing Act of 1954." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 198ff.)

The Housing Act of 1954 contained public housing provisions which, while authorizing 35,000 public housing starts for one year, tied in approval of these starts with slum clearance and urban redevelopment programs. The result of these restrictions was a slowdown of public housing to a point where only 142 starts were made in the ten-month period following passage of the Act.

President Eisenhower outlined his public housing program in his State of the Union speech Jan. 6, 1955, when he said:

"As part of our efforts to provide decent, safe and sanitary housing for low-income families, we must carry forward the housing program authorized during the 83rd Congress. We must also authorize contracts for a firm program of 35,000 additional public housing units in each of the next two fiscal years. This program will meet the most pressing obligations of the federal government into the 1958 fiscal year for planning and building public housing. By that time the private building industry, aided by the Housing Act of 1954, will have had the opportunity to assume its full role in providing adequate housing for our low-income families."

The President's budget message Jan. 17 asked Congress to authorize an additional $100 million in capital grant authority for urban development and redevelopment in fiscal 1955, and $200 million for each of the two following fiscal years (1956 and 1957).

In his Economic Report of Jan. 20, Mr. Eisenhower requested Congress to raise the insurance authorization of the FHA and give the President "greater latitude" in the use of his power to vary, "in the light of economic conditions," the terms on which the federal government underwrites home mortgages.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency Housing Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 10-13, 16-20, on various housing bills, including the Administration-sponsored S 1800.

TESTIMONY -- May 10 -- Favoring a bill (S 1800) to extend and clarify laws on slum elimination and the development of urban housing were Housing Administrator Albert M. Cole and representatives of the Federal Housing Administration and the Public Housing Authority. Cole proposed that federal and local governments be given more latitude in approving public housing projects, a five-year extension of the home improvement loan program, and a $4 billion increase in FHA authority to insure mortgages.

May 11 -- Cole said a bill (S 1501) to provide housing for members of the Armed Services called for the Housing and Home Finance Administration to insure construction of the projects without giving the HHFA authority to supervise them.

Cole and Charles E. Slusser, Public Housing Administration commissioner, said plans were underway to fit into federal plans a program of providing low-rental, specially designed housing for elderly persons of limited incomes.

May 12 -- Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) urged establishment of a government corporation to make loans to small municipalities for public projects, principally sewage facilities. Patrick Healy, Jr., of the American Municipal Association said his group generally endorsed Long's proposal.

A representative of the Comptroller General's Office said the General Accounting Office "is strongly opposed to the creation of government corporations except for the most compelling reasons."

SLUM PROGRAM OPPOSED

May 13 -- James W. Rouse, a member of President Eisenhower's Housing Advisory Committee, appeared for the Mortgage Bankers Association to oppose proposals in S 1800 to liberalize federal slum clearance programs. He said slum elimination required longtime planning and strict enforcement of building codes.

James J. O'Malley of the National Savings and Loan League generally supported S 1800, but urged amendments to set up the Home Loan Bank Board as an independent agency "in the same manner as the Federal Reserve Board and the Farm Credit Administration."

Wallace J. Campbell of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. asked for additional low-rent housing and liberalization of the cooperative housing program.

A spokesman for the National Retail Lumber Association opposed any additional public housing, but supported an increase in government insurance for regular housing programs and expanded mortgage insurance for home repair and modernization. S 1501, a bill to provide for additional housing for armed service personnel, was supported by the American Legion.

May 16 -- Educators representing the American Council on Education, the Association of American Colleges, Association of Higher Education, and Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities supported S 1774, a bill to grant federal loans to help colleges and universities provide better student housing.

S 1412, a bill to admit elderly persons to federally assisted low-rent housing projects, and S 1642, to provide housing for elderly persons of low incomes, were supported by a spokesman for the American Association of Social Workers.

May 17 -- In a statement, Henry G. Waltemade of the National Association of Real Estate Boards called for an investigation of how local authorities were handling federal funds for low-rent public housing. "It is politically and morally wrong to require the taxpaying public to subsidize the shelter of a privileged few...Public housing is unnecessary because of the high volume of home construction...and the continued marked reduction in the number of low income persons since 1946," Waltemade said.

A representative of the U.S. Savings and Loan League supported an independent Home Loan Bank Board; a spokesman for the Jewish War Veterans urged stronger implementation of public housing laws, slum clearance, and urban renewal; and a member of the American Hotel Association urged safeguards against construction of transient accommodations.

May 18 -- Philadelphia Mayor Joseph S. Clark, Jr., representing the American Municipal Association, supported legislation to authorize 200,000 public housing units in 1956. He said the lack of adequate housing "is a desperate problem threatening our urban civilization." Walter B. Mills, Jr., of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, also urged additional public housing. He proposed changes in the housing laws to allow aged and single persons to qualify for public housing projects.

Defense Department officials supported S 1501 as the soundest possible supplement to direct building of housing units by the Armed Services.

May 19 -- Air Force Gen. Curtis E. LeMay urged approval of S 1501. He said "lack of adequate housing reduces the certainty our combat-ready wing will be fully effective in the event of hostilities." He said the housing problem also affected the morale of personnel with families.

Spokesmen for the AFL and CIO asked for legislation to speed up housing construction, with the AFL asserting the Administration program failed to meet U.S. housing needs.

A spokesman for the National Housing Conference said 60 percent of U.S. families were unable to afford to buy or rent homes currently being constructed. He recommended setting up a federal bank to loan money to individuals at .5 percent more than the cost of the money to the government.

A representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said housing segregation was being expanded through government housing programs, which he called "a cruel and disgusting hoax" as far as Negroes were concerned.

A fear that new urban developments were pushing slum area residents out of homes without giving them adequate substitutes was expressed by a spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

The National Apartment Owners Association asked for great care so that public housing would be limited to "families of the lowest possible economic group."

TRAILER PARK INSURANCE

May 20 -- Former Sen. Scott W. Lucas (D Ill., 1939-51), appearing for the Mobile Homes Manufacturing Association, suggested legislation to provide insurance for the financing of trailer parks.

Clyde A. Lewis of Plattsburg, N.Y. and Norbert X. Dowd of Bangor, Maine, supported S 1501. Lewis called the shortage of military housing facilities a "national disgrace."

Spokesmen for two Chicago banks and a Holland, Mich. manufacturer, representing the Title I Advisory Group, urged continuation of home improvement and modernization provisions in the National Housing Act. A representative of the National Fire Alarm Association requested the Subcommittee to encourage the FHA to make fire alarm devices eligible for home improvement insurance.

NEW BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 1 reported a clean bill (S 2126 -- S Rept 404)to provide for the construction of 890,000 housing units of various types, mostly for low income persons. The bill included provisions covering general FHA mortgage insurance and the home improvement program; public, cooperative, military, and farm housing; slum clearance programs; and community public works.

In addition, the bill would permit public housing to be designed for elderly persons, would authorize FHA insurance or trailer parks, and would make the Home Loan Bank Board an independent agency.

Floor Action

The Senate June 7 passed S 2126 by a 60-25 roll-call vote. An amendment to substitute the Administration's proposal for construction of 35,000 public housing units annually for two years was rejected by a 38-44 roll-call vote. As passed, the bill called for construction of 135,000 units annually, until the authorized total of 810,000, set in the 1949 Housing Act, was reached. (For voting, see chart. p. 128.)

Nine minor amendments to the bill were adopted by voice votes.

PROVISIONS -- The major provisions of S 2126, as sent to the House, would:

Authorize an additional $4 billion for general Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance, including unused previous authorizations.

Extend the FHA's repair and modernization loan program through June 30, 1960 and increase the maximum amount of a home improvement loan to $3,000 (from $2,500).

Permit the Public Housing Administration to contract for 135,000 units annually until the 1949 authorization of 810,000 units was met, and in addition, permit the unused authorization for fiscal 1955 to be added to the fiscal 1956 authorization.

Permit the President to add 65,000 units a year, or reduce the total by 85,000.

Repeal 1954 restrictions that limited new public housing to persons displaced by slum clearance programs.

HOUSING FOR THE AGED

Allow single persons over 65 to occupy public housing units.

Give priority to elderly persons in the allocating of units (first preference would remain with persons displaced by government programs).

Permit public housing projects to be designed wholly or partly for elderly persons and set an annual limit of 10,000 units through fiscal 1960.

Set up a revolving fund, to reach $48 million in fiscal 1959, to make loans to public agencies for the design and planning of community facilities.

Authorize a $100 million revolving fund for loans to municipalities for construction of public facilities (sewage, water works).

Increase authorization for assistance in slum clearance and urban renewal programs by $212,500,000 annually for fiscal 1956 and 1957.

Permit the President to increase the aut' orization by $100 million at any time.

Permit up to 5 percent of the funds allocated to a local agency for slum clearance to be used in developing the area for industrial use.

Provide that the maximum mortgage amount for urban renewal and cooperative housing projects should be based on "estimated replacement cost" rather than on "estimated value."

Authorize the Federal National Mortgage Association to make up to $50 million in advance commitments to buy cooperative housing mortgages.

Provide a Special Assistant for Cooperative Housing, with staff, in the FHA.

Increase to $12.5 million (from $5 million) the maximum mortgage limitation for privately built multi-family projects but permit a $50 million limit in urban renewal areas.

Permit up to $300,000 mortgage insurance for trailer parks at $1,000 per trailer space.

Raise to $500 million (from $300 million), and set the interest rate on, the amount available for borrowing by educational institutions for student and faculty housing and other facilities (excluding gymnasiums), but set a $100 million limit on the amount to be used for non-housing facilities.

Authorize the Secretary of Defense during the next three fiscal years to contract for construction of up to 300,000 units of military housing, and to maintain and operate them.

Provide up to $1,485,000,000 in FHA insurance for military housing.

Authorize $100 million in loans for farm houses and buildings in fiscal 1956, plus $12 million for farm improvements, all to be administered by the Department of Agriculture.

Establish a farm loan insurance program, limited to $25 million annually, at 4½ percent interest.

Extend the defense housing program until July 1, 1956, on a standby basis.

Set up the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as an independent agency no longer affiliated with the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and retire government stock from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Reduce the investment in Federal National Mortgage Association stock that is required of sellers of mortgages to the FNMA.

Authorize the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to make up to four-year contracts for research on air pollution and devices to prevent it.

Authorize the HHFA to provide financial aid to businesses desiring equipment to reduce air pollution but limit the program to communities that had developed effective anti-pollution programs.

PUBLIC HOUSING NEEDS

DEBATE -- Acting under a debate limitation agreement, the Senate disposed of the bill with controversy limited to the public housing figure.

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- A public housing rate of 35,000 annually "is unrealistic in terms of the need," estimated in one city alone as 70,000 units. Repeal of 1954 restrictions is necessary to provide homes for low-income families who leave slum areas of their own volition, or are displaced by private slum-clearance or by catastrophes, such as fires.

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "Personally, I am opposed to public housing." But if it is needed in some large cities, "I shall go along with" the President's proposal for 35,000 units, plus 10,000 for elderly persons, "although in my opinion even that number will be too many..."

Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) -- S 2126 "provides an additional $4 billion...to assist those fortunate persons who, because they have sufficient salaries, are able to buy or build their own homes. But when it comes to assisting unfortunate Americans who...are unable to afford the comfort of an FHA-financed home, we hear a lot of 'squawking' not only on the House or Senate floors, but from the very persons" urging the $4 billion increase. Public housing "has been a Godsend" to communities where projects have been built.

Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- "Not only does the bill destroy (previous) safeguards...in these programs, but it sweetens them up with more money to make them more attractive to dynamiters, suede-shoe boys, profiteers, and all the rest of the unscrupulous exploiters of housing programs."

(See Congressional Record, June 7.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) -- Amend public housing section to permit up to 65,000 more, or 85,000 fewer, units to be started per year if the President determined, upon the advice of the Council of Economic Advisers, that it was in the best economic interests of the country. Voice vote.

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- Make the reduced, 2-3/4 percent interest rate on loans to colleges apply when the money was disbursed by the FHA. Voice.

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Add 10,000 units for housing Coast Guard personnel, bringing the military housing insurance figure to $1,485,000,000. Voice.

Bush -- Authorize the HHFA to sell a war housing project in Glastonbury, Conn. to the local housing authority. Voice.

Byrd -- Require that military agencies certify that housing units meet specifications before the Defense Department acquires the units. Voice.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Authorize the HHFA to acquire certain parcels of land in Richmond, Calif., for resale to the city. Voice.

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Delete reference in military housing section to subsequent legislation. Voice.

Sparkman -- Permit national banks to purchase federally insured mortgages on farm homes. Voice.

Sparkman -- Provide a Special Assistant for Cooperative Housing, with staff, in the FHA. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Capehart, as modified by Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) -- Reduce public housing authorization, except for provisions on elderly persons, to 35,000 units annually for two years. Roll call, 38-44.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- May 23-26, June 2, 7-9, on various bills.

TESTIMONY -- May 23, 24 -- Support for a bill (HR 5827) to extend and clarify laws on slum elimination and the development of urban housing came from Administration housing officials.

May 25 -- Representatives of the American Legion urged legislation to provide more housing for armed forces personnel.

May 26 -- Mayors Donald H. Mead of Syracuse and Joseph Clark of Philadelphia, representing the American Municipal Association, cited the need for additional public housing.

June 2-- Former Sen. Lucas and spokesmen for the Trailer Coach Association and the Mobile Home Dealers Association urged provisions to allow mortgage insurance for trailers and trailer parks. A spokesman for the U.S. Savings and Loan League asked that the Home Loan Bank Board be made an independent organization.

June 7 -- Representatives of the National Savings and Loan League and the National Association of Real Estate Boards testified generally.

June 8 -- Robert Scott, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said the Chamber had "opposed subsidized government housing, or public housing...ever since the program was inaugurated." He said the group "believes that the private ownership of housing is a basic principle in our economy and that there should be no further federal appropriation or participation in the financing of public subsidized housing."

June 9 -- Clarence Mitchell of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People asked the Committee to include in new legislation "proper safeguards so that not one penny of federal money will be used for housing...segregated on the basis of race."

Ben Fischer, director of the CIO housing committee, said there was a need for long-term financing at low interest rates, "with some assurance to the consumer that he can protect his investment in the event of temporary unemployment."

PUBLIC HOUSING CUT

ACTION -- The Committee June 25 reported an amended version of S 2126 (H Rept 913). Some of the provisions of the Administration-backed bill (HR 5827) were substituted for the Senate's provisions, notably when the House group voted to authorize only 35,000 public housing units in fiscal years 1956 and 1957.

The $4 billion FHA authorization was retained, but the home improvement program was extended for only one year, rather than the Senate's five years, under the House Committee's amendments. Also, the housing program for elderly persons was revised, to provide 20,000 units over a two-year period. The new military housing program voted by the Senate was turned down by the House Committee.

Provisions were struck from S 2126 to provide insured loans for trailer parks and FHA grants for redevelopment of urban areas for non-residential uses. The Committee authorized FHA loans, however, for redevelopment of the urban areas.

RULES GROUP STYMIES BILL

COMMITTEE -- Rules

HEARING -- July 1, on a request for a rule to bring S 2126 to the House floor for debate.

TESTIMONY -- Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) led several Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committee in urging the Rules Committee to hold up the housing measure. Wolcott said the White House told him the President was dissatisfied with S 2126 because it omitted a provision limiting public housing occupancy to persons displaced by slum clearance and urban development.

ACTION -- The Rules Committee July 1 voted against granting a rule and allowing the House to consider S 2126. The group refused to clear the bill by a 6-6 vote, thus leaving it in Committee. Two Democrats -- Chairman Howard W. Smith (Va.) and William M. Colmer (Miss.) -- joined four Republicans -- Leo E. Allen (Ill.), Clarence J. Brown (Ohio), Harris Ellsworth (Ore.), and Henry J. Latham (N.Y.) -- in voting against clearing S 2126. Six Democrats voted for a rule.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) July 5 said the only way of getting the bill to the House would be for the Rules Committee to reverse itself. He said: "If the Republican leadership and the Republican Administration can get one vote on the Rules Committee it looks like we can get a housing bill. Otherwise it looks like we might not."

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) said "we'll get a housing bill before we're through."

On July 28, after three Republican members reportedly switched their votes, the Committee granted a rule (H Res 326) on the bill. Reps. Smith, Colmer, and Brown were reported as still opposed to granting a rule.

Floor Action

The House July 29 passed a "skeleton" version of S 2126 by a 396-3 roll-call vote. An amendment by Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) that removed all public housing provisions, plus others affecting elderly persons, cooperative housing, colleges, farms, and community facilities, was agreed to by a 217-188 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 164.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference by the House, S 2126 would:

Authorize an additional $4 billion for general Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance.

Extend FHA's repair and modernization loan program to July 1, 1956.

Authorize construction of military housing under the Wherry Act where certification was made by the Secretary of Defense before June 30, 1955, or by the Atomic Energy Commission by June 30, 1956.

Authorize for slum clearance and urban renewal an additional $200 million in fiscal 1956 and 1957, with authority given the President to increase the amount by $100 million.

DEBATE -- July 29 -- William M. Colmer (D Miss.) -- Under the 1954 housing law, public housing "is dead. The Committee bill would revive it. The Wolcott amendment would keep it the corpse that it is." The cost of public housing "is prohibitive," the program "kills the initiative" of those it aids, and because of Supreme Court rulings on segregation, southern states will not build public housing, in which races must be integrated.

Henry J. Latham (R N.Y.) -- The bill before the House "is not at all the President's program." Important restrictions in existing public housing law and in the Administration's program were left out of the bill.

Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- "Some gentlemen say that the President does not want" public housing. But "three times this year he said he was in favor of public housing."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "The Administration feels that in adopting the Wolcott amendment and getting the whole subject to conference, they will get a bill that more nearly conforms to the wishes of the Administration than the bill" sent to the House floor.

Hugh Scott (R Pa.) -- Republicans who "only this morning" at a political gathering yelled 'We want Ike' now say the way to be for what Ike wants is to vote against it.... I have heard a lot of specious arguments.... but today takes the cake."

Sidney R. Yates (R Ill.) -- "We need a program that will satisfy the housing needs of all Americans, of every economic level, not just those who can afford to buy their own houses.... It is comparatively easy to tear down slums if we do not care what happens to people.... The Wolcott amendment would deny them any consideration at all."

(See Congressional Record, July 29.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Hamer H. Budge (R Idaho) -- Amend Wolcott substitute to include in the military housing provisions authority for commitments made by the Atomic Energy Commission by June 30, 1956. Standing vote, 138-114.

Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) -- Substitute for the bill provisions authorizing additional funds for general FHA mortgage insurance and slum clearance, and extending FHA home improvement and military housing programs. Teller vote, 200-147; roll call, 217-188.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Adam C. Powell, Jr. (D N.Y.) -- Amend Wolcott substitute to prohibit limiting any aid provided in the bill for reasons of race, religion, or national origin. Standing, 113-168; teller, 112-158.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee Aug. 1 reported (H Rept 1622) a compromise version of S 2126 recommending 45,000 public housing units by July 31, 1956. The President had asked for 70,000 units over a two-year period. The Senate had voted for 135,000 units for approximately four years.

The compromise bill reinstated numerous provisions of the Senate version, some with modifications. Five members of the conference group did not sign the report: the three GOP House conferees, Reps. Wolcott, Ralph A. Gamble (N.Y.), and Henry O. Talle (Iowa); and Sens. John W. Bricker (R Ohio) and Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.).

Conferees also:

Dropped Senate provisions for housing for elderly persons.

Accepted Senate items dealing with cooperative and farm housing, community planning and public facilities, insurance for trailer camps, and a step-up in aid to college housing projects.

Cut the military housing authorized in the Senate version.

Dropped air pollution provisions of the Senate bill, since they had been included in a separate bill (S 928) which became PL 159, July 14.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) said Aug. 2, after a White House conference on legislative matters, that the compromise bill was "administratively wrong" and not satisfactory to the Administration.

HHFA Administrator Albert M. Cole said he still wanted 70,000 public housing units and that the failure to insure that communities work out "comprehensive" slum clearance programs "sabotages the President's program." Cole also objected to the bill's trailer park financing, the divorce of the Home Loan Bank Board from the HHFA, and loans to communities for public works construction.

Senate Action

The Senate Aug. 1 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report on S 2126.

DEBATE -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Regretted that no housing was provided for elderly persons but the House conferees "refused to consider that provision in any amount." However, 90 percent of the Senate bill was accepted.

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- The compromise bill was "splendid.... I see nothing wrong with it whatever."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- The bill is "completely inadequate.... We in New York City alone need more than the number of public housing units" provided. "What progress we made, we made in the face of the combined forces of the Administration and the real estate lobby."

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Also regretted that the House conferees would accept no more than 45,000 public housing units.

(See Congressional Record, Aug. 1.)

The House Aug. 2 agreed to the conference report by a 187-168 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 164.)

DEBATE -- Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- "There is a reason why the Senate wanted more low-rent public housing than the House. Every Senator represents a state, and in every state there is some city that needs public housing." Provision of 45,000 units "will not meet the minimum requirement."

Edgar W. Hiestand (R Calif.) -- During 11 days of Committee testimony, "no evidence was introduced to show that more public housing was needed.... Actually, the evidence was that most cities did not want it."

Albert Rains (D Ala.) -- "In any well rounded housing program...provision should be made for those who are unable to get a house built by private enterprise." No witness said he could make a profit on "a house that a man with a $1,800-a-year salary can pay rent on."

Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) -- "The President does not want public housing without tying it in with slum clearance and urban renewals.... The President does not want many other things in this bill." FHA insurance on trailer parks would make "mortgage financing available to potentially vacant properties, because you can move a trailer off a trailer camp and you have no house left there."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- Urged recommittal of the conference report so the conferees could "bring back the kind of legislation that will be suitable to the President and be most beneficial to the country."

(See Congressional Record, Aug. 2.)

PRESIDENT PROTESTS, BUT SIGNS

President Eisenhower signed the bill into Public Law 345, Aug. 11.

The President said he had "serious objections" to some sections of the bill, but signed it so as to pass into law other "very important and desirable provisions." The President noted that in the Act public housing was not tied to slum clearance and urban renewal as he had wished. He also objected to provisions which detached the Home Loan Bank Board from the Housing and Home Finance Agency, to extension of HHFA lending authority without normal appropriation review, and to an enlarged lending program for the construction of local public works.

The President praised other features of the bill which "enable families of moderate income to acquire or improve their own homes."

GROUP STANDS -- For positions on housing taken by various organizations interested in the field, see the Lobby Roundup, p. 674.

POLIO VACCINE

S 2501 -- Reported by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 839) July 13, 1955.
• Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 18.
HR 7126 -- Reported by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee July 14 (H Rept 1186).
S 2501 -- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, Aug. 1.
• Conference report (H Rept 1626) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 2.
P.L. 377 -- Signed into law Aug. 12.

Enactment of this bill, authorizing allocation of funds for free polio vaccinations, followed several months of heated debate and testimony on the proper methods for handling the program. Results of 1954 field trials of the vaccine were announced April 12. The subsequent discovery of defective vaccine, revision of federal safety standards, and a resultant slow-down in vaccine production led to a movement for federal control of vaccine distribution.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the Poliomyelitis Vaccination Assistance Act of 1955:

Authorized, through Feb. 15, 1956, "such sums as may be necessary" for the states to provide children under 20 and expectant mothers with polio vaccine.

Provided each state with funds equal to one-third the number of unvaccinated eligible persons in the state, multiplied by the polio vaccine's cost and a figure derived by dividing the state's per capita income into the per capita income of the United States.

Provided that "no means test or other discrimination based on financial ability of individuals" would determine who was to receive the vaccine.

Authorized the Surgeon General, "for the purpose of assuring the most effective and equitable distribution" of the vaccine, to set up priorities of persons eligible for it, and to approve state plans for its distribution, under the general supervision of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

In the first Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1956 (HR 7278 -- PL 219), $30 million was appropriated for Public Health Service grants to the states to cover costs of the polio vaccine, and $4.5 million for the distribution of the vaccine. (See Appropriations story, p. 242.)

Background

The history-making report on successful field tests of Dr. Jonas E. Salk's anti-polio vaccine was made April 12, 1955, by Dr. Thomas Francis, Jr., director of the Poliomyelitis Vaccine Evaluation Center, at the University of Michigan. The government immediately licensed six firms to manufacture and distribute the vaccine. The authorization was signed by Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

On April 27 all Salk vaccine produced by Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley, Calif., was ordered withdrawn from use. The Public Health Service said a number of children who received Cutter vaccine had contracted polio. Cutter cases mounted and some other cases occurred following shots from vaccines made by other manufacturers. On May 18 the Public Health Service announced there would be no further release of vaccine until there was a plant-by-plant review of the manufacturing process.

On May 30 Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele said polio immunization was "back on the track" after vaccine manufacturers had agreed to strict new testing and production techniques. He said he hoped nine million school children would receive two shots before the late-summer polio peak. Scheele had announced on May 25 creation of a permanent Poliomyelitis Vaccine Clearance Panel. The finding of live virus in the Cutter vaccine was confirmed by Scheele June 5, and the Public Health Service later blamed this on a failure in its safety tests.

FEDERAL CONTROL DEBATED

Bills (HR 5611, 5599) favoring federal control of vaccine distribution were introduced April 18 by Reps. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) and Albert Rains (D Ala.), but President Eisenhower May 4 told a news conference he favored voluntary distribution. He added that the government would see that all children were vaccinated, regardless of ability to pay.

At a May 16 Senate hearing, Mrs. Hobby called the shortage of vaccine "tremendous," and said "no one could have foreseen the public demand" for it.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said Mrs. Hobby should be "removed from office...for her gross incompetency," and accused the President of trying to "cover up" Administration "bungling." Morse and Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.), among others, urged free shots for all children and standby federal vaccine controls. Democratic critics of the Administration's handling of the vaccine program included ex-President Harry S. Truman and Adlai E. Stevenson, former presidential candidate.

Defending the Administration, Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.), Chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, said that "a suggestion...the Republican party has interfered with the (vaccine) program is made either from sheer ignorance...or with a determined effort to confuse the public in the hope of political gain."

President Eisenhower May 16 asked Congress to provide $28 million in federal grants to states so children in low-income families would be assured vaccination. Some Democrats objected that the plan would require a "means test."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HEARINGS -- May 16, June 14, 15 on bills (S 1984, 2147) to provide polio vaccine inoculations for children. S 1984 -- the Administration bill, introduced by H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- would authorize funds for needy children. S 2147, sponsored by Lister Hill (D Ala.) and six other Democrats, would make free vaccine available to all children.

TESTIMONY -- May 16 -- Mrs. Hobby said the "shortage" of vaccine was "tremendous." She added, "you can't distribute what you do not have.... I believe that no one could have foreseen the public demand."

June 14 -- Mrs. Hobby said S 2147 would lead to "socialized medicine by the back door." Dr. R.H. Hutcheson, Tennessee state health officer, said he saw no connection between free inoculation and "socialized medicine."

June 15 -- Dr. Julian P. Price of the American Medical Association opposed S 2147 as "completely unnecessary." Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said he had no interest in "promoting or opposing legislation" but wanted the vaccine to go to as many children as possible.

FEDERAL GRANTS APPROVED

ACTION -- The Committee July 13 reported a bill (S 2501 -- S Rept 839) to authorize federal grants to the states for free polio vaccine for children and expectant mothers.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, the bill would:

Authorize through Dec. 31, 1955, "such sums as may be necessary" for the states to provide children under 20 and expectant mothers with polio vaccinations.

Provide that grants would be administered under the Public Health Service Act by the Surgeon General, who could, at his discretion, set priorities on the groups that would receive the shots.

The Committee said the proposed program would operate only where "local communities undertook to develop vaccination programs involving the distribution of vaccine without charge." Because of the need for two vaccine shots by December if immunization during the 1956 polio season was to be reasonably assured, and because many state legislatures could not act by then, the report said, the bill would not call for matching funds by the states.

Floor Action

The Senate July 18 passed S 2501 by voice vote, without amendment.

DEBATE -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- The Senate Committee "decided that the objective of protecting the nation's children against paralytic poliomyelitis...could be realized without the creation of any new governmental mechanisms and without any major departure from established federal, state, and local public health patterns."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- S 2501 "represents the considered judgment of the members of the Committee...as to how the federal government can best assist the states in seeing to it that no child is denied the opportunity for vaccination, subject, of course, to the... shortage of supply, concerning which all witnesses agree the government is unable to help."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "If we are to spend federal, tax-paid dollars in payment for the vaccine, the vaccine should meet tests more stringent than those which have been followed, and...the government should pay only for that vaccine which the public health authorities themselves have double checked.... I think the American people are entitled to know that not a batch of the vaccine is going to go into a vial...unless there has first been a government test made of that batch, as well as a drug company test. This proposed legislation does not begin to touch that problem."

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- May 6 and 13 on legislation to provide federal control of polio vaccine (H J Res 299, HR 5599, 5696).

TESTIMONY -- May 6 -- Dr. Scheele explained the position of the Public Health Service on the vaccine distribution program. He said the Salk vaccine was both good and safe, that he counted on it to cut down the polio toll in the future, but that he would rather delay the program than settle for less than "every conceivable safeguard."

May 13 -- Dr. Scheele said he had "no objection" to a proposal that the government buy the entire output of vaccine and turn it over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. "There is still every reason to believe," he said, "that enough vaccine will be available to vaccinate the children in the most susceptible age groups before the height of the polio season."

The Banking Committee did not act on the bills. On May 16 the President outlined his plan to provide vaccine for needy children.

ADMINISTRATION PLAN

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- May 25, 27 on HR 6286, the Administration bill, to finance and control vaccine distribution.

TESTIMONY -- May 25 -- Roswell B. Perkins, Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, rejected a suggestion by Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D N.Y.) that political pressure had been brought on Mrs. Hobby to license Cutter Laboratories as a vaccine producer. He read a statement by Mrs. Hobby saying that $28 million would permit 13,350,000 children to be immunized, with most of the money allocated to lower-income states.

Scheele said there was almost no likelihood of contaminated vaccine from two Cutter-produced lots being used in later inoculations.

May 27 -- Dr. W.H. Sebrell, Jr., director of the National Institutes of Health, said new vaccine testing standards would reduce the chances of mistakes to "as near zero as possible."

Rep. John B. Bennett (R Mich.) opposed allocating money to the states to finance the immunization of needy children, but the idea was supported by Perkins, who said he thought "complete federal control would slow down the program of distribution."

COMMITTEE -- Health and Science Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 22 and 23 on HR 6286.

TESTIMONY -- June 22 -- Subcommittee Chairman J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) said a panel of 15 polio experts would try to "settle vague rumors...about polio vaccine."

Dr. Salk defended what he called the "perfectly remarkable job" of the American pharmaceutical industry in preparing the vaccine.

Dr. Albert B. Sabin called for an end of inoculations and a halt in manufacture of the Salk polio vaccine. He said other, less powerful virus strains should be substituted for one used to make Salk vaccine.

June 23 -- The panel supported, by an 8-2 vote, continued inoculations with the existing vaccine. They recommended substitution of other strains of virus later. Only Dr. John F. Enders agreed with Dr. Sabin that the Salk vaccine was too dangerous for use.

Dr. Thomas M. Rivers of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research said summer polio shots should continue despite some "slight hazard" of provocation. He said he would continue shots even if an epidemic were beginning, adding that "the hazard is higher but the good you can do is higher, too."

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 8 favorably reported the bill to the full Committee. The Committee

July 14 reported, with amendments, a new bill (HR 7126 -- H Rept 1186) to authorize grants to the states for polio vaccine.

PROVISIONS -- As approved, the bill would:

Authorize direct grants to states for polio shots for needy children (an estimated 25 percent of those under 20).

Authorize 50-50 matching federal-state grants where states set up programs for all children.

Permit states to use 20 percent of the grants for administrative purposes.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 1, by voice vote, suspended the rules and passed S 2501. The House amended the Senate bill by substituting the text of HR 7126, as reported.

DEBATE -- John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- The handling of the vaccine distribution program was "disgraceful.... The blame lay in the politicians, but not the politicians in Congress. It was the politicians in the executive branch of the present Administration."

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "If there was anything disgraceful about the handling of this program, it was the attempt to play politics with it, the attempt to force a scientific experiment to meet a certain deadline." He said "the unfortunate aspects of the matter were those handled by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis...in its urge to get publicity."

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- "The political slant was taken in Congress by men with small scientific minds, or no scientific minds at all, who were willing to jump in with all four feet, if they had them, to make politics out of the public-health problems of the people of this country."

Charles B. Brownson (R Ind.) -- If the bill "comes back from conference with one whit more federal aid or federal control, I shall vote and work against it." He feared it would set a "dangerous precedent."

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- "No one has found fault with the scientific approach to the problem. The fault we found is with the way the executive department has mishandled the entire problem; and we are not solving it by this legislation...(S 2501) merely appropriates some money to make the vaccine available, but it does not control it...Mrs. Hobby refused to come before our committee time after time to tell us how that could be done. Once the vaccine is manufactured, it is free to go anywhere and everywhere throughout the country. There is no legislation that will affect that situation."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee Aug. 2 reported (H Rept 1626) a compromise version of S 2501.

The conferees dropped House provisions authorizing direct grants for vaccine for needy children, and matching federal-state grants for other children. The Senate's broader grant authorization was accepted, with the date extended to Feb. 15, 1956, and a revised formula governing allocation to the states was worked out.

Authority over the program was vested in the Surgeon General under the supervision of the Secretary of HEW, instead of directly in the Secretary.

ACTION -- On Aug. 2, the last day of the session, both the House and Senate agreed, by voice votes, to the conference report. There was no debate.

SOCIAL SECURITY

HR 7225 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1189) July 14, 1955.

- Passed by the House, by a 372-31 roll-call vote, July 18. (For voting, see p. 160.)

HR 7225 liberalized and extended benefits of one part of social security -- the Old Age and Survivors' Insurance program. Although the revisions generally were supported by a bipartisan majority in the House, the Administration asked that action be delayed until more study could be given the program.

The Administration also criticized the House Ways and Means Committee for holding closed hearings on HR 7225, and prevailed upon the Senate Finance Committee to wait until 1956 before considering the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 7225 would:

Pay OASI benefits to totally and permanently disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65.

Pay OASI benefits to women at age 62, instead of 65.

Continue OASI children's benefits beyond the cutoff age of 18 if total disability was sustained before the age of 18.

Extend OASI coverage to lawyers, dentists, osteopaths, chiropractors, veterinarians, naturopaths, optometrists, share-croppers, turpentine and gum naval store workers, and certain Tennessee Valley Authority and Federal Home Loan Bank employees. Physicians would not be covered.

Raise the OASI tax rate, paid by workers and their employers, from 2 percent to 2.5 percent each in 1956, to 3 percent in 1960, to 3.5 percent in 1965, to 4 percent in 1970, and to 4.5 percent in 1975.

Raise the rate paid by self-employed workers to maintain their tax at 1.5 times the rate paid by workers on payrolls.

Declare it the policy of Congress that persons applying for disability payments should be referred to a state vocational rehabilitation agency so "the maximum number of such individuals may be rehabilitated..."

Provide for deductions of payments for persons refusing to accept rehabilitation.

Establish an Advisory Council on Social Security Financing to advise on maintaining the actuarial soundness of the program.

ESTIMATED BENEFITS

This was the estimate of the impact HR 7225 would have, if enacted:

Disabled Workers -- 250,000 would receive $200 million a year in new benefits at the outset; after 25 years, 1 million would receive $850 million a year.

Women -- 800,000 would receive $400 million; after 25 years, 1.8 million would receive $1.3 billion.

Disabled Children -- 5,000 would receive $2 million to $3 million, eventually.

Coverage -- 250,000 additional workers would be covered. Physicians would be the only major recognized professional group still excluded from both compulsory and voluntary coverage.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Social Security Extension." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp.188ff.)

The first Social Security Act, establishing a program for retirement pension insurance and federal aid to the aged, was signed Aug. 14, 1935, by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Amendments in 1939 provided benefits for survivors of insured workers. Subsequent amendments extended the coverage and broadened the scope of the Social Security Act.

The 1954 amendments, the first adopted under a Republican Administration, extended OASI coverage to 10 million persons, bringing 9 out of 10 workers under the program. The 1954 amendments also:

Increased benefit payments for retired workers and their survivors.

Permitted a worker to drop as many as 5 years of low earnings from his wage record in computing his average monthly pay.

Increased from $3,600 to $4,200 the annual earnings on which maximum benefits would be based.

Preserved totally disabled workers' benefits by discounting wages lost through illness.

Increased to $1,200 a year the amount beneficiaries could earn without losing OASI payments.

Reduced from 75 to 72 the age at which beneficiaries could receive full OASI payments regardless of other income.

Boosted the employer's and worker's OASI contribution to 2 percent each, set the self-employed worker's contribution at 3 percent, and established a rising scale of OASI taxes, with a maximum by 1975 of 4 percent each to be paid by employers and their employees, and 6 percent to be paid by self-employed persons.

OASI PAYMENTS

Subject to certain qualifications, the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program pays monthly benefits to a:

Retired worker aged 65 or over.

Wife or dependent husband, 65 or over, of retired worker.

Wife of retired worker, regardless of her age, if she cares for an unmarried dependent child under 18.

Unmarried dependent child, under 18, of retired or deceased worker.

Widow or dependent widower, 65 or over, of deceased worker -- regardless of his age at death.

Widow of deceased worker, regardless of her age, if she cares for an unmarried dependent child under 18.

Dependent parent, over 65, of deceased worker if no widow, widower, or child is eligible.

Lump-sum death benefits, to a maximum of $255, are paid to the worker's widow or widower, or to the person who pays burial expenses.

Benefits are based on a worker's average monthly earnings, to a maximum of $350 a month. The earnings base for years before 1955 is less than $350. The average may be raised by dropping out four to five years of lowest or non-existent earnings. Disabled workers may drop out the years of disability.

About 70.4 million persons -- more than 90 percent of the working population -- were insured under Old-Age and Survivors Insurance on Jan. 1, 1955. The results of the 1954 legislation on OASI coverage were not expected to show until 1956.

OASI TRUST FUND

The OASI trust fund has been built from payroll taxes on employers and employees, and interest on the principle. The fund pays benefits to insured workers, their families and survivors, and provides money to administer the OASI program. OASI trust fund figures for fiscal 1955, and cumulative totals from Jan. 1, 1937 (when payroll taxes first were imposed) to June 30, 1955, in billions of dollars:

	Fiscal 1955	Cumulative
Contributions	$5.1	$35.6
Interest	0.4	3.4
Benefits	4.3	17.0
Expenses	0.1	0.8
Balance	21.1	21.1*

 Sums do not balance exactly because of rounding of figures.*

About 7.6 million retired workers, dependents, and survivors received OASI benefits in fiscal 1955.

Besides OASI, Social Security encompasses other programs, including public assistance and unemployment compensation. Assistance programs involve federal-state cooperation in distributing aid on the basis of need.

In view of the extensive Social Security Act changes in 1954, President Eisenhower asked the 84th Congress only to modify the formula for federal sharing in old-age assistance payments by states. No action was taken on the request in 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- June 21-23, 28, July 6 in executive session on HR 7225. The Committee voted 15-10, along straight party lines, to hold closed hearings. Democrats opposed open hearings.

TESTIMONY -- June 21 -- Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, wrote Committee Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) requesting a public "thoroughgoing review and inquiry into the issues raised" by the bill. She estimated that proposals, contained in a draft of HR 7225 sent her, to lower the pension age for women from 65 years of age to 62 and speed pensions to disabled persons would cost more than $2 billion a year

June 23 -- CIO President Walter P. Reuther wrote Cooper he "appreciated" the Committee's action in holding closed hearings. Reuther said it would be "needlessly cruel" to postpone, through lengthy hearings, action on social security improvements.

ACTION -- July 14 reported HR 7225 (H Rept 1189), by a 21-3 vote, after revising the bill to raise OASI taxes. Democrats at first sought to avoid any tax increase. Republicans sought to lower the eligibility age of women to 60.

MINORITY VIEWS

Three Republican Members -- John W. Byrnes (Wis.), Thomas B. Curtis (Mo.), and Noah M. Mason (Ill.) -- later voted against passage of the bill, and presumably were the Members who voted against the report. Although four other GOP Members -- Thomas A. Jenkins (Ohio), Robert W. Kean (N.J.), Antoni N. Sadlak (Conn.), and Richard M. Simpson (Pa.) -- voted for passage, they joined Byrnes, Curtis, and Mason in filing supplemental views declaring:

Public hearings should have been held.

"Far-reaching implications" had been "explored in...a cursory and casual fashion."

Proposed liberalizations would incite demands for further expansion of benefits, but HR 7225 would raise OASI taxes so near the saturation point it would be impractical to raise them higher to pay for desirable liberalizations in the future.

Social insurance should provide only "basic protection at a cost within the reach of all;" it could not protect against "all insurable risks."

Retirement of women at 62 instead of 65 might "run counter to...(the) major social and economic objective of wider employment opportunity..."

Reduction of the eligibility age for widows from 65 to 62, rather than to 60, might not be a "significant improvement."

Individually, Mason said "it would be almost impossible to prevent widespread abuse" of the disability program.

Floor Action

The House July 18 suspended the rules and passed HR 7225, by a 372-31 roll-call vote. The bill was not amended on the floor. (For voting, see chart, p. 160.)

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- HR 7225 "would make several major improvements in the social security system. In addition to extending coverage, the bill would remove inequities and shortcomings of the present system.... The most important improvement...is the provision of disability insurance benefits for permanently and totally disabled workers.... The lowering of the eligibility age for women beneficiaries will help relieve the personal hardship encountered by older women who now have to wait until they reach age 65 to receive benefits.... It will also make it possible for working men to retire at an earlier age, since generally speaking, the wives of older working men are a few years younger than their husbands. Providing for the continuation of monthly benefits to disabled children age 18 and over will recognize the fact that such children are just as dependent... (as) children under age 18."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "...it is unfortunate that the American people were not given a better opportunity to express their views before the House Ways and Means Committee. It is also to be regretted that there is not more than 20 minutes on a side to debate this subject.... Denied these opportunities we have only two alternatives. We could vote against the suspension of the rules and that would leave legislation with a commendable purpose high and dry, or we can vote for the legislation and send the measure along to the Senate, where I am sure it will be more carefully considered.... This bill -- imperfect as it is -- means a step in the right direction. For that reason I shall vote for it and hope the Senate will give it the more careful consideration it merits."

John E. Henderson (R Ohio) -- "...the benefits to be derived from this bill are unquestioned.... But...there is much in the background and history of this present bill that is characteristic of legislation by means of political and irresponsible expediency."

Hale Boggs (D La.) -- "...any impression that this bill has not been thoroughly and adequately considered is simply not a statement of fact. This bill was considered in executive sessions of the Committee on Ways and Means, with the experts of the Social Security Board present every day.... It was considered by the members of this Committee who time and time again have conducted public hearings on the issues involved...."

Katharine St. George (R N.Y.) -- "There is absolutely no valid excuse for a woman to retire at age 62 and a man at 65. All figures...show that the life expectancy of women is about five years longer than that of men and that their physical strength is probably considerably greater. Their mental attributes are the same."

Leonor Kretzer Sullivan (D Mo.) -- "A woman who is widowed, say, at the age of 60 and has never earned her living finds it almost impossible to earn money at that age if she is entering the working force for the first time."

Paul A. Fino (R N.Y.) -- "I shall vote for this bill, not because I am satisfied with the new age requirement, but because it recognizes the fact that the retirement age of 65 is old-fashioned and our social security system needs remodeling."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- July 26 on HR 7225. The Committee planned to hold additional hearings early in 1956.

TESTIMONY -- July 26 -- HEW Secretary Hobby asked the Committee to make a thorough study of the issues raised by HR 7225.

Mrs. Hobby said the social security system could "lose its attractiveness" if costs were increased without the "most careful evaluation of benefits they confer." She said sufficient time had not elapsed "to assess and determine the results of the 1954 amendments."

Group Stands

Stands of pressure groups on OASI issues:

COVERAGE -- Professional organizations which opposed OASI coverage of their occupational fields: American Dental Association, American Medical Association.

Organizations which opposed compulsory coverage of their fields, but favored voluntary coverage: American Bar Association, American Osteopathic Association, National Chiropractic Association, American Veterinary Medical Association, American Farm Bureau Federation (opposed compulsory coverage of self-employed farm operators, covered in 1954).

Organizations which favored compulsory coverage of their fields: Congress of American Dentists for OASI, Inc. (dissidents in American Dental Association), National Lawyers Guild, American Naturopathic Association, National Farmers Union, American Optometric Association. The American Farm Bureau Federation favored coverage of some farm laborers.

Groups which favored extension of coverage to all or most fields: American Public Welfare Association, National Farmers Union, American Federation of Labor, unnecessary." Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said he had no interest in "promoting or opposing legislation" but wanted the vaccine to go to as many children as possible.

FEDERAL GRANTS APPROVED

ACTION -- The Committee July 13 reported a bill (S 2501 -- S Rept 839) to authorize federal grants to the states for free polio vaccine for children and expectant mothers.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, the bill would:

Authorize through Dec. 31, 1955, "such sums as may be necessary" for the states to provide children under 20 and expectant mothers with polio vaccinations.

Provide that grants would be administered under the Public Health Service Act by the Surgeon General, who could, at his discretion, set priorities on the groups that would receive the shots.

The Committee said the proposed program would operate only where "local communities undertook to develop vaccination programs involving the distribution of vaccine without charge." Because of the need for two vaccine shots by December if immunization during the 1956 polio season was to be reasonably assured, and because many state legislatures could not act by then, the report said, the bill would not call for matching funds by the states.

Floor Action

The Senate July 18 passed S 2501 by voice vote, without amendment.

DEBATE -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- The Senate Committee "decided that the objective of protecting the nation's children against paralytic poliomyelitis...could be realized without the creation of any new governmental mechanisms and without any major departure from established federal, state, and local public health patterns."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- S 2501 "represents the considered judgment of the members of the Committee...as to how the federal government can best assist the states in seeing to it that no child is denied the opportunity for vaccination, subject, of course, to the... shortage of supply, concerning which all witnesses agree the government is unable to help."

This proposed legislation does not begin to touch that problem."

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- May 6 and 13 on legislation to provide federal control of polio vaccine (H J Res 299, HR 5599, 5696).

TESTIMONY -- May 6 -- Dr. Scheele explained the position of the Public Health Service on the vaccine distribution program. He said the Salk vaccine was both good and safe, that he counted on it to cut down the polio toll in the future, but that he would rather delay the program than settle for less than "every conceivable safeguard."

May 13 -- Dr. Scheele said he had "no objection" to a proposal that the government buy the entire output of vaccine and turn it over to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. "There is still every reason to believe," he said, "that enough vaccine will be available to vaccinate the children in the most susceptible age groups before the height of the polio season."

The Banking Committee did not act on the bills. On May 16 the President outlined his plan to provide vaccine for needy children.

ADMINISTRATION PLAN

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- May 25, 27 on HR 6286, the Administration bill, to finance and control vaccine distribution.

TESTIMONY -- May 25 -- Roswell B. Perkins, Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, rejected a suggestion by Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D N.Y.) that political pressure had been brought on Mrs. Hobby to license Cutter Laboratories as a vaccine producer. He read a statement by Mrs. Hobby saying that $28 million would permit 13,350,000 children to be immunized, with most of the money allocated to lower-income states.

Scheele said there was almost no likelihood of contaminated vaccine from two Cutter-produced lots being used in later inoculations.

May 27 -- Dr. W.H. Sebrell, Jr., director of the National Institutes of Health, said new vaccine testing standards would reduce the chances of mistakes to "as near zero as possible."

Rep. John B. Bennett (R Mich.) opposed allocating money to the states to finance the immunization of needy children, but the idea was supported by Perkins, who said he thought "complete federal control would slow down the program of distribution."

COMMITTEE -- Health and Science Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 22 and 23 on HR 6286.

TESTIMONY -- June 22 -- Subcommittee Chairman J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) said a panel of 15 polio experts would try to "settle vague rumors...about polio vaccine."

Dr. Salk defended what he called the "perfectly remarkable job" of the American pharmaceutical industry in preparing the vaccine.

Dr. Albert B. Sabin called for an end of inoculations and a halt in manufacture of the Salk polio vaccine. He said other, less powerful virus strains should be substituted for one used to make Salk vaccine.

June 23 -- The panel supported, by an 8-2 vote, continued inoculations with the existing vaccine. They recommended substitution of other strains of virus later. Only Dr. John F. Enders agreed with Dr. Sabin that the Salk vaccine was too dangerous for use.

Dr. Thomas M. Rivers of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research said summer polio shots should continue despite some "slight hazard" of provocation. He said he would continue shots even if an epidemic were beginning, adding that "the hazard is higher but the good you can do is higher, too."

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 8 favorably reported the bill to the full Committee. The Committee

July 14 reported, with amendments, a new bill (HR 7126 -- H Rept 1186) to authorize grants to the states for polio vaccine.

PROVISIONS -- As approved, the bill would:

Authorize direct grants to states for polio shots for needy children (an estimated 25 percent of those under 20).

Authorize 50-50 matching federal-state grants where states set up programs for all children.

Permit states to use 20 percent of the grants for administrative purposes.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 1, by voice vote, suspended the rules and passed S 2501. The House amended the Senate bill by substituting the text of HR 7126, as reported.

DEBATE -- John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- The handling of the vaccine distribution program was "disgraceful.... The blame lay in the politicians, but not the politicians in Congress. It was the politicians in the executive branch of the present Administration."

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "If there was anything disgraceful about the handling of this program, it was the attempt to play politics with it, the attempt to force a scientific experiment to meet a certain deadline." He said "the unfortunate aspects of the matter were those handled by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis...in its urge to get publicity."

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- "The political slant was taken in Congress by men with small scientific minds, or no scientific minds at all, who were willing to jump in with all four feet, if they had them, to make politics out of the public-health problems of the people of this country."

Charles B. Brownson (R Ind.) -- If the bill "comes back from conference with one whit more federal aid or federal control, I shall vote and work against it." He feared it would set a "dangerous precedent."

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- "No one has found fault with the scientific approach to the problem. The fault we found is with the way the executive department has mishandled the entire problem; and we are not solving it by this legislation...(S 2501) merely appropriates some money to make the vaccine available, but it does not control it...Mrs. Hobby refused to come before our committee time after time to tell us how that could be done. Once the vaccine is manufactured, it is free to go anywhere and everywhere throughout the country. There is no legislation that will affect that situation."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee Aug. 2 reported (H Rept 1626) a compromise version of S 2501.

The conferees dropped House provisions authorizing direct grants for vaccine for needy children, and matching federal-state grants for other children. The Senate's broader grant authorization was accepted, with the date extended to Feb. 15, 1956, and a revised formula governing allocation to the states was worked out.

Authority over the program was vested in the Surgeon General under the supervision of the Secretary of HEW, instead of directly in the Secretary.

ACTION -- On Aug. 2, the last day of the session, both the House and Senate agreed, by voice votes, to the conference report. There was no debate.

SOCIAL SECURITY

HR 7225 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1189) July 14, 1955.

- Passed by the House, by a 372-31 roll-call vote, July 18. (For voting, see p. 160.)

HR 7225 liberalized and extended benefits of one part of social security -- the Old Age and Survivors' Insurance program. Although the revisions generally were supported by a bipartisan majority in the House, the Administration asked that action be delayed until more study could be given the program.

The Administration also criticized the House Ways and Means Committee for holding closed hearings on HR 7225, and prevailed upon the Senate Finance Committee to wait until 1956 before considering the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 7225 would:

Pay OASI benefits to totally and permanently disabled workers at age 50, instead of 65.

Pay OASI benefits to women at age 62, instead of 65.

Continue OASI children's benefits beyond the cutoff age of 18 if total disability was sustained before the age of 18.

Extend OASI coverage to lawyers, dentists, osteopaths, chiropractors, veterinarians, naturopaths, optometrists, share-croppers, turpentine and gum naval store workers, and certain Tennessee Valley Authority and Federal Home Loan Bank employees. Physicians would not be covered.

Raise the OASI tax rate, paid by workers and their employers, from 2 percent to 2.5 percent each in 1956, to 3 percent in 1960, to 3.5 percent in 1965, to 4 percent in 1970, and to 4.5 percent in 1975.

Raise the rate paid by self-employed workers to maintain their tax at 1.5 times the rate paid by workers on payrolls.

Declare it the policy of Congress that persons applying for disability payments should be referred to a state vocational rehabilitation agency so "the maximum number of such individuals may be rehabilitated..."

Provide for deductions of payments for persons refusing to accept rehabilitation.

Establish an Advisory Council on Social Security Financing to advise on maintaining the actuarial soundness of the program.

ESTIMATED BENEFITS

This was the estimate of the impact HR 7225 would have, if enacted:

Disabled Workers -- 250,000 would receive $200 million a year in new benefits at the outset; after 25 years, 1 million would receive $850 million a year.

Women -- 800,000 would receive $400 million; after 25 years, 1.8 million would receive $1.3 billion.

Disabled Children -- 5,000 would receive $2 million to $3 million, eventually.

Coverage -- 250,000 additional workers would be covered. Physicians would be the only major recognized professional group still excluded from both compulsory and voluntary coverage.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Social Security Extension." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp.188ff.)

The first Social Security Act, establishing a program for retirement pension insurance and federal aid to the aged, was signed Aug. 14, 1935, by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Amendments in 1939 provided benefits for survivors of insured workers. Subsequent amendments extended the coverage and broadened the scope of the Social Security Act.

The 1954 amendments, the first adopted under a Republican Administration, extended OASI coverage to 10 million persons, bringing 9 out of 10 workers under the program. The 1954 amendments also:

Increased benefit payments for retired workers and their survivors.

Permitted a worker to drop as many as 5 years of low earnings from his wage record in computing his average monthly pay.

Increased from $3,600 to $4,200 the annual earnings on which maximum benefits would be based.

Preserved totally disabled workers' benefits by discounting wages lost through illness.

Increased to $1,200 a year the amount beneficiaries could earn without losing OASI payments.

Reduced from 75 to 72 the age at which beneficiaries could receive full OASI payments regardless of other income.

Boosted the employer's and worker's OASI contribution to 2 percent each, set the self-employed worker's contribution at 3 percent, and established a rising scale of OASI taxes, with a maximum by 1975 of 4 percent each to be paid by employers and their employees, and 6 percent to be paid by self-employed persons.

OASI PAYMENTS

Subject to certain qualifications, the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program pays monthly benefits to a:

Retired worker aged 65 or over.

Wife or dependent husband, 65 or over, of retired worker.

Wife of retired worker, regardless of her age, if she cares for an unmarried dependent child under 18.

Unmarried dependent child, under 18, of retired or deceased worker.

Widow or dependent widower, 65 or over, of deceased worker -- regardless of his age at death.

Widow of deceased worker, regardless of her age, if she cares for an unmarried dependent child under 18.

Dependent parent, over 65, of deceased worker if no widow, widower, or child is eligible.

Lump-sum death benefits, to a maximum of $255, are paid to the worker's widow or widower, or to the person who pays burial expenses.

Benefits are based on a worker's average monthly earnings, to a maximum of $350 a month. The earnings base for years before 1955 is less than $350. The average may be raised by dropping out four to five years of lowest or non-existent earnings. Disabled workers may drop out the years of disability.

About 70.4 million persons -- more than 90 percent of the working population -- were insured under Old-Age and Survivors Insurance on Jan. 1, 1955. The results of the 1954 legislation on OASI coverage were not expected to show until 1956.

OASI TRUST FUND

The OASI trust fund has been built from payroll taxes on employers and employees, and interest on the principle. The fund pays benefits to insured workers, their families and survivors, and provides money to administer the OASI program. OASI trust fund figures for fiscal 1955, and cumulative totals from Jan. 1, 1937 (when payroll taxes first were imposed) to June 30, 1955, in billions of dollars:

	Fiscal 1955	Cumulative
Contributions	$5.1	$35.6
Interest	0.4	3.4
Benefits	4.3	17.0
Expenses	0.1	0.8
Balance	21.1	21.1*

 Sums do not balance exactly because of rounding of figures.*

About 7.6 million retired workers, dependents, and survivors received OASI benefits in fiscal 1955.

Besides OASI, Social Security encompasses other programs, including public assistance and unemployment compensation. Assistance programs involve federal-state cooperation in distributing aid on the basis of need.

In view of the extensive Social Security Act changes in 1954, President Eisenhower asked the 84th Congress only to modify the formula for federal sharing in old-age assistance payments by states. No action was taken on the request in 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- June 21-23, 28, July 6 in executive session on HR 7225. The Committee voted 15-10, along straight party lines, to hold closed hearings. Democrats opposed open hearings.

TESTIMONY -- June 21 -- Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, wrote Committee Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) requesting a public "thoroughgoing review and inquiry into the issues raised" by the bill. She estimated that proposals, contained in a draft of HR 7225 sent her, to lower the pension age for women from 65 years of age to 62 and speed pensions to disabled persons would cost more than $2 billion a year

June 23 -- CIO President Walter P. Reuther wrote Cooper he "appreciated" the Committee's action in holding closed hearings. Reuther said it would be "needlessly cruel" to postpone, through lengthy hearings, action on social security improvements.

ACTION -- July 14 reported HR 7225 (H Rept 1189), by a 21-3 vote, after revising the bill to raise OASI taxes. Democrats at first sought to avoid any tax increase. Republicans sought to lower the eligibility age of women to 60.

MINORITY VIEWS

Three Republican Members -- John W. Byrnes (Wis.), Thomas B. Curtis (Mo.), and Noah M. Mason (Ill.) -- later voted against passage of the bill, and presumably were the Members who voted against the report. Although four other GOP Members -- Thomas A. Jenkins (Ohio), Robert W. Kean (N.J.), Antoni N. Sadlak (Conn.), and Richard M. Simpson (Pa.) -- voted for passage, they joined Byrnes, Curtis, and Mason in filing supplemental views declaring:

Public hearings should have been held.

"Far-reaching implications" had been "explored in...a cursory and casual fashion."

Proposed liberalizations would incite demands for further expansion of benefits, but HR 7225 would raise OASI taxes so near the saturation point it would be impractical to raise them higher to pay for desirable liberalizations in the future.

Social insurance should provide only "basic protection at a cost within the reach of all;" it could not protect against "all insurable risks."

Retirement of women at 62 instead of 65 might "run counter to...(the) major social and economic objective of wider employment opportunity..."

Reduction of the eligibility age for widows from 65 to 62, rather than to 60, might not be a "significant improvement."

Individually, Mason said "it would be almost impossible to prevent widespread abuse" of the disability program.

Floor Action

The House July 18 suspended the rules and passed HR 7225, by a 372-31 roll-call vote. The bill was not amended on the floor. (For voting, see chart, p. 160.)

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- HR 7225 "would make several major improvements in the social security system. In addition to extending coverage, the bill would remove inequities and shortcomings of the present system.... The most important improvement...is the provision of disability insurance benefits for permanently and totally disabled workers.... The lowering of the eligibility age for women beneficiaries will help relieve the personal hardship encountered by older women who now have to wait until they reach age 65 to receive benefits.... It will also make it possible for working men to retire at an earlier age, since generally speaking, the wives of older working men are a few years younger than their husbands. Providing for the continuation of monthly benefits to disabled children age 18 and over will recognize the fact that such children are just as dependent... (as) children under age 18."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "...it is unfortunate that the American people were not given a better opportunity to express their views before the House Ways and Means Committee. It is also to be regretted that there is not more than 20 minutes on a side to debate this subject.... Denied these opportunities we have only two alternatives. We could vote against the suspension of the rules and that would leave legislation with a commendable purpose high and dry, or we can vote for the legislation and send the measure along to the Senate, where I am sure it will be more carefully considered.... This bill -- imperfect as it is -- means a step in the right direction. For that reason I shall vote for it and hope the Senate will give it the more careful consideration it merits."

John E. Henderson (R Ohio) -- "...the benefits to be derived from this bill are unquestioned.... But...there is much in the background and history of this present bill that is characteristic of legislation by means of political and irresponsible expediency."

Hale Boggs (D La.) -- "...any impression that this bill has not been thoroughly and adequately considered is simply not a statement of fact. This bill was considered in executive sessions of the Committee on Ways and Means, with the experts of the Social Security Board present every day.... It was considered by the members of this Committee who time and time again have conducted public hearings on the issues involved...."

Katharine St. George (R N.Y.) -- "There is absolutely no valid excuse for a woman to retire at age 62 and a man at 65. All figures...show that the life expectancy of women is about five years longer than that of men and that their physical strength is probably considerably greater. Their mental attributes are the same."

Leonor Kretzer Sullivan (D Mo.) -- "A woman who is widowed, say, at the age of 60 and has never earned her living finds it almost impossible to earn money at that age if she is entering the working force for the first time."

Paul A. Fino (R N.Y.) -- "I shall vote for this bill, not because I am satisfied with the new age requirement, but because it recognizes the fact that the retirement age of 65 is old-fashioned and our social security system needs remodeling."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- July 26 on HR 7225. The Committee planned to hold additional hearings early in 1956.

TESTIMONY -- July 26 -- HEW Secretary Hobby asked the Committee to make a thorough study of the issues raised by HR 7225.

Mrs. Hobby said the social security system could "lose its attractiveness" if costs were increased without the "most careful evaluation of benefits they confer." She said sufficient time had not elapsed "to assess and determine the results of the 1954 amendments."

Group Stands

Stands of pressure groups on OASI issues:

COVERAGE -- Professional organizations which opposed OASI coverage of their occupational fields: American Dental Association, American Medical Association.

Organizations which opposed compulsory coverage of their fields, but favored voluntary coverage: American Bar Association, American Osteopathic Association, National Chiropractic Association, American Veterinary Medical Association, American Farm Bureau Federation (opposed compulsory coverage of self-employed farm operators, covered in 1954).

Organizations which favored compulsory coverage of their fields: Congress of American Dentists for OASI, Inc. (dissidents in American Dental Association), National Lawyers Guild, American Naturopathic Association, National Farmers Union, American Optometric Association. The American Farm Bureau Federation favored coverage of some farm laborers.

Groups which favored extension of coverage to all or most fields: American Public Welfare Association, National Farmers Union, American Federation of Labor, DISABILITY BENEFITS -- Opponents of disability benefits before normal retirement age: American Medical Association, Life Insurance Association of America, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.

Advocates of disability benefits: American Association of Social Workers, American Public Welfare Association, AFL, CIO.

WOMEN'S ELIGIBILITY -- The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. opposed reducing the eligibility age of women to collect retirement and survivor benefits below 65. The AFL and CIO advocated eligibility for women at age 60.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT

HR 4744 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 1046) July 1, 1955.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 5.
- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 1040) July 20.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a roll-call vote of 91-0, July 28. (See p. 133.)
- Senate amendment agreed to by the House, by voice vote, July 30.

P.L. 383 -- Signed into law Aug. 12.

The Railroad Retirement Act was amended in 1954 to permit pensioners to receive both social security and railroad retirement benefit payments. Congress in 1955 extended the same privilege to survivors and made other improvements in benefits and administration of the program.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 4744:

Increased a spouse's maximum annuity from $40 a month to the level provided under the Social Security Act. The new maximum would be $51.80 a month in 1955, $54.30 in 1956, and whatever amount was authorized by Social Security Act amendments in subsequent years.

Allowed railroad employees' survivors to receive both railroad retirement and social security benefits.

Appointed Railroad Retirement Board personnel as permanent classified civil service workers.

Background

See "Railroad Retirement and Social Security" for action on a bill to remove inequities from the administration of railroad retirement benefits. (CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 195ff.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARING -- June 17.

TESTIMONY -- A representative of the railroad unions, Railroad Retirement Board members, the president of the National Association of Retired and Veteran Railway Employees, and Congressmen sponsoring the bill all testified in favor of HR 4744.

ACTION -- Reported HR 4744 amended (H Rept 1046) July 1. (See PROVISIONS, above.)

Floor Action

The House July 5 passed HR 4744 by voice vote, with Committee amendments.

DEBATE -- James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) -- "I am supporting HR 4744 because it is a step in the right direction. I want to serve notice, however, that an across-the-board increase in benefits is badly needed in view of present-day living costs."

J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) -- "This bill has the unanimous backing of all the standard railway labor organizations.... This fact weighs heavily in favor of the legislation, since the entire cost of administering the railroad retirement system is paid for by the railway employees and the railroads."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HEARING -- June 22.

TESTIMONY -- Representatives of various labor unions testified in favor of S 1589, which was identical to HR 4744.

ACTION -- Reported July 20 (S Rept 1040) HR 4744 as passed by the House.

Floor Action

The Senate July 28 passed the bill by a 91-0 roll-call vote with an amendment. The measure would add an estimated $26 million a year to benefit payments.

The Senate rejected, by a 24-66 roll-call vote, an amendment by H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) that would have deleted a provision to give Railroad Retirement Board personnel permanent classified civil service status. (For voting, see chart, p. 133.)

DEBATE -- Smith -- The provision to appoint Railroad Retirement Board personnel to the classified civil service would "disrupt the administration of the whole civil service system."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "The Board has refused to make any of its appointments political. (But) under pressure from the Republican organization in 1953, the Board tried to make the 31 leading positions political." After "a storm of popular indignation, the Board receded from that position; but in 1954 it tried to make 11 positions political.... I am surprised and pained at" Smith's "attempt...to sweep away these (civil service) safeguards and to cry to the Republicans...'Come and get it.'"

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Smith's amendment "would weaken the competitive civil service greatly."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- Allow each Railroad Retirement Board member to appoint an administrative assistant without civil service restrictions. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Smith -- Delete provisions for appointing Board personnel to permanent classified civil service status. Roll call, 24-66.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

The House July 30, by voice vote, sent HR 4744 to the White House after agreeing to Senate amendments to the bill by voice vote, without debate.

SCHOOL AID

HR 7535 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 1504) July 28, 1955.

A bill (HR 7535) to authorize federal funds to aid local school district classroom construction between July 1, 1956, and June 30, 1960, was reported to the House, but received no floor consideration in 1955.

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee considered various proposals to grant federal aid for school construction (S 4, 5, 480, 522, 686, 968) but took no action on them.

President Eisenhower Feb. 8 sent a special message to Congress calling for a program of federal, state, and local spending of $7 billion over a three-year period. Under the Administration plan, about $1,120,000,000 would come from the federal government, all but $220 million of which would be repaid.

The President Aug. 4 told his news conference the school construction measure was one of four subjects "vital" to the nation's welfare on which Congress had failed to act.

Background

Educational legislation in the United States dates back to 1787 and the Northwest Ordinance. Milestones in the development of federal aid to education, from 1787 to 1954:

1787 -- In the Northwest Ordinance, Congress made the following policy declaration: "...religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

1862 -- Morrill Act provided for grants of federal land to each state for establishment of colleges specializing in the subjects of agriculture and mechanical arts. These became known as "land-grant colleges."

1867 -- Congress established an independent federal "Department of Education." Its name officially changed to U.S. Office of Education after 1929. It was part of the Interior Department from 1869-1939, then transferred to the Federal Security Agency, which in turn became the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in 1953.

1917 -- Smith-Hughes Act set up the first program of federal grants-in-aid to promote vocational education in the public schools. Funds were provided for courses and teacher training in the fields of agriculture, home economics, distributive occupations, trades, and industries.

1930's -- Various federal emergency agencies set up during the depression years engaged in educational activities as part of the relief program. For example, the Public Works Administration made loans and grants for school construction, and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration developed adult education and nursery school programs.

1940 -- Lanham Act authorized federal aid to local governments for construction, maintenance, and operation of facilities, including schools. Aid was channeled to communities with population swollen by increased federal activities.

1944 -- The Servicemen's Readjustment Act (GI Bill of Rights) set up a program of educational benefits for World War II veterans (later extended to veterans of the Korean fighting) which was unprecedented in scope.

1946 -- National School Lunch Act authorized aid in the form of funds and food to states for use in serving hot lunches to school children.

1950 -- P L 874 authorized federal payments for maintenance and operating costs of schools overburdened by increased enrollments resulting from federal activities and deprived of local revenues because of the tax-exempt status of federal property. (This program was extended by P L 382, 84th Congress, until June 30, 1957.) Another statute, P L 815, authorized grants to states for construction of schools in federally-affected areas. (This program was extended by P L 731, 83rd Congress, through fiscal 1957.)

1954 -- P L 530 authorized the President to hold a White House Conference on Education before Nov. 30, 1955, and authorized $1 million for preparatory education conferences in the states. P L 532 established a nine-member National Advisory Committee on Education.

MEASURES PROPOSED

A number of controversial education proposals were debated and put to a vote since 1948, but as of 1955, none had won Congressional approval. The proposals and action taken on them:

1948 -- A bill (S 472) to appropriate $300 million a year for federal grants in aid to states for educational costs was passed by the Senate on a 58-22 roll call. Debate on the bill centered on the fact that church and private schools could get some of the federal funds. An amendment to bar such use of federal money was rejected, however, on a 5-80 roll call, with four of the five supporters southern Democrats. The bill was not cleared by the House Education and Labor Committee. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IV, p 156.)

1949 -- A bill (S 246) similar to S 472 again was passed by the Senate on a 58-15 roll call, again was blocked by the House. Another bill (HR 4643), introduced by Rep. Graham A. Barden (D N.C.), Chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee in the 84th Congress, would have restricted federal education grants to tax-supported schools (thus ruling out religious and private schools). The Barden bill, also blocked in Committee, was attacked as anti-Catholic. Francis Cardinal Spellman called Barden a "new apostle of bigotry." Cardinal Spellman also accused Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt of "anti-Catholic" bias because she wrote in her newspaper column that "we do not want to see public education connected with religious control of the schools." She denied any anti-Catholic bias. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. V, pp. 269ff.)

1951 -- Rep. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), later a Senator, offered an amendment to the pending "tidelands" oil bill to give the federal government control of the offshore lands and to put income from the mineral leases into a fund for aid to schools. The amendment was ruled out on a point of order. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, p. 476.)

1952 -- Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.) introduced an amendment to specify that federal income from offshore lands would be used for national defense or public schools. The amendment was tabled by a 47-36 roll-call vote. Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) made the tabling motion. Democrats split 20 for, 25 against tabling, while Republicans were 27 for, 11 against. Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) argued that the proceeds from the oil lands would "go a long way toward increasing the educational opportunities" of the people. Holland said the amendment didn't belong in a submerged oil lands bill. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, pp. 334, 336.)

1953 -- Two submerged oil lands bills became law, but neither had an oil-for-education provision. One bill (HR 5134-PL 212) placed submerged lands far off U.S. shores under federal control. The Senate agreed, by a 45-37 roll call, to include the Hill amendment earmarking revenues as grants-in-aid for education. Republicans split 11 for, 30 against, while Democrats voted 34 for, seven against the amendment. The oil-for-education amendment was deleted in conference. The other "tidelands" bill (HR 4198-PL 31), which gave the states claim to submerged lands within their traditional boundaries, carried no oil-for-education provision. During Senate action, an amendment by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to earmark revenues for aid to education was rejected on a 26-58 roll call, with five Republicans for, 39 against; 20 Democrats for, 19 against. A similar oil-for-education amendment by Lehman was rejected on a 30-60 roll call. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, pp. 388ff.)

1954 -- Hill and 33 co-sponsors introduced a bill (S 2763) to provide that revenues from submerged lands be used as grants-in-aid for education. No action was taken on S 2763. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, p. 630.)

A bill (S 2601) to authorize $500 million in federal aid to the states for a two-year period of emergency school construction was reported in the Senate but no action was taken. The Administration opposed the legislation. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, pp. 209ff.)

ANTI-SEGREGATION MOVE

Following a 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools, some southern states took steps to circumvent the ruling by providing for a private system of schools. It became apparent that opponents of segregation would seek to amend any federal aid-to-education proposal to bar funds to states permitting segregated schools. President Eisenhower on July 6, 1955, said he did not believe anti-segregation restrictions should be written into school legislation because segregation was a separate problem.

1954 HEARINGS

As the move for school aid gathered momentum in 1954, pressure groups began their leg work on Capitol Hill. Hearings began in September before the House Education and Labor Special Subcommittee for Investigation of Federal Activities in Education. Subcommittee figures indicated that 37 federal agencies conducted 298 educational programs. Subcommittee Chairman Ralph W. Gwinn (R N.Y.) said only about 1 percent of the federal expenditure of about $3.5 billion a year was channeled through the Office of Education. Maj. Gen. Harlan N. Harkness, head of the Defense Department's Office of Information and Education, said the armed forces spent about $30 million a year for education.

The Subcommittee on Dec. 7, 1954, issued an interim report urging further adjustment of the federal income tax structure to encourage more individual and corporate contributions to colleges and universities. It also recommended enactment of law requiring data on education funds to be collected and furnished Congress annually by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Hearings also were held late in 1954 by the House Education and Labor Special Subcommittee on Federal Aid for School Construction. Chairman Carroll D. Kearns (R Pa.) said "school construction is the answer to any phase of federal assistance to education." He said $10 billion to $12 billion should be spent on school construction.

Representatives of the National Education Association, and the American Association of School Administrators testified in favor of federal construction aid. Education Commissioner Samuel M. Brownell said the responsibility rested with state and local authorities. He said a "recent reduction in federal taxes provides each state with a greater margin in tax capacity...that could be used for school buildings."

The Subcommittee unanimously recommended that Congress appropriate money to help states and communities expand school construction programs, and said the legislation must "avoid any possibility of federal control over local school systems."

EISENHOWER PROPOSALS

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union Message Jan. 6, 1955, said there were "grave educational problems" and "an unprecedented classroom shortage." He said "without impairing in any way the responsibilities of our states, localities, communities, or families, the federal government can and should serve as an effective catalyst in dealing with this problem."

In his Economic Report, Jan. 20, the President asked Congress to expand federal programs for research, fellowships, teacher training, and related activities.

President Eisenhower Feb. 8 sent his school-aid message to Congress, said the "control and support" of education should continue to be "a state and local responsibility." He said education must be "free in its response to local community needs, free from any suggestion of political domination, and free from impediments to the pursuit of knowledge by teachers and students." The existing shortage of more than 300,000 classrooms was an "emergency" situation justifying some federal aid, he continued, but added that long-term solutions to school financing should come from state conferences on education, to be climaxed by a White House Conference on Education.

The President asked Congress to authorize:

- Federal purchase of school bonds issued by communities unable to sell the bonds "at a reasonable interest rate" (defined by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty as a maximum 3 1/8 percent).

- Appropriation of $750 million for fiscal years 1956, 1957, and 1958 for the bond program.
- Federal support, matched by the states, of a lease-purchase plan in which state school building agencies would erect schools, rent them to school districts until the principal and interest were repaid and the districts took title to the buildings. (The President hoped agencies would issue bonds sufficient to "build $6 billion worth of new schools.")
- Appropriations to build up an initial reserve fund in each state building agency equal to one year's payment on principal and interest on bonds issued. (Hagerty estimated the amount at $150 million, to be matched by the states and repaid by the districts.)
- Grants-in-aid of $200 million over a three-year period for impoverished school districts financially unable to issue bonds or participate in a lease-purchase program.
- Limitation of federal-state aid to impoverished districts to an amount sufficient to enable them to undertake bond issues or a rental program.
- Federal payment of half the administrative cost of state programs designed to work out long-term solutions of school financial problems.
- Appropriations of $20 million for this three-year program, limited to $5 million the first year.

On the Senate floor Feb. 9, four Democratic Senators and then Independent Wayne Morse (Ore.) criticized the President's education program. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) said the plan amounted to "government by gimmick" and would provide no aid to Oregon school districts.

Sen. Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) said: "It would be as impossible to solve the nation's present educational problems in the manner recommended by the President as it would be to extinguish a city-wide conflagration with a squirt gun." Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) said the program "was conceived by investment bankers and dedicated to the money lenders," while John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) called it an "empty hoax."

BILLS INTRODUCED

By Feb. 8, more than 40 bills for federal aid-to-education had been introduced in the 84th Congress. Representative bills:

HR 14, 15 -- Carroll D. Kearns (R Pa.) and Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.), respectively; Jan. 5. Authorize such appropriations as may be necessary in fiscal 1956 and the five succeeding years for flat grant payments to states for school construction to make facilities adequate to needs.

HR 44 -- Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.); Jan. 5. Provide $500 million in fiscal 1955 and in each of the two succeeding fiscal years to help states acquire and construct plant facilities such as land, buildings, and machinery needed for public schools.

HR 764 -- Peter Frelinghuysen, Jr. (R N.J.); Jan. 5. Provide $250 million in each of the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 for emergency federal aid to states for construction of school facilities "urgently needed because of overcrowding."

HR 2857 -- John Lesinski (D Mich.); Jan. 24. Set up a program of federal loans to aid states and local communities in building schools and appropriate $3 billion for this purpose, with each loan bearing interest at the rate of 1 percent a year and having a maximum maturity of 30 years.

HR 3812 -- Stuyvesant Wainwright (R N.Y.); Feb. 8. (Embodied President Eisenhower's aid to education proposals outlined in his Feb. 8 message.) Authorize $750 million for federal purchase of school bonds, provide for federal support of a school-building, lease-purchase plan, authorize $200 million for grants-in-aid to poor school districts over a three-year period, and authorize $20 million for grants to help pay administrative costs of state education programs.

S 4 -- Earle C. Clements (D Ky.); Jan. 6. Provide $500 million a year in 1955 and 1956 to the states for school buildings based on the school-age population of the state.

S 5 -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) and 29 co-sponsors; Jan 6. Appropriate $500 million each for fiscal 1956 and 1957 for emergency federal grants-in-aid, based on per capita income and school population, for construction of "urgently needed" school facilities.

S 296 -- William Langer (R N.D.); Jan. 10. Appropriate $50 million for a revolving fund to provide loans to individuals to help them obtain a college or university education.

S 686 -- John L. McClellan (D Ark.) and 23 co-sponsors; Jan. 24. Appropriate such funds as may be necessary "for such fiscal years as may be determined by the Congress" for grants-in-aid to the states for public school construction, with allocation of the funds based on a formula taking into account the number of school students and the per capital income of the state as compared to the national per capita average.

S 772 -- Hill and 35 co-sponsors; Jan. 27. Provide that revenues from undersea oil and gas deposits of the Outer Continental Shelf be used as grants-in-aid for primary, secondary, and higher education.

S 968 -- H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) and 17 GOP co-sponsors; Feb. 8. Embodied President Eisenhower's aid-to-education program as outlined in his Feb. 8 message to Congress. Similar to HR 3812.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 27 - Feb. 21 on bills (S 4, 5, 480, 522, 686, 968) relating to federal aid for school construction.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 27 -- Sen. Earle C. Clements (D Ky.), who introduced S 4, said there was no need to fear federal intervention in local school policies, because the bills under consideration would be confined to construction.

Other witnesses who testified generally in favor of federal aid for school construction, rather than on particular bills: J. Marvin Dodson, executive secretary, Kentucky Education Association; Wendell P. Butler, Kentucky superintendent of public instruction; Rep. John C. Watts (D Ky.); Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer of the Washington Post and Times Herald; Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.); F. E. Willingham, superintendent of schools, Tecumseh, Okla.; Mrs. Edward Gray, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; William C. Hinkley, superintendent of schools, Aurora, Colo.

Jan. 28 -- William G. Carr, executive director of the National Education Association, said "the need...is for fact-facing instead of fact-finding." He urged "substantial help...of at least half a billion dollars a year until we close the $5 billion gap between what we need and what our states and localities can do."

Federal aid for school construction also was backed by Reps. Henry M. Reuss (D Wis.); Perkins; Dr. John K. Norton, Columbia University Teachers College; Andrew Biemiller, American Federation of Labor; S. Gordon Carter, New York State Teachers Association; Jordan Larson, president, American Association of School Administrators; John W. McLeod, American Institute of Architects; and other school officials.

NO AID TO SEGREGATED SCHOOLS

Jan. 31 -- Sens. George H. Bender (R Ohio) and Irving M. Ives (R N.Y.) said federal assistance should not go to any state which refused to follow the Supreme Court ruling against segregated schools.

Others who appeared, all favoring federal aid, included Sens. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.), Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) and Patrick V. McNamara (D Mich.); Reps. Frelinghuysen, Bailey, Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.), Kearns.

Feb. 16 -- Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, supported the Administration's proposal for school construction. She said the plan would provide an additional 200,000 classrooms for 6 million children in a three-year period.

Mrs. Hobby said the program would be better than a measure limited to federal grants because of "an understandable tendency on the part of many school districts to defer building plans in the hope they will receive federal assistance."

She said the President's program "encourages local and state initiative and immediate action to speed school construction because the aid it offers is contingent upon first seeking financing through the usual channels."

Committee Chairman Hill said he would propose removing the limit on outright grants-in-aid provided in S 968, the Administration bill. Sen. Douglas criticized the Eisenhower education program as "highly inflexible," asked whether state school building agencies, which would get federal funds under the program, could be used to circumvent the Supreme Court ruling against school segregation. Mrs. Hobby said she didn't think that would happen.

Lehman said the Administration's proposed program would give "the broadest kind of educational powers to the Commissioner" of Education, and seemed to make "mandatory" at least some federal control over public education.

ADMINISTRATION PLAN CRITICIZED

Feb. 17 -- Carr (NEA), said the Administration bill "has so many inadequacies that it would have to be rewritten." He said it "gives our schools much too little aid and much too much control" by the federal government, added that unless the bill is "substantially" modified to provide "genuine assistance to states and localities instead of token assistance," there would be "little or no reason" why the NEA should support it.

Frederick Hipp, executive secretary of the New Jersey Education Association, said "it would be most unfortunate if this bill, and this bill alone, should become law. It is obviously not a proposal designed to meet the present school building emergency."

Feb. 18 -- Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) supported S 968. He said a state school-building agency, such as that proposed for states participating in the President's program, worked well in Maine. Under questioning, Payne said he felt the money available for direct grants might be insufficient.

Dr. Edgar Fuller, executive secretary of the Council of State School Officers, said setting up state school-building agencies "would result in long delays, including court tests..." He said most state educational heads preferred an assistance measure that would provide hard dollars instead of a "complicated" borrowing system. He complained of "federal discrimination" against schools in grants for physical facilities.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) also opposed S 968, as did Thomas D. Bailey, Florida state superintendent of public instruction; R. M. Eyman, Ohio state superintendent of public instruction; and Dr. Frank Wright, California associate state superintendent of public instruction.

FEDERAL AID OPPOSED

Feb. 21 -- John Burkhart of the Indianapolis and Indiana Chambers of Commerce opposed federal aid to education. He said "prodigous efforts...are successfully closing the gap" of the classroom shortage, added that in "the matter of teachers...the picture is not as black as is so frequently painted. For the U.S. as a whole, the teacher-pupil ratio actually improved...from 1940 to 1950."

Selma M. Borchardt of the American Federation of Teachers criticized the Administration bill as "woefully restricted." Biemiller (AFL) said S 968's program was "half-hearted and pinch-penny."

Edward D. Hollander of Americans for Democratic Action said the ADA favored a direct-aid program of $1 billion a year to be matched by state and local funds. He characterized the President's program as "a collection of bookkeeping devices."

Clarence Mitchell of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said S 968 could "open the door for numerous attempts to continue racial segregation in the public schools."

Also generally opposed to the Administration-backed measure were Frederick Lukens, Education Association of the District of Columbia; George Guernsey, CIO; Mrs. Virginia M. Gray, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Philip Schiff, American Association of Social Workers; and other educators.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Feb. 19 -- In a letter to Sen. Smith, ranking minority Committee member and sponsor of S 968, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare said federal aid to needy school districts would be available under the President's proposal without a state school building agency in any case where the needy district had not reached its legal loan or bonding limit.

COMMISSION SEES NO NEED FOR AID

Feb. 24 -- A study group of the President's Commission on Intergovernmental Relations reported federal aid "is not necessary" for new school construction and recommended that the government gradually withdraw from the school lunch program and curtail aid to vocational education. It said "federal aid is not necessary for either current operating expenses for public schools or for capital expenditure for new school facilities," but that the states could "afford to make more money available."

March 2 -- President Eisenhower said he doubted that the report was accurate in every detail.

April 23 -- Sen. George H. Bender (R Ohio) said the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee was engaged in an "apparent stall" over the Administration proposal for school construction.

No general school-aid bill had been reported by the Committee when Congress adjourned Aug. 2.

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor.

HEARINGS -- March 2 - May 24 on various school bills.

TESTIMONY -- March 2 -- Reps. Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.), who introduced HR 14, and Carroll D. Kearns (R Pa.), who introduced HR 15, supported their bills. Kearns said a government which could build "pig pens and opera houses" should be able to spend money for schools. The two Representatives said their proposal carried "no stigma of federal control" and would permit each state to handle its own money.

March 3 -- Chairman Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) said he opposed any provision which would add federal minimum wage requirements to the bills. Bailey and Kearns estimated their bills would obligate the federal government to spend about $6 billion over a six-year period as its share of school construction costs.

March 8 -- Rep. Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) spoke for HR 2548, which would give priority to school construction for servicemen's and defense workers' children, Negroes, and Indians. Reps. Carl Elliott (D Ala.) and Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) testified for their bills (HR 1565, 4302), to provide matching federal grants to the states.

March 9 -- Rep. John Lesinski (D Mich.) explained three bills that he had introduced (HR 2612, 2857, and 4086). Rep. Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.), a former school board member, endorsed the principle of federal grants to schools.

March 15 -- Rep. Winfield K. Dentop (D Ind.) said Administration proposals had so many preliminary requirements that four years would elapse before they had any effect.

March 16 -- Rep. Brooks Hays (D Ark.) said he favored "a modest, sound, federal aid program for school construction."

March 17 -- Reps. Oren Harris (D Ark.) and DeWitt S. Hyde (R Md.) discussed the school program.

CLASSROOM SHORTAGE REDUCED

March 29 -- Secretary Hobby said an estimate of the prospective classroom shortage in 1960 had been revised downward from 407,000 to 176,000 as a result of state studies. She said the rate of new classroom construction had increased from 50,000 in 1953 to 60,000 in 1955.

She joined Education Commissioner Samuel M. Brownell in backing the Administration program. Brownell said most of the classroom shortage was concentrated in eight states and around metropolitan areas.

Rep. Adam C. Powell, Jr., (D N.Y.) said he would insist on an amendment barring the use of federal funds in districts practicing racial segregation. Barden said any effort to inject "social reform" into the school building program would "befog the matter and endanger the objective..."

March 30 -- Mrs. Hobby said there would be no federal control or influence over schools under the Administration program.

April 20 -- H. A. Stansbury, representing the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce and Arthur V. Burrowes of the Missouri Public Expenditures Survey, opposed any federal aid. Burrowes said Missouri was meeting its classroom needs by itself and had "no need...that requires the federal government to borrow money" to aid it. Stansbury said "West Virginia has ample capacity to go ahead on its own."

April 21, 22 -- Steve Stahl of the National Conference of State Taxpayer Executives and the Oklahoma Public Expenditures Council was joined by spokesmen for Wyoming and New Jersey Taxpayers Associations in attacking the proposed legislation.

April 26 -- Roger A. Freeman of the Intergovernmental Relations Commission, said the role of the federal government was to encourage state and local support of schools. He approved Administration school construction plans.

NEA ASKS $2.5 BILLION PROGRAM

May 3 -- William G. Carr (NEA) asked approval of a $2.5 billion, five-year program of federal aid for school construction. Carr said the NEA program was based on an estimate of $30,000 for each classroom. Arthur F. Corey of the California Teachers Association urged prompt federal grants to states for school construction.

May 11 -- Pennsylvania's superintendent of public instruction said his state spent $500 million to construct schools in the past three years. But, he said, there was "a well-nigh intolerable school housing situation." While education was a state function, he said, federal funds were necessary to end the existing shortage of classrooms. The superintendent of North Carolina's schools urged federal aid, but without federal interference.

May 12 -- E. Ross Anderson, a Massachusetts engineer, said his firm had developed a plan where a good school could be built with only 55 square feet of space allotted to each pupil.

May 20 -- Shad Polier of the American Jewish Congress and Clarence Mitchell (NAACP) said racial desegregation requirements should be included in any legislation for government aid to school construction.

Thomas A. Ballantine of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said the states were "in a better position to meet their constitutional obligation...than the federal government is to intervene in the matter." He said the Chamber believed "federal intervention is neither wise nor necessary and that it would be ineffective."

May 24 -- Andrew J. Biemiller (AFL) urged that any federal finance bill require contractors to pay wages which the Secretary of Labor determined to be "prevailing."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee July 28 reported (H Rept 1504) HR 7535. The bill was approved July 22 by a 22-8 vote, with six Republicans and two Democrats voting against it.

Copyright, 1955, Congressional Quarterly News Features

The Committee July 20 rejected, by a 10-17 vote, an amendment sponsored by Rep. Powell to bar federal aid for school construction to states or local school districts which practice racial segregation. (Six members urged adoption of the amendment in supplemental views included in the Committee report.)

PROVISIONS -- As approved, HR 7535 would: Authorize $400 million for fiscal 1956 and the same amount for each of the following three fiscal years for payments to state educational agencies on a dollar-matching basis.

Allot the annual $400 million on the basis of the school-age population of the state and its ratio to United States total school population.

Authorize $300 million to provide initial capital to permit federal purchase of local school construction bonds where the local groups were unable to obtain reasonable financing from other sources.

Limit the total amount of bonds to be purchased to $750 million, all of which would be paid off in 30 years.

Provide that no state's bonds sold to the federal government would be more than 15 percent of the total amount of bonds purchased by the federal government in any one fiscal year.

Authorize up to $6 billion to back the credit of local school districts for a type of installment financing of school buildings in which the federal government would insure construction obligations.

Require labor on federal-supported projects to be paid the "prevailing" wage in the area as determined by the Secretary of Labor.

Require payment of at least time and one half for all overtime in excess of eight hours a day or 40 hours a week.

Prohibit the use of any federal funds for construction of athletic facilities.

Provide that "no department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States shall exercise any direction, supervision, or control over the personnel, curriculum, or program of instruction of any school or school system."

There was no floor action on the bill in 1955.

Group Stands

The critical shortage of classrooms and teachers, together with problems of integration, combined to produce strong pressures on Congress while school aid legislation was being considered.

Kingpin of the school bloc was the National Education Association, with more than 600,000 members, chiefly teachers. NEA's legislative commission carried out the Association's policies, assisted by its executive secretary, James L. McCaskill, and a Washington staff.

NEA estimated that on a 30-pupil classroom basis, 32 states needed an immediate 46,841 elementary classrooms. An additional 58,017 teachers also were needed in 1955, NEA said. The organization criticized the Administration's plan as providing "too little aid and too much federal control."

Also active in the school construction drive were the Council of Chief State School Officers and the American Vocational Association. The Council was small --53 members -- but influential, and its executive secretary, Dr. Edgar Fuller, testified frequently. AVA, a federation of affiliated state vocational groups, helped stimulate systematic programs in local Congressional districts to promote federal aid.

Considerable lobby activity came from women's groups. Among the more active: American Association of University Women, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, the National Council of Jewish Women, American Home Economics Association, and Association for Childhood Education, International. Opposing federal aid was the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, Inc.

ANTI-SEGREGATION DRIVE

The segregation issue worried some lobby forces. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People endorsed aid to schools if the states agreed to "operate on a non-segregated basis." Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, urged Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D N.Y.) to "introduce an appropriate anti-segregation amendment to the school aid bill" and assured him of full NAACP support. Wilkins said some measure was needed to prevent use of federal funds for "Jim Crow" schools in view of the "open defiance" of "certain southern politicians."

Labor also spoke up, and included: American Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organizations, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), and United Auto Workers (CIO). The labor groups endorsed the oil-for-education bill (S 772) introduced Jan. 27 by Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.) and 35 co-sponsors.

Groups favoring large-scale federal aid also included: Friends Committee on National Legislation, Americans for Democratic Action, National Council on School House Construction, National Association of Secondary-School Principals, Jewish War Veterans of the U.S., American Veterans of World War II (Amvets), American Parents Committee, and National Farmers Union.

The National Farmers Union sponsored a new group, the Commission on School Support in Rural Areas, to conduct a "continuing study of the financial problems of rural education within the larger educational problem which is facing the country today." James G. Patton, NFU president, said educational opportunities for children in rural regions were "seriously threatened by unequal tax burdens, greater pupil load per adult citizen, inadequate facilities, diminishing quality of instruction, and the general economic inability of farm people to meet expanded school needs."

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE

Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 Democratic Presidential candidate, said in July that the President's proposed National Conference on Education was the only prospect for federal action in an "appalling situation." He recommended a program of federal aid for school construction, teacher training, and scholarships and cash grants to states on a per pupil basis.

The Conference was described as "stacked against the interests of the school children" by John D. Connors, AFL education director. He said in September that unionists should seek to secure greater labor representation in the Conference. "The Administration is counting on the White House Conference to delay action and to back up its position that no real federal aid is needed," Connors charged. He said opponents of increased federal aid would say states could handle the job themselves, mainly through increased sales taxes.

Education Conference Backs More Federal Aid

United States educators, laymen, and government officials Dec. 1 would up what was billed as the "greatest study in the annals of public education" with a plea for more federal aid for schools.

The question of federal aid was only one of the key topics debated in the four day White House Conference on Education. Others were building needs, school organization, teacher shortages, school aims, and how to maintain public interest in education.

Such side issues as whether the conference was "stacked," policy on drafting resolutions, and segregation flared up shortly after the meetings got underway Nov. 28.

ADMINISTRATION'S REMARKS

President Eisenhower Nov. 28, in a filmed welcoming address, told delegates, "if the federal government doesn't step in with leadership and with providing credit and money where necessary, there will be a lack of schools in certain important areas." Vice President Richard M. Nixon, in a formal welcoming address, said "we should recognize at the outset that some additional federal activity and responsibility is inevitable and necessary...."

U.S. Commissioner of Education Samuel M. Brownell Dec. 1 said Mr. Eisenhower and Nixon meant "the federal government must do more than it has heretofore in terms of both leadership and financial assistance to advance the cause of education."

FINANCING

The Dec. 1 report on school financing said:

"All states and territories and the District of Columbia should be eligible for federal funds but...they should be granted only on the basis of demonstrated needs.

"A substantial majority (of delegates) felt that some states do not have sufficient financial resources to take care of the essential needs of the schools.

"A very small minority was opposed to federal aid for education in any form.

"The delegates almost unanimously opposed any federal control over educational use of funds in state school districts.

"The large majority of the participants" opposed federal funds for parochial schools but "recognized the right of parents to educate their children in nonpublic schools.

"The people of America need urgently to re-examine the allocation of tax funds at all levels of government."

Constitutional restrictions on the bonding and taxing powers of state governments "should be eased to the extent necessary to provide an adequate program of education."

BUILDING NEEDS

The school building report, issued Nov. 30, said "it seems to be virtually impossible for most of the states to meet their school building needs" within the next five years. "Obstacles", according to the report, included obsolete building codes, lack of cooperative effort, failure of state laws to equalize tax values, and an almost complete dependence on property taxes.

ORGANIZATION

The conference Nov. 30 recommended strengthening the Office of Education "in keeping with the importance of education to the nation." It said, however, that its work "should be confined to state level contacts, and not made directly with local boards except as mutually agreed by three levels."

FACULTY NEEDS

To meet the teacher shortage, the conference Dec. 1 said communities should seek to increase the prestige of the profession, keep salaries high enough to offset the lures of other fields, and present job possibilities in an attractive way.

AIMS

The conference's Nov. 29 report on "What Should Our Schools Accomplish?" called on all levels of government to share responsibility for providing free public education regardless of race, creed, or religion. The report added: "The fullest measure of local initiative and control should be maintained."

MAINTAINING INTEREST

Conference Chairman Neil H. McElroy Dec. 1 said "we need steady, unremitting effort" to maintain interest in education. The report suggested stepped-up programs by existing organizations, such as parent-teacher groups, and creating of new educational associations on local and national levels.

SIDE ISSUES

Stacking -- As the conference opened, McElroy denied "accusations that the conference is stacked in every direction," said, "personally, I don't know of its being stacked in any direction."

Resolutions -- McElroy Nov. 29 ruled out of order as "impractical" a motion made Nov. 28 by Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, Virginia delegate, that the conference be allowed to vote on whether it wished to pass resolutions in the face of bans on floor debate and voting.

Participation -- Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, Washington author and lecturer, Nov. 30 protested conference procedure, said "I consider this to be the worst example of the extreme mechanization of life that has ever been foisted upon us. It gives everyone the feeling of participation, although in reality they do not. If this pattern is accepted as a model for other conferences, it will be extremely dangerous to freedom of expression."

Segregation -- Clarence Mitchell of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Nov. 29 asked the conference to disallow travel expenses for delegates from four southern states. He said the states' legislatures had defied the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare ruled later in the day that expenses would be paid since the Court's ruling had "no bearing" on conference financing.

The Dec. 1 financial report said "one conference discussion table in 10 recommended that federal aid should be made available to states only for those districts certifying that they are conforming to the Supreme Court decision" prohibiting school segregation.

Bills Acted On

How They Are Listed

Education and Welfare bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below, in order of bill number. (For all Bills Introduced in this Education and Welfare category, including bills not acted on, see page 568. For complete listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 104.)

The following summary of each bill gives description, sponsor, and date of action taken or page reference to a detailed legislative history.

In this Education and Welfare section, the Bills Acted On are divided into these groupings: Housing and Schools; Safety and Health; and Social Security. Each grouping is subdivided into those bills on which work was finished -- under the heading "Action Completed" -- and those not finished -- listed under "Unfinished Business."

DEFENSE OF FORMOSA, PESCADORES

H J Res 159 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 4) Jan. 24, 1955.
• Passed by the House Jan. 25, by a 410-3 roll-call vote. (See p. 136.)
S J Res 28 -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 13) Jan. 26.
H J Res 159 -- Passed by the Senate Jan. 28, by an 85-3 roll-call vote. (See p. 115.)
P.L. 4 -- Signed into law Jan. 29.

H J Res 159 authorized the President to use U.S. armed forces in defense of Formosa and the nearby Pescadores islands against the Chinese Communists. Mr. Eisenhower requested the authorization -- although there was considerable question whether he would need Congressional approval -- in the face of increased Communist pressure on islands held by the Chinese Nationalists.

Controversy developed primarily over omission of specific delineation of the area the U.S. would fight to defend. As requested by the President, H J Res 159 left the way open for U.S. defense of lesser islands (such as Quemoy and Matsu) if they were deemed essential to defense of Formosa and the Pescadores. The measure also was interpreted as authorizing attacks on Chinese Communists -- even on the mainland -- if the President determined that military preparations jeopardizing Formosa and the Pescadores were under way.

Administration leaders declined to specify whether it was U.S. policy to defend Quemoy and Matsu but stressed that any decision would be made only by the President. U.S. policy toward a cease fire in the Formosa Straits also was left flexible.

PRESIDENT GIVEN AUTHORITY

PROVISIONS -- As approved, H J Res 159:

Took note of Chinese Communist attacks and threats in the western Pacific.

Declared that it was "essential to the vital interests of the United States and all friendly (Pacific) nations" that the western Pacific islands, including Formosa, remain in the hands of "friendly governments."

Authorized the President to "employ the armed forces of the United States as he deems necessary" for protection of Formosa and the Pescadores against armed attack.

Extended the authorization for use of armed forces to protection of "related positions and territories" in the Formosa-Pescadores area, and to "other measures" determined by the President to be "required or appropriate" in defending Formosa and the Pescadores.

Provided for expiration of the authority upon the President's report to Congress that "peace and security of the area is reasonably assured..."

Background

Communist China had repeatedly declared its intention to conquer Formosa and other territories to which Nationalist forces of Chiang Kai-Shek retreated in 1949 when they lost the mainland. The U.S. was committed against Communist Chinese expansion, and was committed to support the Nationalists. (See "China Treaty," p. 281.)

In his 1953 State of the Union message, President Eisenhower revised President Truman's orders to the U.S. Seventh Fleet. In an effort to keep the Korean war from spreading, Truman ordered the Seventh Fleet to prevent Communist invasion of Formosa, and Nationalist invasion of the mainland. President Eisenhower ordered the Fleet to continue patrolling the Formosa Straits, but to confine its mission to preventing invasion of Formosa. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 84.)

Conflict developed within the Republican Party over U.S. policy toward China. Sens. William F. Knowland Calif.), Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.) and others pressed for a stronger stand against the Communists.

President's Message

President Eisenhower transmitted to Congress Jan. 24, 1955, a message seeking the authorization that was incorporated in H J Res 159.

The President said Formosa and the Pescadores "should remain in friendly hands," because, "in unfriendly hands," they "would seriously dislocate the... balance of moral, economic and military forces upon which the peace of the Pacific depends."

Mr. Eisenhower recounted "a series of provocative political and military actions, establishing a pattern of aggressive purpose...the conquest of Formosa" by the Communists. He noted that the Communists had climaxed their military actions with conquest of the island of Ichiang, and said the situaion "poses a serious danger."

Pending United Nations action, the President continued, Congress should "improve the prospects for peace" by resolving that U.S. armed forces could be used "if necessary to assure the security of Formosa and the Pescadores."

NO DEFENSE LINE DRAWN

While disclaiming any suggestion that the U.S. "enlarge its defensive obligations beyond Formosa and the Pescadores," Mr. Eisenhower said "closely related localities and actions" would have to be taken into account. He said "we must be alert to any concentration or employment of Chinese Communist forces obviously undertaken to facilitate attack upon Formosa, and be prepared to take appropriate military action." He drew no specific defense line.

The President said "authority for some of the actions which might be required would be inherent in the authority of the Commander-in-Chief," but he urged Congress to "make clear the unified and serious intentions" of the nation. The resolution, he said, might prevent the Communists from "misjudging our firm purpose and national unity" and "readiness to fight, if necessary." Pending Congressional action, he said, he would take any constitutional actions that "might be forced upon us."

He declared the U.S. "would welcome action by the United Nations which might, in fact, bring an end to the active hostilities in the area."

The President said the resolution would "clarify present policy," rather than establish a "new policy," and said no acceleration in military buildup was called for.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 24 on H J Res 159.

TESTIMONY -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, supported the resolution in an executive session.

Committee Chairman James P. Richards (D S.C.) reported Dulles "stressed the strategic importance" of the islands. He said Dulles "made the point that if...the United States falls back under Communist China's threats of war and if all the outposts of Formosa are taken over one by one, Formosa would be less defensible." Radford, said Richards, "supported wholeheartedly" Dulles' views.

ACTION -- The Committee Jan. 24 reported H J Res 159 favorably (H Rept 4), without amendment, by unanimous vote.

Floor Action

The House Jan. 25 passed the measure by a 410-3 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate without amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 136.) Debate was under a closed rule (H Res 104 -- H Rept 5), adopted by voice vote.

The dissenters to the bill were Graham A. Barden (D N.C.), Timothy P. Sheehan (R Ill.), and Eugene D. Siler (R Ky.)

DEBATE -- Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) asked for an "overwhelming" vote for the resolution as a display of national "unity." He said the "calculated risks" entailed in passage would be less than those that would stem from inaction.

Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) said the resolution would preclude "miscalculation" of United States "determination" by the Communists.

Arthur Winstead (D Miss.) said the Administration was engaging in "mental gymnastics" in recommending reduction of armed forces while requesting a resolution that could mean "all-out war."

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) and others said they wanted to make clear that the President's request for Congressional backing in use of armed forces should not be considered a "precedent" to bind his actions as commander-in-chief in future crises. They said the President had the requested authority constitutionally.

Chet Holifield (D Calif.) accused the President of "duplicity" in his criticisms of former President Truman's Far Eastern policies. He said Mr. Eisenhower should not have placed before Congress the choice between "presenting a divided front" and voting a "contingency declaration of war."

John M. Vorys (R Ohio) said the resolution intentionally avoided drawing a sharp line to set off the area the U.S. would defend. He said Congress wanted to "avoid telegraphing our punches and giving any privileged sanctuary..." Holifield had called the resolution a "blank check."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) objected to acting "precipitately" and without full information.

In reply to questions by Yates, Chairman James P. Richards (D S.C.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee said the resolution was not a "declaration of war," adding that he believed the President would have to request such a declaration specifically. He also said the resolution would authorize attacks on the China mainland, but not its invasion.

Barden said following the debate that he had voted against the resolution because not enough information had been presented to convince him a "future declaration of war" was warranted. Siler said he had criticized Truman for entering the Korean war, and "this is the same thing." Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) said he abstained because "I think it is a declaration of war and I don't think the cost in lives will justify it."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations and Armed Services, meeting and acting jointly.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 24-25 on S J Res 28, identical to H J Res 159.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 24 -- Dulles testified for the resolution in executive session.

Jan. 25 -- Objectives of the resolution were endorsed in executive session by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

ACTION -- Jan. 26 -- A proposal by Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) to turn over protection of Formosa and island areas to the United Nations, giving authority to the President only until the UN acted, was rejected, as was a proposal by Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) to limit Presidential authority to the protection of Formosa and the Pescadores only.

The Committees reported (S Rept 13) S J Res 28 favorably, without amendment, by a vote of 27-2. William Langer (R N.D.) and Wayne Morse (D Ore.) comprised the minority.

The report said the possibility that Communist China might try to involve Russia in any hostilities around Formosa "is a calculated risk which the United States must take."

The report recommended that the line of defense not be spelled out with definite geographic limits because "such action might handicap our country by depriving it of flexibility...to meet unforeseen situations that might arise..."

Floor Action

The Senate Jan. 28 passed H J Res 159 by an 85-3 roll-call vote, and sent it to the President without amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 115.) The "nay" votes were cast by Morse, Langer, and Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.).

After three days of debate, four amendments were rejected, three of them by roll-call votes. S J Res 28 was indefinitely postponed after passage of the House bill.

DEBATE -- Jan. 26 -- Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) said "in plain English this is preventive war."

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) said "the risk in the action is tremendous. But...we have no other choice than to give the President...the power he requests." She said passage would eliminate any possibility of President Eisenhower being criticized as was ex-President Truman for his action in Korea.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) offered an amendment to restrict the use of armed force specifically to the defense of Formosa and the Pescadores. He referred to the off-shore islands as an internal matter between the two Chinese governments. He said he regretted "that the resolution is not one which we are permitted to design; it is one which we are permitted to accept or reject; and to reject it would be to undermine the President's authority completely and totally."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said Congress, by passing the resolution, would give the President "a predated authorization" to wage war, and would subsequently be unable to exert a check of this Presidential authority.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) said "there is not a scintilla of evidence...which could lead any reasonable person to believe that the purpose of the resolution is to engage in a preventive war..."

Estes Kefauver warned that "war may come out of the present situation...The Senate should...get the resolution in such shape that it will result in the least possible chance of war, and still maintain our honor."

Jan. 27 -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) said President Eisenhower's Jan. 27 statement that he alone would be responsible for a decision to use armed forces meant that no military officer or Chinese Nationalist officer had the authority to start military action.

As long as "we assume the power of saying that the holding of a given piece of land at sea is vital to the interests of this country, and that we propose to hold it," George said, "we have the right to...undertake...an effective defense of that island."

He said the right to Formosa and the Pescadores remained in the hands of the United States and its allies after Japan renounced any claims to the islands in the Japanese peace treaty, and would remain there until some other disposition is made of the islands.

Knowland opposed limiting the President's authority to Formosa and the Pescadores because "if the Chinese Communists attack us first and commit an act of war, they are certainly not going to expect to have a sanctuary when they reach the three-mile limit."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) said "the President is actually asking for unlimited reserve powers the use of which we cannot foresee but which could lead to an act of war..."

EXTEND MONROE DOCTRINE

George W. Malone (R Nev.) wanted to add a section condemning Russia and recommending withdrawal of diplomatic recognition. He called for extension of the Monroe Doctrine to prevent Communist expansion.

Morse referred to the joint resolution as "an authorization for the exercise of power to start a preventive war.

"The resolution opens wide the door for taking action over and beyond the immediate defense of Formosa and the Pescadores and the President admits" as much, Morse said. "I do not believe Congress should in any way delegate its power to declare war," Morse asserted.

Morse called either for striking from the resolution "the broad, sweeping language" which would give authority to defend the off-shore islands, or adopting a substitute placing the problem before the United Nations.

Jan. 28 -- Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) termed the resolution "not an act of aggression (but) rather a step toward the preservation of peace." He said war "would not be the result of any aggressive act on the part of the United States. But war might come as the result of any display of weakness, of disunity, or of hesitation. I shall cast my vote on the side of firmness, for unity and for decision."

Lehman said "United Nations action...is our best and foremost hope." Congress should call for UN intervention and "ask that the organization designed for just such situations as this...assert the moral and physical authority of mankind."

"The Congress cannot...take the position...that American blood will flow...for the defense of Quemoy and Matsu..." he said.

Kefauver, claiming "a fatal ambiguity in the President's message and resolution," offered an amendment which he said would "clearly state" the resolution's justification, welcome United Nations intervention and omit any possible reference to Quemoy and Matsu Islands.

Humphrey declared: There was not "one iota of evidence to show that Quemoy and Matsu are essential for the defense of Formosa..."

OFFSHORE ISLANDS

George replied that turning over Quemoy and Matsu to the Communists would lead to a "disintegration that would...be swift, quick, speedy and final" and would "cut the heart out" of Nationalist troops.

Morse said: "It would be a bad historic precedent if we should involve ourselves in a civil war over Quemoy and Matsu" which "the sovereign rights of Red China certainly encompass..." Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) disputed Morse's views on the islands.

Langer asked whether the resolution would give the President "a blank check to send armed forces" hundreds of miles inside the Chinese mainland? Stuart Symington (D Mo.) said it was "a matter which we will have to leave to the judgment of the President."

Lehman offered an amendment, previously suggested by Humphrey, to limit action to Formosa and the Pescadores so that Congress would not "abdicate its responsibilities and...place them, unlimited, undefined, unspecified and unreservedly, in the hands of the President."

Knowland said adoption of Lehman's proposal "would be considered a backdown on the part" of the U.S.

Herman Welker (R Idaho) gave his "unqualified opinion that there can be no proper basis for labeling any action that might develop as anything but defensive in character."

Russell B. Long (D La.) said "the resolution declares to the world that we are ready to stand with the President in the defense of Formosa and the Pescadores, and if those islands are attacked we are ready to go to war with Red China."

Francis Case (R S.D.) emphasized that "the resolution is intended...only to give Congressional approval to defensive military action." George D. Aiken (R Vt.) added: "There is nothing in the joint resolution which authorizes a preventive war."

James H. Duff (R Pa.) said the resolution "is clearly based upon...a calculated risk that Russia is unwilling at this time to undertake an all-out war, and since Red China's action is predicated upon Russia's approval or veto, that consequently Red China is not ready at this time for all-out war."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED --

Jan. 28 -- Langer -- Authorize use of armed force within 12 miles of the Chinese mainland only to evacuate troops or civilians. Roll call, 3-83.

Kefauver -- Authorize armed force to defend Formosa and the Pescadores, including measures consistent with international law and the UN Charter. (Substitute resolution.) Roll call, 11-75.

Lehman -- Limit armed force to defense of Formosa and the Pescadores. Roll call, 13-74.

Malone -- Place Senate on record in favor of suspension of diplomatic relations with Russia. Voice vote.

MEASURE SIGNED

President Eisenhower signed H J Res 159 into law (PL 4) Jan. 29. He said enactment of the resolution was "a step to preserve the peace in the Formosa area. We are ready to support a United Nations effort to end the present hostilities in the area, but we also are united in our determination to defend an area vital to the security of the United States and the free world."

LATER DEVELOPMENTS

In February, U.S. forces helped the Chinese Nationalists evacuate the Tachen Islands, north of Formosa, without major incident.

Communist China rejected a UN Security Council invitation to take part in efforts to arrange a cease-fire in the Formosa area. Efforts continued outside the UN.

Conflict developed over possible U.S. help in defending the off-shore islands of Quemoy and Matsu against Communist invasion. In a Feb. 16 speech, Dulles said the U.S. "has no commitments and no purpose" to defend these islands "as such." Many observers, including Sen. George, interpreted the speech as meaning that the U.S. would defend the off-shore islands if they were invaded as a prelude to invasion of Formosa and the Pescadores.

But Chairman Richards of the House Foreign Affairs Committee called for clarification of the U.S. position. He said Feb. 23 that Dulles had led Congress to understand that the U.S. "would assuredly defend" the islands but since then, "confusion has replaced determination" among Administration leaders.

President Eisenhower, at his March 30 news conference, spoke out against too much speculation and talk of war, and said he had no information that the Chinese Reds planned an early attack on the islands.

Admiral Robert B. Carney, chief of Naval operations, April 5 denied reports he had predicted a Communist attack in the Formosa Strait by April 15.

NEGOTIATIONS PROPOSED

On April 23 Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai announced that his nation was prepared to negotiate directly with the United States over Formosa and the general Far East situation. The State Department replied that Communist China could prove its sincerity by "a number of obvious steps," including an immediate cease-fire and release of imprisoned Americans.

Dulles told a news conference April 26 the U.S. could hold direct talks with Red China provided Nationalist Chinese interests were not directly at stake.

Twelve Republican Senators April 30 signed a statement urging the President to confer directly with Red China, and on May 8, 26 House Republicans announced their full support of the President's efforts for "an honorable cease-fire agreement" in the area.

The President told his May 31 news conference that abandoning the off-shore islands would not help the U.S. situation in the Far East, but that Red China had implied its release of four imprisoned airmen was an effort to relax Far East tensions.

On Aug. 1, 11 U.S. airmen were released as talks began on an ambassadorial level between the U.S. and Red China. Subsequently, China freed a number of U.S. civilians.

Talks continued into the fall at Geneva, where the Big Four Foreign Ministers held their conference.

SOUTHEAST ASIA TREATY

Exec K -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 1), Jan. 25, 1955.

- Approved by the Senate, Feb. 1, on 82-1 roll-call vote. (See p. 115.)
- Signed by the President, Feb. 4.

The U. S.-sponsored Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty and Protocol was signed by eight nations in Manila Sept. 8, 1954, after three days of formal discussion. The so-called Manila Pact pledged joint action against aggressive threats to any member-nation. It sought, moreover, to safeguard nationalist movements by means of a new "Pacific Charter" which promised "practical measures to insure conditions favorable" to self-determination by colonial peoples.

Ratification of the treaty, the fifth security pact negotiated by the United States with Pacific nations, was approved by the Senate Feb. 1.

PROVISIONS -- The treaty, signed by the United States, Australia, New Zealand, France, Pakistan, Philippines, Tahiland, and United Kingdom would:

Cover territories of the signatory nations in Southeast Asia and in the Southwest Pacific below a line drawn just north of the Philippines, and provide for extension of coverage by unanimous consent.

Commit signatories to act against armed attack against the treaty area, subject to constitutional processes.

Confine the U.S. obligation to "Communist aggression;" in the case of non-Communist aggression, the other nations were committed to act, but the U.S. need only "consult."

Commit signatories to "consult" on measures for "the common defense" in case the treaty area was threatened, not by armed attack, but by subversion.

Commit signatories to strengthen their military, economic, and social positions through "self-help and mutual aid."

Establish a Council to implement the treaty.

The Protocol added to the treaty area Cambodia, Laos, and South Vietnam, although they were not signatories.

Accompanying the treaty, but not subject to Senate action, was a Pacific Charter, committing the signatories to uphold by peaceful means equal rights, self-determination, self-government, and independence, and pledging them to cooperate economically, socially, and culturally.

The Korean Mutual Defense Treaty was ratified on Jan. 29, 1954. Three defense treaties with other Pacific nations were ratified in 1952 - one with the Philippines, another with Australia and New Zealand, and the third with Japan (1954 Almanac, p. 281; 1952 Almanac, p. 169).

The NATO treaty, covering mainly the defense of free countries in Europe, pledged each of the 14 signatories to treat an attack on one as an attack on all. It was ratified in 1949. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, pp. 343-50.)

A similar mutual defense pledge was contained in the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance (often called the Rio treaty), which was ratified in 1947. (CQ Almanac, Vol. III, 1947, p. 630.)

The deteriorating position of the French and Indo-Chinese armed forces in their struggle with the Communist Viet Minh in 1954 provided the impetus to negotiate the treaty -- sometimes called the SEATO treaty. (The letters stood for "Southeast Asia Treaty Organization," the name by which the pact was known in popular usage, although actually it created no treaty organization).

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles on March 29, 1954 called for "united action" by the free world to block Communist aggression in Southeast Asia. He accused Red China of supporting aggression in Indo-China with the aim of controlling all Southeast Asia and its raw materials and important sea and air routes. He said meeting the Red Chinese threat with united action might involve "serious risks" but the risks were "far less than those that will face us a few years from now if we dare not be resolute today."

While the Geneva Conference on Far Eastern problems was in progress (April 26-July 21, 1954), President Eisenhower said May 5 that plans for a Southeast Asian defense pact were proceeding and "it was never expected that this collective security arrangement would spring into existence overnight." It was signed Sept. 8.

Senate

President Eisenhower submitted the treaty (Executive K, 83rd Congress, 2nd session) to the Senate Nov. 10, 1954. He asked the Senate to ratify the SEATO Pact as "an important link" in the free world's defense against Communist aggression.

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- Nov. 11, 1954; Jan. 13, 19, 1955.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 11 -- Secretary of State Dulles urged the Committee to approve the pact in order to provide means for combatting the dangers of communism in Southeast Asia. Dulles said he would seek an early meeting of the eight signatory nations forming the defense pact to find means of combatting Communist subversion.

Jan. 13 -- (At a closed hearing Dulles appealed for quick action on the pact. He said it was of the "utmost importance" for the U. S. to lead in ratification to show that Western and Asian powers could work together successfully.)

Jan 19 --Former Rep. Hamilton Fish (R N.Y., 1920-45), American Political Action Committee president, opposed ratification on the ground that it would drag the United States into a jungle war and play "into the hands of the Communists at Moscow."

TREATY REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee, by a 14-1 vote, ordered the treaty favorably reported Jan. 21. Sen. William Langer (R N.D.) was the lone dissenter.

In its report (Exec Rept 1), filed Jan. 25, the Committee compared the "risks" entailed in ratification of the treaty with the "greater hazards in not advising a potential enemy of what he can expect of us . . ."

Floor Action

The Senate Feb. 1 consented, by an 82-1 roll-call vote, to ratification of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty and Protocol. (For voting, see chart, p. 115.)

DEBATE -- Chairman Walter F. George (D Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee -- "It is our purpose...to give advance notice to any Communist nation contemplating aggressive action in that area (Southeast Asia) that they will have to reckon with The United States ...the Southeast Asia Pact is inspired by the conviction that a potential aggressor may be deterred from reckless conduct by a clear-cut declaration of our intentions...." While the North Atlantic Treaty specifies that "'an attack upon one (signatory) is an attack upon all'...the present treaty leaves no doubt that the constitutional powers of the Congress and the President are exactly where they stood before...." The section of the treaty dealing with subversion "does not mean that the United States has undertaken to suppress bona fide, local revolutions..."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- "We have no purpose of having our forces involved in a ground war..." The treaty tells the Communists that "they are no longer free to isolate and absorb the countries of Southeast Asia, one by one...."

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Although "the United States has agreed that if there should be local controversies in the area, we would join with others in consultation...this treaty is aimed primarily at Communist aggression, not at difficulties that might arise between friendly states."

William Langer (R N.D.), who cast the only "nay" vote on the treaty -- "...the United States of America ought to mind its own business and to keep out of foreign entanglements all over Europe and Asia....if there should be an uprising....all that would have to be done would be to charge such movements as being Communistic, and immediately the United States would be called upon to take action...."

CHINA TREATY

Exec A -- Reported, with "understandings," by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 2) Feb. 8, 1955.

- Approved by the Senate Feb. 9, on a 65-6 roll-call vote. (See p. 116.)
- Signed by the President Feb. 11.

A mutual security treaty pledging that an attack on Formosa would be considered "dangerous" to U.S. "peace and safety" was signed by the United States and Nationalist China in 1954 and ratified in 1955. The treaty stated that each party would act to meet "an armed attack in the West Pacific...in accordance with its constitutional processes."

Ratification of the treaty with the Republic of China (Executive A, 84th Congress, First Session), the sixth security pact negotiated by the United States with Pacific nations was approved by the Senate with the following "understandings":

That any extension of the treaty area would be taken only with "the mutual agreement" of two-thirds of the Senate.

That the "obligations of the parties...apply only in the event of external armed attack, and that military operations by either party from the territories held by the Republic of China shall not be undertaken except by joint agreement."

That nothing in the treaty "shall be construed as affecting or modifying the legal status or the sovereignty" of Formosa and the Pescadores Islands.

PROVISIONS -- The treaty required the U.S. and Nationalist China to:

Maintain and develop "jointly by self-help and mutual aid" their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack and Communist subversion directed against them "from without."

Cooperate in development of economic progress.

Consult on implementation of the treaty.

Act to meet an armed attack "in the West Pacific area directed against the territories" of either the U.S. or the Republic of China, including Formosa, the Pescadores Islands, and "such other territories as may be determined by mutual agreement."

The treaty could be terminated by either nation one year after notice had been given.

Background

The Chinese Nationalist government proposed in December, 1953 that a mutual defense pact be made with the United States. Following informal discussions, the treaty was negotiated in Washington in the Fall of 1954. George K. C. Yeh, Nationalist Chinese Foreign Minister, and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles signed it on Dec. 2, 1954.

The treaty was designed to implement the U. S. policy of preventing further expansion of Communist Chinese power by aggressive action, and Communist Chinese attainment of a firmer basis for membership in the United Nations. The Communists' menacing attitude toward the Nationalist Chinese government on Formosa posed a threat to both U. S. policy objectives.

The treaty also was designed to strengthen the U. S. strategic position in the Western Pacific within the framework of existing U. S. treaty commitments in that area. (See "Southeast Asia Treaty," p. 280.)

FORMOSA RESOLUTION

Prior to Senate approval of the mutual defense treaty, Congress passed a joint resolution authorizing the President to use U. S. armed forces in defense of Formosa and the Pescadores Islands without specific advance permission by Congress. (See p. 277.)

Senate

President Eisenhower submitted the treaty to the Senate Jan. 6, 1955, asking for "early and favorable consideration" of it. The President said the treaty was designed to "deter any attempt by the Chinese Communist regime to bring its aggressive military ambitions to bear against the treaty area."

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 7, 1955.

TESTIMONY -- Secretary of State Dulles said failure to ratify the treaty would result in "grave consequences," although he doubted that the Chinese Communists "really intend to wage war against the United States" over Formosa. He added that the U. S. "should remain calm, but firm in its purpose."

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said, on the basis of Dulles' testimony, that the treaty "further increases the possibility of war in the Pacific."

ACTION -- The Committee, by an 11-2 vote, ordered the treaty favorably reported, with "understandings" (Exec Rept 2), on Feb. 8. Morse and William Langer (R N.D.) cast the dissenting votes.

The "understandings" recommended by the Committee were designed to clarify the U. S. position without requiring the additional action by the Chinese government that formal "reservations" would entail. They specified that the treaty did not affect the legal status of Formosa and that any agreement to alter its defense provisions must have Senate approval. In addition, the Committee spelled out its understanding of the limits placed on U. S. military assistance under the pact.

Floor Action

The Senate Feb. 9 consented, by a 65-6 roll-call vote, to ratification of the treaty. Approval of ratification followed debate and rejection of two amendments and two reservations to the treaty. (For voting, see chart, p. 116.)

DEBATE -- Walter F. George (DGa.) -- "We can be sure that the Communists will undertake aggression if they think they can get away with it. This treaty will make it clear that the United States would view any attack on Formosa and the Pescadores as a danger to itself."

Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) -- It is "in the national interest that Formosa and the Pescadores be kept in friendly hands...Either we can defend the United States in the straits of Formosa -- now -- or we can defend it later in San Francisco Bay."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Argued that Congress had already authorized the President to use U.S. armed forces in defense of Formosa and the Pescadores. "What contribution is made, what strength is taken on, what further pause is given to the Chinese Communists by virtue of this treaty?"

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- It is "extremely important" that we "serve notice that this area will not be used as a blue chip in an international poker game." The "island of Formosa is a key part" of the "defense line in the Pacific area."

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- "I can see no reason for having our nation enter into treaty obligations with the government of Chiang Kai-shek...I do not wish to give the color of sovereignty and permanency to the government of Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa and the Pescadores."

Morse, Lehman, William Langer (R N.D.), and Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) proposed two reservations to the resolution of ratification, both of which were rejected by voice votes. The reservations were similar to two amendments, which were rejected, offered by Morse.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Morse -- Add language to the treaty declaring it did not affect or modify the legal status or sovereignty of the territories to which it applied. Roll call, 11-57.

Morse -- Strike out language declaring that provisions calling for mutual aid and action against armed attack would apply to "such other territories as may be determined by mutual agreement." Roll call, 10-60.

GERMAN TREATIES

Execs L, M -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 6) March 31, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate April 1, on a single 76-2 roll-call vote. (See p. 121.)
- Signed by the President April 7.

Two treaties to end the occupation regime in the Federal Republic of Germany and bring it into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were signed in Paris by the United States and its Western allies in October, 1954 and ratified in 1955.

The treaties were related to a network of other agreements, to which the U.S. was not a party, designed to create a Western European Union, establish a system of military limitations and controls, and provide for close integration of the armed forces of the free nations in Western Europe.

A principal purpose of the series of agreements was to enable West Germany to contribute to the collective defense effort of Western Europe. As a full-fleged NATO member, the Republic was expected to supply 12 armed divisions.

TREATY TERMS

The first of the protocols (Executive L, 83rd Congress, Second Session), providing for termination of the occupation, had been signed Oct. 23, 1954 by the Federal Republic and the three occupying powers -- the U.S., United Kingdom and France.

The second protocol (Executive M, 83rd Congress, Second Session), providing for West German accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as the 15th member, was signed the same day by the U.S. and the other 13 NATO members -- Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

PROVISIONS -- As ratified, Exec L would:

"Terminate the occupation regime" of the U.S., Great Britain, and France in the West German Republic, revoke the occupation statute, and abolish the Allied High Commission and the Offices of the Land Commissioners in the Bonn Republic.

Give "full authority of a sovereign state over its internal and external affairs" to West Germany.

Allow the U.S., Britain, and France to "retain the rights...relating to the stationing of armed forces in the Federal Republic...(for) the defense of the free world of which Berlin and the Federal Republic form a part."

Establish a joint four-power commission to exercise the controls in the fields of disarmament and demilitarization formerly carried out by the Military Security Board.

Set up an arbitration tribunal which would have "exclusive jurisdiction over all disputes arising" between the U.S., Britain, France and West Germany. The tribunal would consist of "neutral members," appointed by agreement by the four governments, none of whom would be a U.S., British, French, or German national.

Provide for review and modification of the terms of the treaty by the U.S., Britain, France and the German Republic "in the event of reunification of Germany...or an international understanding on steps towards bringing about the reunification...or the creation of a European Federation."

Allow the U.S., Britain and France to retain the rights "heretofore exercised...by them," relating to reunification and conclusion of a peace settlement.

NATO MEMBERSHIP

Exec M would:

Authorize the U.S. to extend an invitation to the Federal Republic of Germany, on behalf of the other NATO nations, to accede to the North Atlantic Treaty.

Provide for the treaty to take effect upon approval of the relevant related treaties, particularly the modifications to the Brussels Treaty of 1948. (The effect of this provision was to subject Germany's potential military strength to international control under the terms of the modified Brussels pact.)

Background

REFERENCES -- "German Peace, Defense Pacts," CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 170-171; "West German Sovereignty," CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 263.

The need for some type of German contribution to the defense of Western Europe became apparent shortly after the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty in April, 1949 and the beginning of the U.S. military assistance program in Western Europe.

At the same time, there was fear in Europe that rearming Germany would lead to a revival of German militarism. To insure against this possibility, French Prime Minister Rene Pleven proposed the establishment of a European Defense Community (EDC). Under the Pleven plan, a common defense organization, with national forces under a single international command, would be created for six European countries -- Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, France, Italy, and Western Germany.

In May, 1952 two agreements, providing for restoration of sovereignty to West Germany and extending the North Atlantic Treaty area to include Western Germany, were signed in Bonn and Paris by France, the U.S., the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany. The agreements were to become effective only upon conclusion of a treaty to establish the European Defense Community.

The U.S. Senate approved the Bonn agreements and the NATO protocol on July 1, 1952, on roll-call votes of 77-5 and 72-5. (For voting, see CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, p. 182.)

EDC REJECTED

The 1952 agreements never took effect because the French Chamber of Deputies in August, 1954 rejected the treaty establishing EDC.

Prior to the French action, the U.S. Senate on July 30, 1954 adopted, by a vote of 88-0, a resolution (S Res 295) requesting the President to take such steps as he found necessary to restore sovereignty to Germany. Thus the Senate reaffirmed the President's power to act during its absence if EDC were rejected and an alternate plan developed.

Following the defeat of EDC in France, British Foreign Minister Sir Anthony Eden proposed a substitute in the form of amendments to the Brussels Treaty of 1948 -- an agreement linking Belgium, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom in a military, economic and cultural union and pledging mutual automatic assistance in case of aggression against any party.

On Oct. 3, 1954, following a nine-power conference in London, an agreement to replace EDC with a new structure, based on a strengthened Brussels Treaty, was signed by the U.S., Canada, Belgium, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Italy and the Federal Republic of Germany. The agreement was in the form of the Final Act to the conference -- a detailed document outlining principles to govern West Germany's accession to the Brussels and North Atlantic Treaties and restoration of its sovereignty.

The modified Brussels Treaty would create a Western European Union, establish a system of military limitations and controls, and provide for close integration of the armed forces of the free nations in Western Europe. Members were to be the original nations plus Italy and West Germany. Membership thus corresponded to that of the never-realized EDC, with the addition of the United Kingdom.

Signing of the strengthened Brussels pact, providing a framework for international control of Germany's potential military strength, paved the way for the conclusion in Paris, on Oct. 23, 1954, of new treaties to end the occupation of West Germany and bring it into NATO as a full-fledged member.

Senate

President Eisenhower submitted the treaties (Execs L and M, 83rd Congress, Second Session) to the Senate on Nov. 15, 1954, asking that they be studied so that the Senate could "act promptly" on them when the 84th Congress convened in January, 1955. The President said the agreements represented "the culmination of a joint effort, extending over several years, to promote closer cooperation in security matters among the nations of Western Europe and to find a way of associating the great potential strength of the Federal Republic of Germany with that of the free world in a manner which will insure freedom and equality for the people of Germany and at the same time will avoid the danger of a revival of German militarism."

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- March 29, 30, 1955

TESTIMONY -- March 29 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said the treaties would give Western Europe "its last chance to survive as a place of human welfare." He said Russia "exhausted every means at its command short of open war to prevent" the signing and ratification of the treaties.

He assured the Committee that the United States, Britain, and France could veto any possible later decision by Germany to join Russia against Western interests.

March 30 -- Deputy Secretary of Defense Robert B. Anderson said the agreements were "in the interests of peace," while their alternative was "chaos." He said the Defense Department was ready to ship arms to West Germany as soon as the treaties were ratified. Statements supporting the treaties were filed by Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Orville R. Cook, deputy U.S. commander-in-chief in Europe.

Opposition to the treaties on the grounds that they would help foster neo-Fascism and sow the seeds of another World War was heard from representatives of certain foreign language groups, Federation of Jewish Women's Clubs, American Labor Party, American Veterans for Peace, and Progressive Party, all of New York City.

ACTION -- The Committee, by a 14-1 vote, ordered the treaties favorably reported (Exec Rept 6) on March 31. Committee Chairman Walter F. George (D Ga.) said William Langer (R N.D.) cast the dissenting vote.

Floor Action

The Senate April 1 consented, by a 76-2 roll-call vote, to ratification of the treaties. Following debate, a single vote was taken on both protocols, although separate votes were recorded on each. (For voting, see chart, p. 121.)

DEBATE -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "I am convinced that (by these treaties) we improve the chances for the unification of Germany. We improve the chances for a Big Four or Big Five meeting that will produce something more constructive and helpful than stalemate and propaganda. We put into operation a method of controlling armaments that may have possibilities of wider use."

William Langer (R N.D.), who cast one of the two negative votes -- "The protocols are...so fraught with dangers as to jeopardize the future happiness and safety not only of the people of other countries but of our own people in the United States...We may be participants in an act which may lead to calamitous results, as were our predecessors in this body when they considered the Treaty of Versailles, which brought on World War II."

Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) -- "The protocols...will return Western Germany to the place where she rightfully belongs, to a place of equality and partnership with other nations of the Western World."

George W. Malone (R Nev.), who cast the other dissenting vote -- "Because of the pacts...we have lost the position we held for 175 years, of insisting on the right to decide when our national security was in jeopardy."

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- "Only if the project for controlled disarmament is really a hopeful one and is pressed forward as such...does the contemplated rearmament become anything but a reckless playing of little boys with dynamite."

OCCUPATION ENDED

One month after U.S. ratification, action by all signatories had been completed and the Paris agreements went into effect. The three occupying powers proclaimed the occupation of West Germany ended on May 5, and the Republic formally joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on May 6, 1955 -- ten years after Nazi Germany's unconditional surrender.

President Eisenhower May 5 signed an order transferring all functions of the U.S. High Commissioner's office in Bonn, Germany to a diplomatic mission headed by Dr. James B. Conant, who had been U.S. High Commissioner. Dr. Conant's nomination as Ambassador to the German Republic was confirmed by the Senate May 9.

AUSTRIAN STATE TREATY

Exec G -- Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 8) June 15, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate June 17 by a roll-call vote of 63-3. (See p. 129.)
- Ratification signed by the President June 24.

The Austrian State Treaty (Executive G, 84th Congress, First Session) was signed at Vienna May 15, 1955, by the representatives of the United States, England, France, and Russia. The treaty re-established Austria as an independent state.

PROVISIONS -- The major terms of the treaty would:

Re-establish Austria as a sovereign, independent, and democratic state.

Establish its frontiers as those existing on Jan. 1, 1938.

Provide that Germany would renounce all political and territorial claims on Austria.

Prohibit any economic or political union between Germany and Austria.

Provide for measures to destroy any vestiges of the Nazi Party and the dissolution of all "Fascist-type" organizations.

Prohibit service in the Austrian armed forces of former members of Nazi organizations or affiliates.

Limit the types of weapons which Austria may use for her armies.

Provide for the withdrawal of all occupation forces from Austrian territory by Dec. 31, 1955.

Provide that no reparations would be paid, but Russia would be given various oil concessions for periods up to 30 years, as well as oil refineries and distribution agencies.

Declare that Austria was "to join no military alliances and to permit no military bases on its territory... (and) to practice in perpetuity a neutrality of the type maintained by Switzerland."

BACKGROUND -- The Republic of Austria was united with Germany by the "anschluss" of 1938. From the close of World War II, Austria had been occupied by the forces of the victorious powers. The U.S., Britain, France, and Russia each administered a zone of occupation in Austria, and the capital city, Vienna, was jointly administered.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARING -- June 10.

TESTIMONY -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles urged speedy approval of the treaty. The U.S. was "very actively" considering asking Russia to remove troops from Rumania and Hungary after the Austrian occupation ended, Dulles said. The U.S. would be prepared to help Austria equip its armed forces, he added.

ACTION -- The treaty was reported June 15 (Exec Rept 8).

Floor Action

The Senate June 17, by a roll-call vote of 63-3, consented to the ratification of the Austrian State Treaty. Three Republicans voted against the treaty: William E. Jenner (Ind.); George W. Malone (Nev.); and Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.). (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

DEBATE -- Many Senators protested against the oil concessions Russia required before agreeing to Austria's independence. Generally, Senators agreed that although the treaty was not all it might have been, it was better than the existing occupation and no treaty at all.

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- "This treaty will restore to Austria the freedom and independence taken from her 18 years ago.... This treaty is not a peace treaty imposed on a defeated nation. It is rather a treaty with a nation that was the first victim of Nazi aggression..."

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- "This is not...a perfect treaty from our point of view. But it is infinitely preferable to no treaty at all or to any of the various treaties which the Russians offered to accept before they agreed on this one. The economic clauses...give the Soviets more benefits than they deserve; but...these benefits are much less than the Soviets are receiving."

Jenner -- "This settlement does not restore the sovereignty of Austria, because Austria is not permitted sufficient weapons for self-defense.... Austria is not permitted to make alliances with other free nations... Austria is not permitted to abolish subversive organizations operating within her territory, but obedient to a foreign power.... A helpless Austria will be a Soviet Austria in short order."

GENEVA CONVENTIONS

Execs D, E, F, and G (82nd Congress, First Session) --
- Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 9) June 27, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate, by a 77-0 roll-call vote, July 6. (See page 130.)
- Ratification signed by the President July 14.

Four conventions dealing with the treatment of war victims were signed in Geneva, Switzerland in August, 1949 and transmitted to the Senate on April 25, 1951 (Execs D, E, F, G, 82nd Congress, First Session). Developments in the Korean war, however, caused the Truman Administration to propose that the Senate defer action on the treaties.

On March 29, 1955, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles recommended that the Senate approve the conventions, which had been agreed to by 48 countries, including those behind the "iron curtain."

PROVISIONS -- Exec D, as approved by the Senate July 6, with a reservation permitting use of the Red Cross emblem by companies using it prior to Jan. 5, 1905, dealt with the treatment of wounded servicemen in the field.

Exec E covered the treatment of wounded or shipwrecked servicemen at sea.

Exec F dealt with the treatment of prisoners of war.

Exec G concerned the treatment of civilians in wartime. It was approved with a reservation that the United States retained the right to impose the death penalty in occupied territory for the crimes of espionage, serious sabotage and murder.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARING -- June 3.

TESTIMONY -- Wilber M. Brucker, Defense Department Counsel, urged favorable action. He said the conventions would do away with "widespread and deliberate evasion of the principles of civilized warfare." Brucker said Red China agreed during the Korean war to comply with the conventions even though it was not a signatory nation. Spokesmen for the State and Justice Departments also urged approval of the treaties.

Representatives of several United States firms asked to be allowed to continue use of the Red Cross symbol as their trademark. The conventions established the Red Cross as a symbol for marking buildings which were prohibited as military targets and permitted no other use.

ACTION -- The Committee reported the treaties June 27 (Exec Rept 9), with two reservations and a statement rejecting certain reservations attached to the conventions by members of the "Soviet bloc."

Floor Action

The Senate July 6 approved ratification of the conventions by a 77-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 130.)

DEBATE -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- The conventions "have but one purpose, to relieve mankind from the suffering and the physical and moral degradation...so often experienced by the victims of war."

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.), William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Also spoke in behalf of the treaties.

GREAT LAKES TREATY

Exec B -- Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 7) May 23, 1955.

- Approved by the Senate June 1 on a 79-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 126.)
- Ratification signed by the President June 6.

A treaty signed by the United States and Canada on Sept. 10, 1954, authorized joint action in the Great Lakes area to wipe out the sea lamprey. It also established a joint program of fisheries research. President Eisenhower sent the treaty to the Senate on Jan. 26, 1955 (Executive B, 84th Congress, First Session).

BACKGROUND -- The lamprey, a parasitic, eel-like vertebrate, attaches itself to a fish and sucks its blood and vital juices. The lamprey's principal prey are food fishes such as trout and whitefish. The reduction of Great Lakes trout through the lamprey's attacks was estimated to cost the U.S. and Canada some $5 million a year.

The Senate June 1 consented to ratification of the Convention on Great Lakes Fisheries.

DEBATE -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "The pending convention will cost the U.S. approximately $750,000 a year for the first three years...By contrast, it is estimated that American fishermen alone lose $3.5 million a year through the depredations of the lamprey eel."

John W. Bricker (R Ohio) -- "Although there was some opposition to the treaty by representatives of Ohio groups, the opposition was not to control of the predatory eel. Instead the opposition was really to 'putting the foot in the door,' as we might say, as regards treaty control of fishing in the Great Lakes."

PANAMA TREATY

Exec F -- Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 11) July 26, 1955.

- Approved by the Senate, by a roll-call vote of 72-14, July 29. (See p. 134.)
- Ratification signed by the President Aug. 17.

A treaty between the United States and Panama, revising a 1936 pact covering the Canal Zone, was signed in Panama on Jan. 25, 1955 and forwarded by President Eisenhower to the Senate May 9 (Executive F, 84th Congress, First Session).

PROVISIONS -- As ratified by the Senate, the treaty:

Replaced a treaty signed in 1936.

Increased the annual rent paid by the U.S. in the Canal Zone from $430,000 to $1,930,000.

Gave Panama greater commercial opportunities in the Canal Zone.

Established a single basic wage for Canal Zone employees.

Restored certain Canal Zone land and buildings to Panama.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- July 15, 18.

TESTIMONY -- July 15 -- Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Holland described the treaty as "a step forward" in relations with Panama.

July 18 -- Lavern R. Dilweg of the U.S. Citizens Association of the Canal Zone expressed misgivings about the outcome of the treaty. He wanted reassurance that U.S. control of the Panama Canal would not be affected by the treaty.

ACTION -- The treaty was reported July 26 (Exec Rept 11).

Floor Action

The Senate July 29 agreed by a roll-call vote of 72-14, to ratification of the treaty between the U.S. and the Republic of Panama. (For voting, see chart, p. 134.)

DEBATE -- J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "This treaty ...is a logical result of the growth of Panama. When the United States first established treaty relationships with Panama in 1903...it was necessary for the United States to supply almost everything that was needed and also to exercise certain governmental authority in...Panama itself. But as Panama has developed, it has become possible for the United States to withdraw more and more from the life of the republic and confine itself more and more to operation of the canal.... (The treaty) simply reflect(s) the fact that services which formerly had to be performed by the United States, if they were to be performed at all, are now available from Panamanian enterprise."

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "It seems to me with all the concessions we make in the treaty, there should be some provision which would give us standing room from which to defend the canal...."

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- "...I think the treaty...is a bad one.... Panama will be given about $26 million or $27 million worth of property, and all we will get will be the use for 15 years of an area for military operations consisting of some 18 acres which nobody wants to use anyway."

GERMAN COMMERCIAL PACT

Exec E -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 10) July 21, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate, by a roll-call vote of 83-0, July 27. (See page 133.)

A treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation between the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany was signed Oct. 29, 1954, and forwarded by President Eisenhower to the Senate on May 9, 1955 (Executive E, 84th Congress, First Session).

The Senate July 27 consented to ratification of the treaty by an 83-0 roll-call vote.

DEBATE -- Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- "Treaties of this type...are designed to assure fair... treatment for Americans who travel abroad.... The treaties impose mutual obligations...to give citizens of each country...national and most-favored-nation treatment. They serve to prevent discriminatory treatment with respect to trade and shipping and the protection of persons and their property".

ITALIAN, DUTCH TAX TREATIES

Execs C, D, I -- (84th Congress, First Session) and Exec I -- (83rd Congress, Second Session)--Reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 12) July 27, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate, by a roll-call vote of 86-0, July 29. (See page 134.)
- Ratifications signed by the President Aug. 22 and Aug. 24.

The Senate July 29 approved, en bloc, two tax conventions with Italy, and two with the Netherlands covering West Indies islands known as the Netherlands Antilles. The treaties with Italy, signed on March 30, 1955, covered income taxes, and estate and inheritance taxes (respectively, Executive C and Executive D, 84th Congress, First Session).

Executive I, 83rd Congress, Second Session, signed on June 24, 1952, extended a 1948 U.S.-Dutch tax treaty to cover the Netherlands Antilles. Executive I, 84th Congress, First Session, was a supplementary protocol, signed June 15, 1955, to the Netherlands Antilles convention.

DEBATE -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- "They are called treaties; in effect they are tax conventions. They are simply agreements...with respect to taxes on profits or income and on inheritances or estates. The sole purpose...is to prevent the double taxation of American citizens who may live in the other country which is a party to the convention and may have derived profits in the other country. There is a reciprocal obligation on the part of both governments to assist in facilitating the collection of taxes due either country.... They are exactly the kind of conventions we have had with a number of other countries".

TAX TREATIES

Execs D, E, G -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 3) Feb. 9, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate Feb. 25 on 72-0, 71-0, and 74-0 roll-call votes. (See p. 118.)
- Signed by the President March 7.

The Senate Feb. 25 approved ratification of two tax treaties with Japan and one with Belgium. Action came after an explanation of the pacts by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.).

PROVISIONS -- Executive D, 83rd Congress, Second Session, was a convention between the United States and Japan for the avoidance of double taxation and prevention of fiscal evasion respecting income taxes.

Executive E, 83rd Congress, Second Session, also a treaty with Japan, provided for avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion respecting taxes on estates, inheritances, and gifts.

Executive G, 83rd Congress, Second Session, was a convention with Belgium dealing with the avoidance of double taxation and prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to estate and succession taxes.

BACKGROUND -- The two treaties with Japan were signed in Washington on April 16, 1954. The Belgian convention was signed in Washington on May 27, 1954. All were submitted to the Senate by President Eisenhower in 1954.

COMMUNICATIONS TREATY

Exec R -- Reported, with "understandings", by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (Exec Rept 5) March 4, 1955.
- Approved by the Senate April 1, on a 74-1 roll-call vote. (See p. 121.)
- Signed by the President May 25.

The Senate in 1955, approved by a vote of 74-1, without debate, the International Telecommunications Convention (Executive R, 83rd Congress, first session). This treaty ratified the convention and final protocol agreed to at a conference of 83 member countries of the International Communications Union held in Buenos Aires in December, 1952. The draft of the treaty, with two "understandings" to protect the interests of the United States, had been submitted to the Senate by President Eisenhower on July 27, 1953.

The general effect of the treaty was to continue in operation regulations to facilitate international telecommunications. These regulations were substantially the same as those agreed to at an Atlantic City, N.J., convention in 1947 and ratified in a treaty approved in 1948.

PROVISIONS -- The provisions of Exec R were essentially technical and covered regulations found necessary to assure the collection of charges for international telegraphic messages, the registration of radio frequencies, the receipt of distress calls, and the handling of special messages.

Two understandings were written into the treaty to ensure that the United States, acting for the continental U.S. and the territories, would retain its two votes in the ITU, and to exclude the United States from certain telephone and radio regulations.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee held a hearing on the treaty March 1 at which governmental communications experts testified. In reporting the treaty March 4 (Exec Rept 5), the Committee noted that the Atlantic City Convention had operated since 1948 without complaints.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

S 1894 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 505) June 10, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate June 21.
- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 1299) July 20.
- Passed by the House by voice vote Aug. 1.

P.L. 350 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

President Eisenhower May 2 sent Congress a special message asking approval of U.S. participation in the proposed International Finance Corporation. Congress Aug. 1 authorized the U.S. subscription to IFC.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the bill authorized the Secretary of Treasury to pay $35,168,000 as the U.S. subscription to IFC.

Background

The proposal to create an International Finance Corporation grew out of demands of underdeveloped countries for credits not readily obtainable from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey announced Nov. 11, 1954, at the Inter-American Conference of Finance Ministers in Brazil, that Congress would be asked to authorize U.S. participation in IFC, which would have $100 million in capital.

In his May 2 message, Mr. Eisenhower said the IFC would "help channel private capital and experienced and competent private management into productive investment opportunities that would not otherwise be developed." He pointed out that "the Corporation will not duplicate the operations of the International Bank..., for the investments of the Bank are guaranteed by its member governments and are of fixed-interest nature in projects not usually attractive to risk capital."

The President noted that top officials of the Bank would serve on the IFC board so that "effective collaboration between the two agencies and operating economy is assured."

Senate

COMMITTE -- Banking and Currency International Finance Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 6, 7 on S 1894.

TESTIMONY -- June 6 -- Secretary of Treasury Humphrey, Assistant Secretary of State Samuel C. Waugh, and Glen E. Edgerton, president, Export-Import Bank, supported S 1894. Humphrey said the corporation would provide financing for needed projects deemed too risky as investments to qualify for loans from either the Export-Import Bank or the World Bank.

June 7 -- Opposition to the proposal came from the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc., while support was registered by spokesmen for the International Chamber of Commerce, Investment Bankers Association of America, and the Washington (D.C.) Board of Trade.

ACTION -- The Committe reported (S Rept 505) S 1894 June 10, permitting U.S. participation in the International Finance Corporation, with a $35,168,000 subscription.

Floor Action

The Senate passed S 1894 June 21, by voice vote, after brief discussion.

DEBATE -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "IFC is expected to strengthen the free world by promoting private enterprises in less developed areas." It would cut foreign aid costs and make more customers for American products.

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "I cannot understand why there is greater interest in turning over $35 million to an international organization, in which we shall own only one-third of the stock, than there is in permitting our own wholly owned Export-Import Bank to engage in the same activities (investment in foreign enterprises). Yet I find...so much opposition that I shall not even submit the amendment" to extend the same power to the Export-Import Bank.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- July 11, 14 on a bill (HR 6228) to provide for U.S. participation in the IFC, to permit national banks to make 20-year real estate loans and nine-month construction loans, and for other purposes.

TESTIMONY -- July 11 -- Secretary Humphrey, Waugh, and Edgerton supported U.S. participation in the IFC. Humphrey said IFC would be "a very good, well-managed experiment" to encourage private investment in underdeveloped countries.

July 14 -- Supporting U.S. participation in IFC were spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Committee for a National Trade Policy.

ACTION -- The Committee July 20 reported the Senate bill (S 1894 -- H Rept 1299).

Floor Action

The House Aug. 1 passed the bill by voice vote, and sent it to the White House.

DEBATE -- Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- "The purpose of this bill is to have the nations jointly participate with private capital to make loans to develop underdeveloped areas in order that they might be self-supporting."

Wright Patman (D Texas) -- "It is rather ironical that we are called upon, after defeating the RFC (Reconstruction Finance Corporation) and...burying it in an unknown and unmarked grave, to come here and ask for an international RFC for foreign countries."

RECIPROCAL TRADE AMENDMENTS

HR 1 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 50) Feb. 14, 1955.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 295-110 roll-call vote Feb. 18. (See p. 138.)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 232) April 28.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 75-13 roll-call vote May 4. (See p. 123.)
- Conference report (H Rept 745) agreed to June 14 by the House on a 347-54 roll call (see p. 152); and by voice vote of the Senate June 15.

P.L. 86 -- Signed into law June 21.

President Eisenhower, in his January 10 message to Congress concerning foreign trade, asked for a three-year extension (to June, 1958) of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. He requested, in accordance with recommendations of the (Randall) Commission on Foreign Economic Policy, authority to negotiate reciprocal agreements that could cut tariffs 5 percent below existing levels each year for three years. He also asked retention of the much-debated "escape clause" and "peril point" provisions of the law. He said his recommendations were based on a "fresh review" of proposals submitted to the 83rd Congress in March, 1954.

Extensive hearings were held on the proposed legislation (HR 1). Veteran House members said opponents of the reciprocal trade program mounted the "biggest pressure campaign" they could recall. Among the most active opponents were sounthern textile interests, independent oil producers and coal operators, wool growers, and bicycle makers -- all fearful of what imports would do to their businesses.

The House Feb. 17 approved by a one-vote margin a closed rule governing debate on HR 1. It was the closest roll call in five years. The bill cleared the House Feb. 18. After extensive hearings and debate the Senate passed HR 1 May 4, after adopting amendments, advocated by the Finance Committee, that gave greater protection to domestic industries. The changes were acceptable to Mr. Eisenhower. The final version, which retained the Senate amendments, became law June 21.

PROVISIONS--The Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1955:

Extended through June 30, 1958, the President's authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

Permitted him to reduce tariff rates existing on Jan. 1, 1955, by 5 percent annually for three years, or reduce to 50 percent ad valorem existing rates above that figure.

Specified that, in a contemplated trade agreement with Japan, rates might be decreased 50 percent below the rates as of Jan. 1, 1945, despite expiration of the general authority on June 12, 1955.

Authorized the President, at his discretion, to limit imports of any product entering the U.S. in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security".

Provided for initial advice in such a case by the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization and, if the President agreed, a subsequent investigation.

Amended existing "peril point" and "escape clause" provisions so that the Tariff Commission could recommend action if any segment of a business enterprise producing goods in commercial quantities was suffering seriously from import competition.

Amended the "escape clause" provisions so that relief could be granted if imports "contributed substantially toward causing or threatening serious injury" to a domestic industry.

Required the Commission to make its recommendations for action under the "escape clause" at the time it submitted such a report to the President.

Provided for annual reports to Congress by the President and the Commission on the operations of the trade agreement program.

Made more binding the President's existing authority to suspend concessions to a country that discriminated against U.S. commerce.

Declared that enactment of the bill would not indicate approval or disapproval of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

"Randall Report, Reciprocal Trade" (Vol. X, 1954, pp. 265-272).

The first U.S. Trade Agreements Act became law in 1934 and empowered the President to enter into trade agreements with other countries. He was permitted to increase or decrease duties within a 50 percent range of rates prescribed in the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930, which set the nations tariff structure. This provision was amended in 1948 to establish rates in existence on Jan. 1, 1945, as the base for adjustments.

The trade program was extended in 1937, 1940, 1943, 1945, 1948, 1949, 1951, 1953 and 1954. The 1948 extension included a "peril points" provision that was strongly opposed by the Truman Administration. It required the Tariff Commission to recommend minimum rates necessary to protect domestic production of articles similar to those on which duties were to be reduced. If the President made agreements undercutting these "peril points", he had to explain to Congress his reasons for doing so.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman made "peril points" a campaign issue and the next year the Democratic 81st Congress repealed the provision when it passed legislation extending the whole program until June of 1951.

In 1951 "peril points" were restored, and the "escape clause" was added. This clause required the Tariff Commission to investigate any case of reported "serious injury" to domestic industry because of a duty reduction. The Commission could recommend changes in the tariff; if the President did not act on the recommendation, he was required to report his reasons to Congress.

This "escape clause" provision, the subject of continual controversy, was first incorporated into a trade agreement in 1943 with Mexico. Because of the war, however, it was not actually employed. It continued as a "procedure" in trade agreements but until 1951 was not incorporated in the law. By 1954, the Tariff Commission had received 59 "escape clause" cases, and recommended use of the measure in eight.

In 1953 President Eisenhower asked Congress for a one-year extension of the Act, pending a comprehensive reexamination of foreign economic policy by a bipartisan commission. The 1953 Trade Agreements Extension Act, accordingly, extended for one year the President's authority, under the Act of 1951, to enter into reciprocal trade agreements, and established the Commission on Foreign Economic Policy. Membership on the Commission was allocated as follows: seven Presidential appointees, five Senators, five Representatives. No political party was alloted more than a bare majority in each category.

RANDALL REPORT

President Eisenhower appointed as chairman of the Commission Clarence B. Randall, chairman of the board of the Inland Steel Company, and the group's report, submitted Jan. 23, 1954, commonly was referred to as the "Randall Report". (For the Commission's recommendations, see "Randall Report, Reciprocal Trade", CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 266 ff.)

On March 30, 1954, President Eisenhower sent Congress a message on foreign trade policy, requesting what he termed "a minimum program". The message followed closely the Randall report and urged "gradual and selective revision of our tariffs", with a three-year renewal of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act including: authority to negotiate reduction of existing U.S. tariffs by not more than 5 percent a year; reduction, by not more than half, of existing tariffs on goods not being imported, or imported in very small quantity; reduction to 50 percent ad valorem of rates in excess of that amount.

When Congress showed no inclination to act on the program before the legislation expired June 12, the President indicated on May 20, 1954, that he would be satisfied with a one-year extension of the existing law. Accordingly, Congress agreed June 29 to extend the Trade Agreements Act until June 12, 1955, pending hearings and further study of the Randall report. The act stipulated that Congress neither approved nor disapproved the international General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Opposition to GATT and to its administrative agency, the Organization for Trade Cooperation (OTC), was an integral part of the reciprocal trade controversy.

GATT is the mechanism for putting tariff reductions and concessions on a multilateral basis. It was first negotiated among 23 countries; by 1955 there were 34 countries participating. GATT rules govern such complex questions as the use of internal taxes as a substitute for tariffs, quota restrictions on imports and exports, export subsidies and state trading.

In 1947 President Truman initiated GATT under the authority of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, which did not require approval by Congress.

The State Department held public hearings in September, 1954, to collect opinions on trade prior to a 34-nation review of GATT in Geneva, Switzerland in November. On March 21, 1955 the GATT nations, including the United States, agreed to make changes in the Agreement's trade rules and set up the OTC to administer the Agreement.

President Eisenhower asked Congress in a message on April 14, 1955, to approve U.S. membership in OTC, but he did not submit the revised Agreement to Congress for approval. The President said that U.S. failure to join OTC "would be interpreted throughout the free world as a lack of genuine interest on the part of this country in the efforts to expand trade".

Nub of Congressional and other opposition to GATT was the fact that U.S. participation was effected under authority of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, and like other agreements negotiated under that Act, had never been approved by Congress. Supporters of U.S. protective tariffs termed GATT "un-American....unauthorized...a potential danger".

A bill (HR 5550) to authorize U.S. membership in OTC was introduced April 14, 1955 by Rep. Jere Cooper (D Tenn.), following the Presidential message on trade cooperation. Action on it was deferred until 1956, however, and the President assented to the postponement.

PRESIDENT'S PROGRAM

On Jan. 10, 1955, President Eisenhower sent a foreign trade message to Congress which he said was "a fresh review" of proposals he had submitted to the 83rd Congress in March, 1954. He described his program as "moderate, gradual and reciprocal", and said "economic strength among our allies is essential to our security; economic growth in underdeveloped areas is necessary" to ward off Communist infiltration; increased production and trade throughout the world would aid the U.S. economy and standard of living.

His requests of Congress follow, with those he had first made in 1954 marked by an asterisk:

*Extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements law for three years (to June 12, 1958).

*Authorize reduction of existing tariffs on selected commodities by no more than 5 percent a year for three years.

*Authorize, over three years, reduction to 50 percent ad valorem of any tariff rates currently above that level.

*Authorize in a three-year period reduction, by no more than one-half the rates in effect on Jan. 1, 1945, of tariffs on goods not currently imported or imported "in negligible quantities".

*Retain existing "peril point" and "escape clause" provisions.

Approve the proposed revision of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

*Improve import valuation methods.

*Improve customs administration and procedures.

*Increase to $1,000 (from $500) semi-annually the duty-free allowance for tourists.

*Tax U.S. corporations' income from foreign subsidiaries at 14 percent below domestic rates.

Defer taxes on income from U.S.-owned foreign branches until it leaves the country where it was earned.

Approve U.S. membership in the proposed International Finance Corporation.

*Provide funds for the U.S. and the United Nations technical cooperation programs.

Provide funds for U.S. participation in international trade fairs.

(For action on the International Finance Corporation, see p. 288.)

The President, in sending his foreign aid message to Congress April 20, noted that "the recommendations in this message are an essential complement to the foreign economic program outlined in my message of Jan. 10". (For foreign aid message, see p. 303.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 17 - Feb. 7 on HR 1, introduced by Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.).

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 17--Secretary of State John Foster Dulles endorsed the bill, said a three-year extension of the Act would "have a stabilizing effect and increase confidence throughout the free world" and would provide a strong economic base for mutual defense treaties between the United States and more than 40 countries.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, though generally supporting the bill, expressed concern lest one provision in it -- to give the President authority to modify import restrictions -- weaken farm import restrictions in the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Jan. 18--Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said trade in strategic items with Communist countries would continue to be controlled, but he added that "trade in carefully screened non-strategic items" might promote world peace. As a possible example, he suggested trading U.S. butter for Russian manganese.

(President Eisenhower, asked at his Jan. 19 press conference whether he endorsed Secretary Wilson's remarks on non-strategic trade with Russia, said Wilson's was a "casual statement" that did not reflect any change in U.S. policy.)

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks testified that HR 1 would be "of substantial value to the foreign and domestic commerce of the U.S." and that the proposed "modest" tariff cuts would not harm "efficiently managed" businesses. Increased imports would not lead to major unemployment, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said, and the proposed trade program would in general help workers as well as business.

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey added: "Foreign countries do not expect us to lower our tariffs drastically. What they want is assurance of continuity in our policies", such as a three-year extension of the Act would provide.

DROP IN ECONOMIC AID FORECAST

Jan. 19 -- Foreign Operations Administrator Harold E. Stassen, endorsing the theory of "trade, not aid", said he hoped that within two years non-military foreign aid would drop to 15 percent from the 1953-54 level of 34 percent. He said he favored a "slight expansion" of non-strategic trade with Russia.

Support for the President's "moderate" trade program came from James S. Schramm, executive vice president of the Committee for a National Trade Policy. Officials of the American Watch Association -- S. Ralph Lazrus, president, ex-Sen. Millard E. Tydings (D Md., 1927-50), counsel, and Benjamin Lazrus of the Benrus Watch Company -- endorsed extension of the reciprocal trade program but criticized the President's 1954 action in raising the tariff on Swiss watch movements. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 522.)

Jan. 20 -- The President's foreign trade program was criticized by Morris S. Rosenthal of the National Council of American Importers as "too little and too slow". Rosenthal proposed: extension of the Trade Agreements Act for four or six years; authority for the President to lower tariffs 25 percent; a new "escape clause" that would protect U.S. producers only in "actual emergency cases". Mrs. Oscar M. Ruebhausen of the League of Women Voters also asked for modified escape clause and a longer extension of the Act.

Top officials of four oil companies endorsed HR 1: Monroe J. Rathbone, Standard Oil Company (N.J.); Sidney A. Swensrud, Gulf Oil Corporation; James W. Foley, The Texas Company; and Harold W. Haight, Creole Petroleum Company. Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, also supported the bill.

(On the House floor Jan. 20, Rep. Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) of the Ways and Means Committee attacked the reciprocal trade program as fostering a "flood of imports" that were injuring domestic industries. Mason called his speech "the opening gun" in a battle that would be carried on by other Republican members of the Committee.)

SUPPORT FROM FARM GROUPS

Jan. 21 -- Officials of the American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange and National Farmers Union endorsed HR 1. AFBF President Charles B. Shuman proposed a four-year extension of the Trade Agreements Act and an amendment to permit the U.S. to suspend concessions granted other countries if they failed to live up to their commitments. The NFU asked for ratification of GATT, simplification of customs procedures, and creation of a world economic development agency.

Support for the bill also came from Warren Lee Pierson, U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce; B. A. Rittersporn, Jr., Committee on Foreign Trade Education; John C. White, American Cotton Shippers Association; D. E. Replogle, Friends Committee on National Legislation; Murray D. Lincoln, Cooperative League; Dr. Alzada Comstock, American Association of University Women; and Michael Straight, American Veterans Committee.

Jan. 24 -- Richard G. Gettell, for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., praised the bill's "gradual, cautious approach" toward lower tarrifs. He said "a continued attack against unnecessary trade barriers is in our own national interest, as well as in the interest of other countries... The Chamber supports the continuation of a trade agreements program which provides the government with adequate authority, exercised through the proper legislative agencies for negotiation and administration, to make effective agreements for the selective adjustment of tariffs and reduction of other barriers to world trade".

James B. Carey of the CIO endorsed the bill but also asked for passage of legislation to aid workers and businesses hurt by lower tariffs.

Charles H. Percy, president of Bell & Howell

Company, producers of photographic equipment, urged passage of HR 1 even though, he said, it might injure his own industry. "No one", Percy said, "desires more than I, the health and vigor of the photographic industry. But I do not believe we must gain these things through artificial barriers. I think we can and we will, win them for ourselves in a freer -- more competitive market". (According to Bell & Howell, the photographic industry was protected by tariffs of from 20-45 percent on photographic items imported from foreign countries.)

Other supporters of the bill included: Jere Patterson, International Advertising Association; Stacey Bender, Jr., North Atlantic Ports Association; and officials of the Washington, D.C., Board of Trade, San Antonio World Trade Association, Louisville Foreign Trade Club, Cleveland World Trade Association, and Detroit Board of Commerce.

Jan. 25 -- Proponents of HR 1 included Rep. Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D N.J.); David J. McDonald, United Steel Workers (CIO); Bernard Weitzer, Jewish War Veterans; Robert R. Nathan, Americans for Democratic Action; Howard C. Petersen, Committee for Economic Development; Wade G. McCargo, National Retail Dry Goods Association; A. T. Brown, Caterpillar Tractor Company; Arthur B. Sinkler, American Watch Manufacturing Association; Hartman Barber, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks (AFL); and George W. Morgan, Association of American Ship Owners.

OPPONENTS HEARD

Jan. 26 -- Philip D. Reed, board chairman of General Electric Company, supported the bill "with qualifications."

Richard H. Anthony, American Tariff League, and O. R. Strackbein, Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Export-Import Policy, opposed HR 1, arguing against provisions that would increase the President's authority in the foreign trade field.

Other opponents were George J. Burger, National Federation of Independent Business; Donald Loker, California Fish Canners Association; officials of several pottery groups and the International Brotherhood of Operative Potters (AFL).

EXPORT CLAIM DISPUTED

Jan. 27 -- Gwilym A. Price, president, Westinghouse Corporation, disputed proponents' arguments that HR 1 would increase U.S. exports.

Calvin Campbell, general counsel, Dow Chemical Company, called the President's trade program "perilous" and said it would result in sacrificing U.S. Indsutry in favor of foreign plants. Edgar M. Queeny, board chairman, Monsanto Chemical Company, said adoption of the program would impair the national defense value of his company.

Other witnesses opposed to the bill included Rep. E.C. Gathings (D Ark.); spokesmen for various chemical companies; Joseph Courtney for the American Glassware Association; and officials of glass and pottery workers' unions.

Jan. 28 -- Opponents of HR 1 were Reps. Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) and Winfield K. Denton (D Ind.); Harold F. Cary, American Tunaboat Association; John F. Linehan, Seafood Producers Association; John Hawk, Seafarers' International Union (AFL); and Ernest Falk, Northwest Horticultural Council (fruit growers).

OIL IMPORTS PROTESTED

Jan. 31 -- Spokesmen for the coal industry and railroads asked that imports of residual oil be strictly limited. Among the witnesses were: ex-Rep. Tom Pickett (D Texas, 1945-52), National Coal Association; James M. Symes, president, Pennsylvania Railroad; Stuart Saunders, Norfolk & Western Railroad; Thomas Kennedy, United Mine Workers (Ind.); W.D. Johnson, Order of Railway Conductors (Ind.); Harry See, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (Ind.); and Joseph E. Moody, Southern Coal Producers Association.

Moody told the Committee that "drastic curbs" were needed to prevent injury to the domestic coal industry from "dumping" of foreign oil in this country. Pickett said: "As foreign residual fuel oil has demonstrated a capacity to leap tariff barriers, coal's only recourse is to ask for relief through a quota". Both men favored enactment of a 10 percent restriction on oil imports.

Also opposed to the bill were Reps. Cleveland M. Bailey and Robert C. Byrd (both D. W.Va.); John P. Saylor (R Pa.) and Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.); Pat Jennings (D Va.) and Richard H. Poff (R Va.); and Mrs. Ernest W. Howard for the Women's Patriotic Conference.

Appearing for the bill was R.S. Hecht, International House, New Orleans, La.

Feb. 1 -- Textile and apparel industry spokesmen opposed the bill, arguing that imports of goods produced by cheap foreign labor had produced serious declines in their fields. Among the witnesses were Claudius T. Murchison, American Cotton Manufacturers Institute; Seymour E. Harris, Harvard professor appearing for six New England governors and the New England Textile Committee; Edwin Wilkinson, National Association of Wool Manufacturers; Steele L. Winterer, Carpet Institute; Irene Blunt, National Federation of Textiles; Joseph Opilla, Textile Workers (CIO); and Marx Lewis, United Hatters, Cap, and Millinery Workers (AFL).

Rep. Henderson Lanham (D Ga.) said: "Any further reduction in the tariff rates...would mean extinction of the textile industry". Reps. John J. Riley (D S.C.) and Robert Hale (R Maine) also opposed the bill.

LACE, WALLPAPER, CLOTHESPIN INTERESTS

Feb. 2 -- The danger of imports to their industries was stressed by spokesmen for lace, glove, underwear, wallpaper, pin and clothespin interests.

Opposition to aspects of HR 1 was voiced by Sen. Matthew M. Neely (D W. Va.) and Reps. Victor Wickersham (D Okla.), Ralph Harvey (R Ind.), Hubert B. Scudder (R Calif.) and T. James Tumulty (D N.J.).

Feb. 3 -- Further tariff protection was asked by members of the scissors, optical and electrical equipemnt, jewelry, silver, cigarette lighters, sewing machines, rubber footwear, wood fabrics, tungsten and manganese industries.

Feb. 4 -- Agricultural spokesmen said HR 1 would permit the President to ignore Section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which restricts imports that could undermine domestic price-support programs. Presenting this view were representatives of the National Milk Producers Federation, American Butter and National Cheese Institutes.

Further opposition to lower tariffs was voiced by cherry, nut and mushroom growers, cattle, sheep and goat raisers, and a spokesman for the Wine Institute. Reps. W. J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.), Henry Aldous Dixon (R Utah) and Edith Nourse Rogers (R Mass.) also opposed the bill.

Feb. 7 -- Requests for quota limits on residual oil imports came from Reps. Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.) and John E. Henderson (R Ohio) -- who also urged greater tariff protection for the glass and pottery industries. Rep. Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) asked for quotas on seafood imports and Rep. Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) wanted "safeguards necessary to protect American Industries essential to national security". Reps William A. Dawson (R Utah) and William G. Bray (R Ind.) also opposed HR 1.

Charles P. Taft, president, Committee for a National Trade Policy, and John J. Collins of the Independent Tanker Association endorsed the bill. Taft emphasized what he termed the need to encourage trade with Japan so that country would not "play economic ball" with Communist China.

Feb. 8 -- Beginning executive study of the bill the Committee received a report from the Tariff Commission, which said the provision affecting farm imports would empower the President to remove such curbs at his discretion. The commission noted that a section which would authorize him to cut by 50 percent tariffs on goods imported in negligible quantities had no time limit, whereas other provisions were limited to three years.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee Feb. 14 reported HR 1 with amendments (H Rept 50). The vote was 20-5.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Committee, the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1955 would authorize the President to:

Enter into trade agreements with foreign countries through June 30, 1958.

Negotiate on tariffs, import and export restrictions and customs.

Lower tariffs over a three-year period 15 percent below rates prevailing on July 1, 1955, but prohibit a cut of more than 5 percent in any one year.

Cut tariffs, through a reciprocal agreement, on goods imported to the U.S. in negligible quantities by 50 percent of Jan. 1, 1945 rates.

Reduce to 50 percent ad valorem any rates above that level.

Reduce 1945 rates by 50 percent in order to carry out a trade agreement with Japan.

Suspend trade concessions with any country that discriminated against U.S. commerce.

Send Congress an annual report on the operations of the program.

Retain in effect existing law dealing with "peril points" and escape clauses.

The Committee deleted from the bill proposed authority for the President unilaterally to cut rates on imports of "negligible quantities" although it would permit such action through a reciprocal agreement with another country. Also stricken was a provision objected to by Secretary of Agriculture Benson, who contended it might water down existing provisions protecting domestic agriculture from excessive farm imports. The Committee made mandatory, rather than permissive, a section calling for suspension of trade concessions if a country discriminated against U.S. imports.

A series of restrictive amendments calling for greater protection against imports of residual oil, chemical, electrical equipment, and other goods was voted down in Committee.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 17, by a roll-call vote of 193-192, adopted a closed rule (H Res 142) governing debate on HR 1. The resolution limited debate to two legislative days, prohibited amendments from the floor, and permitted one recommital motion following consideration of the bill in Committee of the Whole.

The rule was adopted after the House, by a roll-call vote of 191-193, rejected an amendment offered by Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) that would have permitted amendments from the floor and provided for five hours of debate.

Adoption of H Res 142, in effect, reversed a 178-207 roll call by which the House rejected a motion to shut off debate on the rule. The motion, offered by Howard W. Smith (D Va.), preceded the vote on Brown's amendment and was the first test of strength on the trade program. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.)

DEBATE -- Feb. 17 -- Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas), taking the floor following the defeat of Smith's motion -- "The House...has done a most unusual thing and under the circumstances a very dangerous thing" in voting against the closed rule. "Only once in the history of the House in 42 years in my memory has a bill of this kind...been considered except under a closed rule." Opening the bill to all amendments might bring opponents the amendments they wanted, but "they are also going to get amendments they seriously object to." Opponents could "cripple the bill just as much" by voting for a recommittal motion later.

Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "No greater authority (is given in HR 1) except the additional discretionary authority to the President...with respect to the 15 percent (tariff reduction permitted) over a period of three years, not to exceed 5 percent a year, and the other alternative provisions...In some instances...the President's authority actually would be eliminated. But all of the current law's safeguards...are not affected in any way by this bill."

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "We have never before, in previous extensions of the Reciprocal Trade Act, delegated authority whose scope was so completely unknown."

Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.) -- "I believe in the reciprocal method of making agreements. I am opposed to the kind of agreements which we have been making... There are more restrictions against free trade today... than there were back in 1934 when we started this so-called reciprocal trade-agreement program."

Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- "Last year we imported between $10 and $11 billion worth of goods and we exported $16 billion worth of goods. When you...import...products you are going to throw some people out of work, but it is likewise true that when you ship $16 billion worth of goods out of the country that gives more people work than the $10 or $11 billion worth that is brought into the country."

James C. Davis (D Ga.) -- HR 1 "should be amended to include safeguards and afford protection to certain of our industries which are threatened with great injury through the flooding of our markets with articles manufactured in foreign countries by cheap labor..."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Feb. 17 -- Brown (R Ohio) -- Permit amendments from the floor to HR 1, with debate limited to five hours. Roll call, 191-193.

BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

The House Feb. 18, by a roll-call vote of 295-110, passed HR 1 and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.)

The House adopted several committee amendments, then rejected, 199-206, a motion by Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) to recommit the bill to the Ways and Means Committee. Reed's motion would have required the Committee to report HR 1 back to the House with an amendment designed to strengthen the "escape clause" provision of the law. The amendment would have made "final and conclusive" Tariff Commission findings that imports were threatening domestic industry, and would have bound the President, unless he found national security was involved, to take preventive action.

Prior to voting, House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) read a letter from President Eisenhower urging passage of HR 1. In his letter to Martin, the President said "few programs will contribute more fundamentally to the long-term security of our country. This program will powerfully reinforce the military and economic strength of our own country and is of the greatest importance to the well-being of the free world...No American industry will be placed in jeopardy by the administration of this measure."

DEBATE -- Feb. 18 -- Martin -- "I believe, too, (with the President) that instead of impairing any of our industries it will stimulate trade to the end that we can have what we all seek -- a busy America and an American economy based on peace rather than war....President Eisenhower has no intention of destroying any industries in this country...he is honestly and genuinely interested in but one thing; that is, to build up this great country of ours."

Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) -- "He (the President) cannot be too much concerned about this matter... While my Democratic friends are pleading and bleeding for him, he is playing golf."

PRELUDE TO DEPRESSION

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Approval of the legislation would be "the hand engraved invitation...importing a depression into this country...There is nothing reciprocal about our trade program...it has been a program of give, give, and give some more to appease our so-called free world friends, and we have received little or nothing in return."

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- "The Republican Party is making a 'political sucker' of the President...(They) take his first recommendation, and try to not only wreck it but the welfare of our country as a whole."

Robert W. Kean (R N.J.) -- "We cannot afford to recommit this bill now. All the nations of the free world are following tensely to see whether the President is speaking for our country or only for himself when he speaks of the vital need for expanding international trade..."

Robert C. Byrd (D W. Va.) -- "If we can recommit HR 1, it will be brought out (from committee)...with adequate safeguards...for the protection of coal, chemical, glass...industries...."

Aime J. Forand (D R.I.) -- "There can be no disagreement that the passage of HR 1 will inevitably increase imports, with the heaviest burden falling on those industries already struggling to survive."

Albert P. Morano (R Conn.) -- "International trade provides the most effective way to improve our relations with other nations on a long-range basis. Expanded foreign trade is vital...it cannot be a one-way street."

James C. Fulton (R Pa.) -- "Nations such as Rome, Greece, Syria, and the other nations that rose up with a much higher standard of living than other nations, were cut down from the outside...We now should not turn our backs on...allies and friends in the free world, but should ask them to stand with us in prosperity in the free world as a whole, rather than have a tremendously prosperous America and allies who are on the breadline."

W. J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) -- "The earnest desire of these textbook idealists is to whittle away the constitutional power of the American Congress...This House should surrender no more of its power to the President, the Supreme Court, or any agency of the evermore centralized federal government."

Senate

After HR 1 was sent to the Senate, Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.) said Feb. 26 that the trade program did not endanger the southern textile industry, though it might "hasten the demise of uneconomical northeastern textile industries." Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) protested Feb. 28 against any tariff cut on textiles imported from Japan, and Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) said March 1: "I cannot go along with a trade policy that can create boomtowns in Japan and ghost towns in New England."

Sen. George W. Malone (R Nev.) delivered a lengthy Senate speech Feb. 28 attacking the reciprocal trade program. Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) March 1 called international trade "the most effective antidote for war." He proposed long-term credits to foreign nations to encourage production.

Sen. Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) filed in the Senate March 2 a proposed amendment to HR 1 that would impose limits on oil imports. It was co-sponsored by six other Democrats and 10 Republicans.

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- March 2-23 on HR 1.

TESTIMONY -- March 2 -- Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) read a statement from Secretary of State John Foster Dulles urging support of the bill as a "minimum program" providing "modest tariff-reducing authority."

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said his Department was working closely with industry on tariff matters and that he saw no threat that tariff cuts would jeopardize national defense. In answer to Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.), Weeks said he was opposed to stiffening the Tariff Commission's authority on escape clauses because the President should retain broad authority to overrule the Commission.

Assistant Security of Agriculture Earl L. Butz favored the bill as an aid to increased export of farm products. He added that it "provides desirable safeguards to agriculture."

March 3 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey urged that Congress put no "straightjackets" on the President's authority under the program. He opposed the suggestion of Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) that the Tariff Commission's power be increased. Humphrey said that under the bill there would be no "drastic changes" adversely affecting "sizeable groups of our citizens."

Asked by Frank Carlson (R Kan.) about amending the bill to limit oil imports, Humphrey said "it should be avoided if at all possible."

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell endorsed the bill. Wilson said he was confident the trade program would not destroy any domestic industry, and Mitchell said imports were responsible for "only a very small fraction of current unemployment."

FARMERS, CIO FOR BILL

March 4 -- Spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, National Farmers Union, National Council of American Importers, and the CIO endorsed the bill. The Farmers Union and CIO also supported a bill (S 751) to aid industries and communities suffering from the trade program.

March 7 -- Sen. Payne proposed a substitute to extend the Trade Agreements Act for two years and set up a commission of "experts" to study foreign trade on a specific commodity basis and recommend modifications of the program to Congress.

Opposition to HR 1 was voiced by O.R. Strackbein, Nation-Wide Committee on Export-Import Policy, and George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business.

Seeking protection for their industries were manufacturers of lace, clothespins, and clocks, hat and millinery workers, and the American Mining Congress. Rep. W. J. Bryan Dorn (D. S.C.) said Japanese imports would harm textile manufacturers.

March 8 -- Congress should take over from the President the authority to act on Tariff Commission recommendations, officials of the Synthetic Organic Chemical Manufacturers Association and Forstmann Woolen Co. urged. Other modifications of the President's authority were asked by spokesmen for luggage-lock and manufacturing chemists' groups.

President Gwilym A. Price of Westinghouse Electric Corp., speaking for 51 companies in the field, asked for an amendment setting higher tariffs on electrical and communications equipment. Other protective amendments were proposed by the National Lead and Zinc Committee and spokesmen for six dairy groups.

DAMAGE "EXAGGERATED"

March 9 -- Paul G. Hoffman, head of Studebaker-Packard Corp. and former foreign aid administrator, endorsed HR 1 and said, "the possible damage to American industry from foreign competition is grossly exaggerated."

Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) suggested nations receiving tariff concessions pay a prescribed percentage of the U.S. minimum wage.

Requests for quotas on oil imports came from Daniel T. Buckley, representing the bituminous coal industry, and officials of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the Order of Railway Conductors (Ind.) and the Anthracite Institute. The National Oil Jobbers Council opposed the quota amendment.

March 10 -- Officials of the Wool Manufacturers Association and the Wyoming Wool Growers Association opposed the entire reciprocal trade program.

Raymond S. Smethurst, representing optical manufacturers, proposed an amendment designed to preserve essential skills needed for defense. Other witnesses seeking protection for their industries represented Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., U.S. Potters Association, Vitrified China Association, and Shears, Scissors and Manicure Implements Association.

NEW ENGLAND WORRIED

March 11 -- Rhode Island Gov. Dennis J. Roberts (D) and Prof. Seymour Harris of Harvard University, who represented the Conference of New England Governors and the New England Textile Committee, said they were concerned with the bill's effect on the textile industry. Roberts, in addition, said his state's jewelry and rubber goods industries "have good reason to be worried" that a liberalized foreign trade program presented "a serious threat to their continued existence." Roberts suggested that unemployment in an area be made a criterion in findings as to injury which might result from reciprocal trade negotiations.

Eugene Holman of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and Sidney A. Swensrud of the Gulf Oil Corp. endorsed HR 1 and criticized a proposed amendment to limit foreign oil imports.

Representatives of the American Watch Association, the American Watch Manufacturers Association, the National Association of Photographic Manufacturers, the Philadelphia Committee for a National Trade Policy, and the U.S. Council of the International Chambers of Commerce supported HR 1.

A spokesman for the American Wine Institute urged the Tariff Commission findings be binding on the President. An American Tariff League official said HR 1 would "endanger American industries and employment."

March 14 -- Secretary of State Dulles urged enactment of HR 1 as a symbol of U.S. willingness to show "a decent regard" for nations whose destinies were "interlocked with our own."

OIL IMPORT QUOTA SOUGHT

March 15 -- Arguments favoring the limitation of foreign oil imports to 10 percent of the domestic output were heard from Sen. Price Daniel (D Texas), Oklahoma Gov. Raymond Gary (D), and the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Daniel said it was the independent producers who were being hurt by foreign competition. He said the major oil companies were opposed to any restrictions because they owned 90 percent of the foreign oil reserves in the free world.

March 16 -- Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) proposed giving the Tariff Commission the right to raise duties or impose import quotas. Miles P. Romney of the Utah Mining Association supported Watkins' view.

William L. Batt, formerly president of SKF Industries and vice chairman of the War Production Board during World War II, said facing "competition from the best the rest of the world can offer" was the best way for U.S. workers and managers to sharpen their skills. The Cheese Importers Association also supported HR 1.

Defeat of HR 1 was urged by John G. Lerch, representing 10 trade associations covering such products as toys, rubber footwear, and pottery. Provisions to protect their industries were requested by Norman Zukowsky of the International Handbag, Luggage, Belt, and Novelty Workers Union (AFL) and Gordon W. Sprague of the Western Condensing Co., a dairy products firm.

PROTECTION FOR TEXTILES

March 17 -- Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) wrote the Committee suggesting added safeguards for U.S. industries which might be threatened by imports.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) opposed any provisions which might hurt the textile industry. The House-passed bill "contains provisions which would do injustice not only to the textile industry but also to many other types of American enterprise," he added.

Spokesmen for the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, the Northern Textile Association, and the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute also argued against certain sections of the bill.

March 18 -- Charles P. Taft of the Committee for a National Trade Policy said the Committee had been subjected to "lies" and "misrepresentations" from "professional pessimists" representing industries seeking additional tariff protection. He urged approval of HR 1 without amendments.

Representatives of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and the Independent Oil Men's Association of New England opposed any move to limit imports of foreign oil. Support for HR 1 came from the Tobacco Association of the United States, the Mississippi Valley Association, and Smith, Kline, and French Laboratories, Philadelphia.

March 21 -- Russell B. Brown of the Independent Petroleum Association of America said HR 1 should be killed if an amendment limiting oil imports was not adopted.

Robert N. Frazer of the Committee of American Fluorspar Producers said his industry was "near complete collapse" due to imports. He advocated a temporary quota of 25 percent of American consumption on imports of the metal.

CONGRESSMEN TESTIFY

March 22 -- Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) urged adoption of an amendment which would require Congressional approval of each trade agreement. Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) supported a 10 percent quota on oil imports but said he backed the reciprocal trade program in principle. Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) wrote the Committee to oppose any amendment restricting oil imports.

Rep. Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) said he believed in the trade program's principle, but said some amendments would have to be adopted to prevent the destruction of American Industry. He supported proposals to bind the President to Tariff Commission findings and to provide quotas limiting imports to a certain percentage of U.S. consumption in defense industries.

Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) urged approval of the oil quota amendment and proposals to strengthen the "escape clause." He assailed the agreement signed by the U.S. March 21 in Geneva creating an Organization for Trade Cooperation, subject to Congressional approval.

March 23 -- Secretary of State Dulles said HR 1 did not carry any specific approval of the 1947 General Agreements on Tariff and Trade. He added that the March 21 OTC agreement was worked out under authority given the President under the Reciprocal Trade laws. He said that if any substantial number of amendments to HR 1 were adopted, the power of the President to handle trade matters properly "would very gravely" be impaired. Dulles' testimony concluded public hearings on the bill.

Following the conclusion of public hearings the Committee went into executive session on the bill.

BILL IN "DEEP TROUBLE"

On March 29 Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) said that HR 1 was "in deep trouble and...in more trouble every day." Several Senators announced on March 30 proposals to amend the bill.

Sens. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) and John O. Pastore (D R.I.) said they would make recommendations of the Tariff Commission binding on the President except in the interests of national defense. They also would tighten the "escape clause" provision, and -- in line with a March 29 suggestion by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- state that Congress neither approved nor disapproved the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.) said March 30 the Finance Committee probably would rewrite HR 1.

Explaining what he called a misconception about HR 1, Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) March 30 said the maximum tariff reduction of 5 percent a year for three years meant that a tariff duty of 20 percent could be reduced only "5 percent of 20 percent, or 1 percent...the 20 percent rate would be cut only to 19 percent, not 15 percent..."

AMENDMENTS APPROVED

ACTION -- On April 19 the Committee began marking up the bill. It rejected, by a vote of 7-8, an amendment offered by Eugene D. Milliken (R Colo.) that would have limited to two years, instead of three, extension of the reciprocal trade agreements program. Six Democrats and two Republicans opposed the amendment: Harry Flood Byrd (Va.), Walter F. George (Ga.), Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas), Alben W. Barkely (Ky.), George A. Smathers (Fla.), and Russell B. Long (La.), Democrats; and George W. Malone (Nev.) and Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), Republicans.

Supporting the amendment were GOP Sens. Edward Martin (Pa.), John J. Williams (Del.), Frank Carlson (Kan.), Wallace F. Bennett (Utah), and Millikin, and Democrats Robert S. Kerr (Okla.) and J. Allen Frear, Jr. (Del.). The first vote on the amendment was 7-7 tie, but Chairman Byrd telephoned Long, who cast the tie-breaking vote.

Malone, who opposed the Reciprocal Trade Act, said he voted against the amendment because "a two-year extension is just as bad as three." If the program were to be extended, he added, he preferred to see it come up for renewal in an election year. A three year extension would end the Act on July 1, 1958, about four months before Congressional election.

April 20 -- An amendment offered by George to change the effective date of the President's new power to cut tariffs 15 percent over the next three years from July 1, 1955, to Jan. 1, 1955, was adopted 10-1, with Malone casting the "nay" vote. George's amendment also struck from HR 1 the authority to cut rates 50 percent on goods imported in small quantities.

The George amendment would relieve certain industries, principally the textile industry, of the possibility of a "double jeopardy" tariff reduction as it would prohibit tariff cuts in addition to those which might be negotiated after Jan. 1 in the proposed trade agreement with Japan.

The Committee added a provision directing the Tariff Commission to report to Congress on the trade program and to make public immediately its recommendations to the President on "escape clause" cases.

GREATER PROTECTION VOTED

April 26 -- The Committee agreed to two amendments designed to afford greater protection for U.S. producers suffering from import competition. Chairman Byrd said one amendment, dealing with the volume of imports, had the approval of the Administration. The second, strengthening "escape clause" provisions in existing law, was not approved by the Administration.

As a substitute for amendments to limit imports of specific commodities, the Committee, by a 12-3 vote, agreed to an amendment sponsored by Byrd and Millikin that would:

Authorize the President, at his discretion, to limit imports of any product entering the United States in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security."

Provide for initial advice in such a case by the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization and, if the President agreed, a subsequent investigation.

The "escape clause" amendment, offered by Millikin and agreed to, 9-6, would:

Empower the Tariff Commission to recommend use of the "escape clause" if it found that imports "contributed materially" to a threat of serious injury to a domestic industry.

Permit a manufacturer to seek tariff relief if any of his operations were suffering seriously from import competition.

Voting for the amendment were Byrd, Millikin, Kerr, George, Frear, Martin, Williams, Flanders and Bennett. Against it were Johnson, Barkley, Long, Smathers, Carlson and Malone.

Finally, the bill was approved by a 13-2 vote, with Kerr and Malone dissenting. It was reported to the Senate (S Rept 232) April 28.

AMENDMENTS ATTACKED

On the Senate floor, April 25, Albert Gore (D Tenn.) defended the Eisenhower trade program and attacked the "unconscionable campaign of misrepresentation" carried out by the "tariff lobby" which, he said "has used the textile industry as its chosen instrument" to spread fear of "widespread business failure and unemployment" if HR 1 were enacted.

Gore criticized the "crippling" amendment sought by textile interests and adopted April 20 by the Finance Committee. He noted that it removed authority for the President to cut, by 50 percent, 1945 rates on goods imported in negligible quantities (617 items) or not imported at all (484 items). "It is in this field that there might be great opportunity to effectuate two-way trade without infliction of injury upon industry in the U.S.," Gore asserted.

He called on Mr. Eisenhower to exert stronger efforts on behalf of HR 1, saying that "when there is no effective leadership from the President, Senators and Representatives become prey to the special interests of their own constituencies." Joining in Gore's criticisms were Democrats James O. Eastland (Miss.), Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), Paul H. Douglas (Ill.), Barkley, and Long.

The President, at his April 27 press conference, termed "very fine" the Byrd-Millikin amendment dealing with imports but reserved comment on the other amendments adopted by the Finance Committee.

EISENHOWER SEES "VICTORY"

Speaking to some 250 members of the Committee for a National Trade Policy assembled in the White House garden April 28, Mr. Eisenhower thanked them for their support of his trade program and called Senate Committee approval of HR 1, a "tremendous victory."

Gore said April 30 that he and "a group" of Senators would try to overturn Finance Committee recommendations broadening the "escape clause" and knocking out authority to cut duties on goods imported in negligible quantities "if the President will stand by his position" as outlined in his foreign trade message Jan. 10.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said May 4 that HR 1, with Finance Committee amendments, was "satisfactory to the Administration" and "preserves the principle of reciprocal trade which the President has so ardently advocated in the past two years."

Gore did not take part in the Senate's three-day debate on the bill.

Floor Action

The Senate May 4 passed HR 1 by a 75-13 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 123.) All amendments advocated by the Finance Committee were agreed to by the Senate, plus a minor amendment clarifying the right of certain groups to appeal to the Tariff Commission.

Eleven amendments were rejected. Two attempts to delete provisions of the bill aimed at protecting domestic industries, and an amendment to permit Congress to veto individual trade agreements, were rejected by roll-call votes. An amendment to put quotas on oil imports was rejected by a standing vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 1 would:

Extend through June 30, 1958, the President's authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

Permit him to reduce tariff rates existing on Jan. 1, 1955 by 5 percent annually for three years, or reduce to 50 percent ad valorem existing rates above that figure.

Specify that, in a contemplated trade agreement with Japan, rates might be decreased 50 percent below the rates as of Jan. 1, 1945 despite expiration of the general authority on June 12, 1955.

Authorize the President, at his discretion, to limit imports of any product entering the U.S. in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security."

Provide for initial advice in such a case by the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization and, if the President agreed, a subsequent investigation.

Amend existing "peril point" and "escape clause" provisions so that the Tariff Commission could recommend action if any segment of a business enterprise, including producers of raw materials, was suffering seriously from import competition.

Amend the "escape clause" provision so that relief could be granted if imports "contributed materially" to a threat of serious injury to a domestic industry.

Require the Commission to make public its recommendations for action under the "escape clause" at the time it submitted such a report to the President.

Provide for annual reports to Congress by the President and the Commission on the operations of the trade agreement program.

Make more binding the President's existing authority to suspend concessions to a country that discriminated against U.S. commerce.

Declare that enactment of the bill would not indicate approval or disapproval of GATT.

"TOKEN OF GOOD WILL"

DEBATE -- May 2 -- A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Enactment of HR 1 would "enable the President...to ease some irritating spots in our international trade program," would be "a token of good will" to friends abroad, and would not seriously affect U.S. industry.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Through the reciprocal trade agreement program, "Congress is delegating a constitutional function solely entrusted to it."

May 3 -- John J. Sparkman (D Ala.), Stuart Symington (D Mo.), H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) spoke in favor of HR 1.

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Though a co-sponsor of the amendment to set oil import quotas, he supported the milder Committee amendment authorizing the President to limit imports "because I was assured by those in the Administration responsible for the...program that if such amendment were adopted...imports of petroleum and its products would be definitely restricted." The Committee's intent was that oil imports be limited "to the average daily imports of...1954."

SELL-OUT CHARGED

George W. Malone (R Nev.) -- HR 1 and GATT are "a sell-out of American workingmen and investors."

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- No trade agreement should take effect until approved by Congress.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- HR 1 is a "watered-down, namby-pamby bill" that "is largely symbolic, except in the case of Japan."

May 4 -- A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- On most manufactured products, there is consumer preference for the quality of U.S. goods but "a barrel of oil or a ton of zinc concentrates is the same the world over." Stronger protection than the Committee amendment on imports is needed to protect vital domestic industries.

Douglas -- "This bill is being put through on a tacit agreement between the Administration and the protectionists...The Administration can get the publicity...But the protectionists will get the bacon."

J. Glenn Beall (R Md.) -- Offered, and then withdrew, an amendment to make Tariff Commission findings in an "escape clause" case binding on the President.

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Defended the "escape clause" and pointed out that under its procedures the Administration acted to increase stockpile purchases of domestic lead and zinc.

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.), J.W. Fulbright (D Ark). -- The bill was "a watered-down version of a modest piece of legislation."

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- The bill "perpetuates machinery to make our government into a spoke in the wheel of world government."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

May 4 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Clarify the right of agricultural and other raw material producers to seek Tariff Commission action. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 4 -- Malone -- Delegate all trade agreement authority to the Tariff Commission, which would set rates so as to provide fair competition between domestic and foreign articles (a substitute for HR 1). Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Authorize a trade adjustment program to aid communities and businesses suffering from import competition. Voice.

Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) -- Set tariff rate on toy marbles at 34 percent ad valorem, based on the U.S. selling price. Voice.

Douglas -- Repeal "peril point" provision of existing law. Roll call, 9-82.

Neely -- Limit quarterly imports of petroleum to 10 percent of domestic demand in the similar quarter of the previous year; place the same limit on residual oil imports; permit the President to suspend such quotas if fuel supplies did not meet consumption. Standing.

O'Mahoney -- Require that no trade agreement take effect until Congress approved it by law. Voice.

Morse -- Provide that a trade agreement would not take effect if either house of Congress, within 90 days, voted to disapprove it. Roll call, 13-73.

Morse -- Require the President, in rejecting Tariff Commission recommendations for use of the "escape clause," to report his reasons to Congress; permit Congress to uphold the Commission's findings by concurrent resolution within 90 days; and require the President then to carry them out. Voice.

Douglas -- Delete provisions for immediate publication of Tariff Commission findings and others amending "peril point" and "escape clause" law. Roll call, 21-67.

Malone -- Limit extension of the reciprocal trade program to one year. Voice.

Malone -- Limit the program to trade agreements with countries of the Western Hemisphere. Voice.

A May 16 letter from Gerald D. Morgan, special counsel to the President, to Senate-House conferees on HR 1 said all Senate amendments except the Morse proposal were acceptable to the Administration.

Conference

REPORT -- The conferees June 9 filed a report (H Rept 745) on the reciprocal trade bill, recommending adoption of most of the changes added to the bill by the Senate.

Major compromises reached by the conferees:

Changed Senate language permitting use of the "escape clause" to read: when imports contributed "substantially toward causing or threatening" serious injury to domestic industry. The Senate language was "contributed materially to the serious injury or the threat of serious injury."

Dropped the Senate amendment sponsored by Wayne Morse (D Ore.) designed to aid domestic producers of raw materials in seeking "escape clause" protection.

Added to the definition of domestic industry a requirement that articles suffering from import competition must be produced "in commerical quantities," to qualify for relief.

House Action

The House June 14 agreed to the conference report by a 347-54 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 152.)

DEBATE -- Democratic conferees voiced regret that major Senate amendments to the House (and Administration) version of the bill had prevailed. Republican conferees said the Senate had greatly improved the bill.

Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- Senate conferees, "armed with a letter from the White House approving the Senate amendments, were not inclined to relent on their protectionist position.... The escape-clause amendment and the national-security amendment will open the door to pressure and abuse which will be difficult for the President to police and avoid."

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- "This bill is a decided step in the right direction, as (compared with) the bill we passed in the House, and which I voted against."

Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) -- Advocates of the Senate amendments believe "that no person can withstand the pressures that will be created by these amendments.... Every one of them is calculated to make information available to somebody who has an ax to grind; somebody who can get to the White House...to press a point of view."

Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.) -- The reciprocal trade program "has utterly collapsed.... The only way it could be saved...is to protect essential industries."

Senate Action

The Senate June 15 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The charge that the Senate amendments to HR 1 "crippled the reciprocal trade program...is not true." The conference report "offers the best approach" to foreign trade on a reciprocal basis while protecting "in reasonable fashion, the proper interests of American industry."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "The conference report marks a serious curtailment, if...not the virtual abandonment of the principles of reciprocal trade" advanced by Cordell Hull and supported "until now" by the Democratic party.

George W. Malone (R Nev.) and Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Attacked the Japanese trade agreement signed June 8 and called for rejection of the conference report.

President Eisenhower, in signing the bill (PL 86) June 21, said its enactment was an "important milestone in the development of our country's foreign economic policy." He again urged Congress to approve American entry into the OTC and said that, thus supplemented, the new trade act "can contribute significantly to economic growth and economic well being throughout the free world." He added that he was "particularly gratified that this measure was supported by overwhelming majorities in both political parties."

The State Department said Sept. 21 that the new authority to lower tariffs would be employed in January, 1956, at a Geneva conference of 25 non-Communist signatory nations to GATT.

Group Stands

Congressional buttonholes were worn thin by the time the Trade Agreements Extension Act became law. Much in evidence in the 1955 struggle were two major national groups organized in 1953 especially to influence tariff legislation -- the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy and the Committee for a National Trade Policy, Inc.

The Nation-Wide Committee, headed by O. R. Strackbein, an ex-Tariff Commission official, sought to reduce the President's authority and strengthen the power of the Tariff Commission in the trade field.

The Committee for a National Trade Policy, a pro-reciprocal trade group, was headed by Charles P. Taft, brother of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio), and served as a strategy-coordinating organization for other supporters of reciprocal trade. These included: the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., American Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organizations, International Chamber of Commerce, American Farm Bureau Federation, the League of Women Voters, the National Grange, the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc., the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the American Veterans Committee, and the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

An active, newly formed, pro-reciprocal trade group was the Committee on Foreign Trade Education. It was headed by Bernard A. Rittersporn, a public relations executive, and waged a vigorous campaign via press, radio and television.

OPPOSITION GROUPS

In the opposition line-up were the American Tariff League, National Milk Producers Federation, Tuna Research Foundation, Bicycle Institute of America, California Grape and Tree Fruit League, Industrial Fasteners Institute, and The Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, Inc., among others.

Another newly-formed organization, the Committee for a Constitutional Tariff, joined the protectionist side in 1955. Its organizer was Clarence L. Dale, an oil businessman, and it added a new twist in pressure-group goals. Instead of lobbying for legislation, the group pressed for a court test of the constitutionality of U.S. participation in GATT, and of the Trade Agreements Act. The Committee included bicycle, paint and glassware interests.

The pro and con reciprocal trade groups aligned themselves accordingly in the debate over GATT and OTC. The protectionists termed the organization "un-American...the illegitimate offspring of the State Department." The champions of GATT called it "the most comprehensive international agreement ever negotiated for the reduction of barriers to and hence for the expansion of world trade..."

DRIVE FOR OIL QUOTAS

The battle over oil imports was a big part of pressure group activities. The questions were, should Congress place sharp curbs on oil imports, and would such action be in the interest of national security and domestic consumers?

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Feb. 17 -- Brown (R Ohio) -- Permit amendments from the floor to HR 1, with debate limited to five hours. Roll call, 191-193.

BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

The House Feb. 18, by a roll-call vote of 295-110, passed HR 1 and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.)

The House adopted several committee amendments, then rejected, 199-206, a motion by Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) to recommit the bill to the Ways and Means Committee. Reed's motion would have required the Committee to report HR 1 back to the House with an amendment designed to strengthen the "escape clause" provision of the law. The amendment would have made "final and conclusive" Tariff Commission findings that imports were threatening domestic industry, and would have bound the President, unless he found national security was involved, to take preventive action.

Prior to voting, House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) read a letter from President Eisenhower urging passage of HR 1. In his letter to Martin, the President said "few programs will contribute more fundamentally to the long-term security of our country. This program will powerfully reinforce the military and economic strength of our own country and is of the greatest importance to the well-being of the free world...No American industry will be placed in jeopardy by the administration of this measure."

DEBATE -- Feb. 18 -- Martin -- "I believe, too, (with the President) that instead of impairing any of our industries it will stimulate trade to the end that we can have what we all seek -- a busy America and an American economy based on peace rather than war....President Eisenhower has no intention of destroying any industries in this country...he is honestly and genuinely interested in but one thing; that is, to build up this great country of ours."

Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) -- "He (the President) cannot be too much concerned about this matter... While my Democratic friends are pleading and bleeding for him, he is playing golf."

PRELUDE TO DEPRESSION

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Approval of the legislation would be "the hand engraved invitation...importing a depression into this country...There is nothing reciprocal about our trade program...it has been a program of give, give, and give some more to appease our so-called free world friends, and we have received little or nothing in return."

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- "The Republican Party is making a 'political sucker' of the President...(They) take his first recommendation, and try to not only wreck it but the welfare of our country as a whole."

Robert W. Kean (R N.J.) -- "We cannot afford to recommit this bill now. All the nations of the free world are following tensely to see whether the President is speaking for our country or only for himself when he speaks of the vital need for expanding international trade..."

Robert C. Byrd (D W. Va.) -- "If we can recommit HR 1, it will be brought out (from committee)...with adequate safeguards...for the protection of coal, chemical, glass...industries...."

Aime J. Forand (D R.I.) -- "There can be no disagreement that the passage of HR 1 will inevitably increase imports, with the heaviest burden falling on those industries already struggling to survive."

Albert P. Morano (R Conn.) -- "International trade provides the most effective way to improve our relations with other nations on a long-range basis. Expanded foreign trade is vital...it cannot be a one-way street."

James C. Fulton (R Pa.) -- "Nations such as Rome, Greece, Syria, and the other nations that rose up with a much higher standard of living than other nations, were cut down from the outside...We now should not turn our backs on...allies and friends in the free world, but should ask them to stand with us in prosperity in the free world as a whole, rather than have a tremendously prosperous America and allies who are on the breadline."

W. J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) -- "The earnest desire of these textbook idealists is to whittle away the constitutional power of the American Congress...This House should surrender no more of its power to the President, the Supreme Court, or any agency of the evermore centralized federal government."

Senate

After HR 1 was sent to the Senate, Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.) said Feb. 26 that the trade program did not endanger the southern textile industry, though it might "hasten the demise of uneconomical northeastern textile industries." Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) protested Feb. 28 against any tariff cut on textiles imported from Japan, and Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) said March 1: "I cannot go along with a trade policy that can create boomtowns in Japan and ghost towns in New England."

Sen. George W. Malone (R Nev.) delivered a lengthy Senate speech Feb. 28 attacking the reciprocal trade program. Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) March 1 called international trade "the most effective antidote for war." He proposed long-term credits to foreign nations to encourage production.

Sen. Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) filed in the Senate March 2 a proposed amendment to HR 1 that would impose limits on oil imports. It was co-sponsored by six other Democrats and 10 Republicans.

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- March 2-23 on HR 1.

TESTIMONY -- March 2 -- Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) read a statement from Secretary of State John Foster Dulles urging support of the bill as a "minimum program" providing "modest tariff-reducing authority."

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said his Department was working closely with industry on tariff matters and that he saw no threat that tariff cuts would jeopardize national defense. In answer to Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.), Weeks said he was opposed to stiffening the Tariff Commission's authority on escape clauses because the President should retain broad authority to overrule the Commission.

Assistant Security of Agriculture Earl L. Butz favored the bill as an aid to increased export of farm products. He added that it "provides desirable safeguards to agriculture."

March 3 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey urged that Congress put no "straightjackets" on the President's authority under the program. He opposed the suggestion of Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) that the Tariff Commission's power be increased. Humphrey said that under the bill there would be no "drastic changes" adversely affecting "sizeable groups of our citizens."

Asked by Frank Carlson (R Kan.) about amending the bill to limit oil imports, Humphrey said "it should be avoided if at all possible."

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell endorsed the bill. Wilson said he was confident the trade program would not destroy any domestic industry, and Mitchell said imports were responsible for "only a very small fraction of current unemployment."

FARMERS, CIO FOR BILL

March 4 -- Spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, National Farmers Union, National Council of American Importers, and the CIO endorsed the bill. The Farmers Union and CIO also supported a bill (S 751) to aid industries and communities suffering from the trade program.

March 7 -- Sen. Payne proposed a substitute to extend the Trade Agreements Act for two years and set up a commission of "experts" to study foreign trade on a specific commodity basis and recommend modifications of the program to Congress.

Opposition to HR 1 was voiced by O.R. Strackbein, Nation-Wide Committee on Export-Import Policy, and George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business.

Seeking protection for their industries were manufacturers of lace, clothespins, and clocks, hat and millinery workers, and the American Mining Congress. Rep. W. J. Bryan Dorn (D. S.C.) said Japanese imports would harm textile manufacturers.

March 8 -- Congress should take over from the President the authority to act on Tariff Commission recommendations, officials of the Synthetic Organic Chemical Manufacturers Association and Forstmann Woolen Co. urged. Other modifications of the President's authority were asked by spokesmen for luggage-lock and manufacturing chemists' groups.

President Gwilym A. Price of Westinghouse Electric Corp., speaking for 51 companies in the field, asked for an amendment setting higher tariffs on electrical and communications equipment. Other protective amendments were proposed by the National Lead and Zinc Committee and spokesmen for six dairy groups.

DAMAGE "EXAGGERATED"

March 9 -- Paul G. Hoffman, head of Studebaker-Packard Corp. and former foreign aid administrator, endorsed HR 1 and said, "the possible damage to American industry from foreign competition is grossly exaggerated."

Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) suggested nations receiving tariff concessions pay a prescribed percentage of the U.S. minimum wage.

Requests for quotas on oil imports came from Daniel T. Buckley, representing the bituminous coal industry, and officials of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the Order of Railway Conductors (Ind.) and the Anthracite Institute. The National Oil Jobbers Council opposed the quota amendment.

March 10 -- Officials of the Wool Manufacturers Association and the Wyoming Wool Growers Association opposed the entire reciprocal trade program.

Raymond S. Smethurst, representing optical manufacturers, proposed an amendment designed to preserve essential skills needed for defense. Other witnesses seeking protection for their industries represented Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., U.S. Potters Association, Vitrified China Association, and Shears, Scissors and Manicure Implements Association.

NEW ENGLAND WORRIED

March 11 -- Rhode Island Gov. Dennis J. Roberts (D) and Prof. Seymour Harris of Harvard University, who represented the Conference of New England Governors and the New England Textile Committee, said they were concerned with the bill's effect on the textile industry. Roberts, in addition, said his state's jewelry and rubber goods industries "have good reason to be worried" that a liberalized foreign trade program presented "a serious threat to their continued existence." Roberts suggested that unemployment in an area be made a criterion in findings as to injury which might result from reciprocal trade negotiations.

Eugene Holman of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and Sidney A. Swensrud of the Gulf Oil Corp. endorsed HR 1 and criticized a proposed amendment to limit foreign oil imports.

Representatives of the American Watch Association, the American Watch Manufacturers Association, the National Association of Photographic Manufacturers, the Philadelphia Committee for a National Trade Policy, and the U.S. Council of the International Chambers of Commerce supported HR 1.

A spokesman for the American Wine Institute urged the Tariff Commission findings be binding on the President. An American Tariff League official said HR 1 would "endanger American industries and employment."

March 14 -- Secretary of State Dulles urged enactment of HR 1 as a symbol of U.S. willingness to show "a decent regard" for nations whose destinies were "interlocked with our own."

OIL IMPORT QUOTA SOUGHT

March 15 -- Arguments favoring the limitation of foreign oil imports to 10 percent of the domestic output were heard from Sen. Price Daniel (D Texas), Oklahoma Gov. Raymond Gary (D), and the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Daniel said it was the independent producers who were being hurt by foreign competition. He said the major oil companies were opposed to any restrictions because they owned 90 percent of the foreign oil reserves in the free world.

March 16 -- Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) proposed giving the Tariff Commission the right to raise duties or impose import quotas. Miles P. Romney of the Utah Mining Association supported Watkins' view.

William L. Batt, formerly president of SKF Industries and vice chairman of the War Production Board during World War II, said facing "competition from the best the rest of the world can offer" was the best way for U.S. workers and managers to sharpen their skills. The Cheese Importers Association also supported HR 1.

Defeat of HR 1 was urged by John G. Lerch, representing 10 trade associations covering such products as toys, rubber footwear, and pottery. Provisions to protect their industries were requested by Norman Zukowsky of the International Handbag, Luggage, Belt, and Novelty Workers Union (AFL) and Gordon W. Sprague of the Western Condensing Co., a dairy products firm.

PROTECTION FOR TEXTILES

March 17 -- Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) wrote the Committee suggesting added safeguards for U.S. industries which might be threatened by imports.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) opposed any provisions which might hurt the textile industry. The House-passed bill "contains provisions which would do injustice not only to the textile industry but also to many other types of American enterprise," he added.

Spokesmen for the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, the Northern Textile Association, and the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute also argued against certain sections of the bill.

March 18 -- Charles P. Taft of the Committee for a National Trade Policy said the Committee had been subjected to "lies" and "misrepresentations" from "professional pessimists" representing industries seeking additional tariff protection. He urged approval of HR 1 without amendments.

Representatives of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and the Independent Oil Men's Association of New England opposed any move to limit imports of foreign oil. Support for HR 1 came from the Tobacco Association of the United States, the Mississippi Valley Association, and Smith, Kline, and French Laboratories, Philadelphia.

March 21 -- Russell B. Brown of the Independent Petroleum Association of America said HR 1 should be killed if an amendment limiting oil imports was not adopted.

Robert N. Frazer of the Committee of American Fluorspar Producers said his industry was "near complete collapse" due to imports. He advocated a temporary quota of 25 percent of American consumption on imports of the metal.

CONGRESSMEN TESTIFY

March 22 -- Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) urged adoption of an amendment which would require Congressional approval of each trade agreement. Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) supported a 10 percent quota on oil imports but said he backed the reciprocal trade program in principle. Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) wrote the Committee to oppose any amendment restricting oil imports.

Rep. Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) said he believed in the trade program's principle, but said some amendments would have to be adopted to prevent the destruction of American industry. He supported proposals to bind the President to Tariff Commission findings and to provide quotas limiting imports to a certain percentage of U.S. consumption in defense industries.

Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D W.Va.) urged approval of the oil quota amendment and proposals to strengthen the "escape clause." He assailed the agreement signed by the U.S. March 21 in Geneva creating an Organization for Trade Cooperation, subject to Congressional approval.

March 23 -- Secretary of State Dulles said HR 1 did not carry any specific approval of the 1947 General Agreements on Tariff and Trade. He added that the March 21 OTC agreement was worked out under authority given the President under the Reciprocal Trade laws. He said that if any substantial number of amendments to HR 1 were adopted, the power of the President to handle trade matters properly "would very gravely" be impaired. Dulles' testimony concluded public hearings on the bill.

Following the conclusion of public hearings the Committee went into executive session on the bill.

BILL IN "DEEP TROUBLE"

On March 29 Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) said that HR 1 was "in deep trouble and...in more trouble every day." Several Senators announced on March 30 proposals to amend the bill.

Sens. Styles Bridges (R N.H.) and John O. Pastore (D R.I.) said they would make recommendations of the Tariff Commission binding on the President except in the interests of national defense. They also would tighten the "escape clause" provision, and -- in line with a March 29 suggestion by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- state that Congress neither approved nor disapproved the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.) said March 30 the Finance Committee probably would rewrite HR 1.

Explaining what he called a misconception about HR 1, Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) March 30 said the maximum tariff reduction of 5 percent a year for three years meant that a tariff duty of 20 percent could be reduced only "5 percent of 20 percent, or 1 percent...the 20 percent rate would be cut only to 19 percent, not 15 percent..."

AMENDMENTS APPROVED

ACTION -- On April 19 the Committee began marking up the bill. It rejected, by a vote of 7-8, an amendment offered by Eugene D. Milliken (R Colo.) that would have limited to two years, instead of three, extension of the reciprocal trade agreements program. Six Democrats and two Republicans opposed the amendment: Harry Flood Byrd (Va.), Walter F. George (Ga.), Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas), Alben W. Barkely (Ky.), George A. Smathers (Fla.), and Russell B. Long (La.), Democrats; and George W. Malone (Nev.) and Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), Republicans.

Supporting the amendment were GOP Sens. Edward Martin (Pa.), John J. Williams (Del.), Frank Carlson (Kan.), Wallace F. Bennett (Utah), and Millikin, and Democrats Robert S. Kerr (Okla.) and J. Allen Frear, Jr. (Del.). The first vote on the amendment was 7-7 tie, but Chairman Byrd telephoned Long, who cast the tie-breaking vote.

Malone, who opposed the Reciprocal Trade Act, said he voted against the amendment because "a two-year extension is just as bad as three." If the program were to be extended, he added, he preferred to see it come up for renewal in an election year. A three year extension would end the Act on July 1, 1958, about four months before Congressional election.

April 20 -- An amendment offered by George to change the effective date of the President's new power to cut tariffs 15 percent over the next three years from July 1, 1955, to Jan. 1, 1955, was adopted 10-1, with Malone casting the "nay" vote. George's amendment also struck from HR 1 the authority to cut rates 50 percent on goods imported in small quantities.

The George amendment would relieve certain industries, principally the textile industry, of the possibility of a "double jeopardy" tariff reduction as it would prohibit tariff cuts in addition to those which might be negotiated after Jan. 1 in the proposed trade agreement with Japan.

The Committee added a provision directing the Tariff Commission to report to Congress on the trade program and to make public immediately its recommendations to the President on "escape clause" cases.

GREATER PROTECTION VOTED

April 26 -- The Committee agreed to two amendments designed to afford greater protection for U.S. producers suffering from import competition. Chairman Byrd said one amendment, dealing with the volume of imports, had the approval of the Administration. The second, strengthening "escape clause" provisions in existing law, was not approved by the Administration.

As a substitute for amendments to limit imports of specific commodities, the Committee, by a 12-3 vote, agreed to an amendment sponsored by Byrd and Millikin that would:

Authorize the President, at his discretion, to limit imports of any product entering the United States in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security."

Provide for initial advice in such a case by the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization and, if the President agreed, a subsequent investigation.

The "escape clause" amendment, offered by Millikin and agreed to, 9-6, would:

Empower the Tariff Commission to recommend use of the "escape clause" if it found that imports "contributed materially" to a threat of serious injury to a domestic industry.

Permit a manufacturer to seek tariff relief if any of his operations were suffering seriously from import competition.

Voting for the amendment were Byrd, Millikin, Kerr, George, Frear, Martin, Williams, Flanders and Bennett. Against it were Johnson, Barkley, Long, Smathers, Carlson and Malone.

Finally, the bill was approved by a 13-2 vote, with Kerr and Malone dissenting. It was reported to the Senate (S Rept 232) April 28.

AMENDMENTS ATTACKED

On the Senate floor, April 25, Albert Gore (D Tenn.) defended the Eisenhower trade program and attacked the "unconscionable campaign of misrepresentation" carried out by the "tariff lobby" which, he said "has used the textile industry as its chosen instrument" to spread fear of "widespread business failure and unemployment" if HR 1 were enacted.

Gore criticized the "crippling" amendment sought by textile interests and adopted April 20 by the Finance Committee. He noted that it removed authority for the President to cut, by 50 percent, 1945 rates on goods imported in negligible quantities (617 items) or not imported at all (484 items). "It is in this field that there might be great opportunity to effectuate two-way trade without infliction of injury upon industry in the U.S.," Gore asserted.

He called on Mr. Eisenhower to exert stronger efforts on behalf of HR 1, saying that "when there is no effective leadership from the President, Senators and Representatives become prey to the special interests of their own constituencies." Joining in Gore's criticisms were Democrats James O. Eastland (Miss.), Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), Paul H. Douglas (Ill.), Barkley, and Long.

The President, at his April 27 press conference, termed "very fine" the Byrd-Millikin amendment dealing with imports but reserved comment on the other amendments adopted by the Finance Committee.

EISENHOWER SEES "VICTORY"

Speaking to some 250 members of the Committee for a National Trade Policy assembled in the White House garden April 28, Mr. Eisenhower thanked them for their support of his trade program and called Senate Committee approval of HR 1, a "tremendous victory."

Gore said April 30 that he and "a group" of Senators would try to overturn Finance Committee recommendations broadening the "escape clause" and knocking out authority to cut duties on goods imported in negligible quantities "if the President will stand by his position" as outlined in his foreign trade message Jan. 10.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said May 4 that HR 1, with Finance Committee amendments, was "satisfactory to the Administration" and "preserves the principle of reciprocal trade which the President has so ardently advocated in the past two years."

Gore did not take part in the Senate's three-day debate on the bill.

Floor Action

The Senate May 4 passed HR 1 by a 75-13 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 123.) All amendments advocated by the Finance Committee were agreed to by the Senate, plus a minor amendment clarifying the right of certain groups to appeal to the Tariff Commission.

Eleven amendments were rejected. Two attempts to delete provisions of the bill aimed at protecting domestic industries, and an amendment to permit Congress to veto individual trade agreements, were rejected by roll-call votes. An amendment to put quotas on oil imports was rejected by a standing vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 1 would:

Extend through June 30, 1958, the President's authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

Permit him to reduce tariff rates existing on Jan. 1, 1955 by 5 percent annually for three years, or reduce to 50 percent ad valorem existing rates above that figure.

Specify that, in a contemplated trade agreement with Japan, rates might be decreased 50 percent below the rates as of Jan. 1, 1945 despite expiration of the general authority on June 12, 1955.

Authorize the President, at his discretion, to limit imports of any product entering the U.S. in such volume as to "threaten to impair the national security."

Provide for initial advice in such a case by the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization and, if the President agreed, a subsequent investigation.

Amend existing "peril point" and "escape clause" provisions so that the Tariff Commission could recommend action if any segment of a business enterprise, including producers of raw materials, was suffering seriously from import competition.

Amend the "escape clause" provision so that relief could be granted if imports "contributed materially" to a threat of serious injury to a domestic industry.

Require the Commission to make public its recommendations for action under the "escape clause" at the time it submitted such a report to the President.

Provide for annual reports to Congress by the President and the Commission on the operations of the trade agreement program.

Make more binding the President's existing authority to suspend concessions to a country that discriminated against U.S. commerce.

Declare that enactment of the bill would not indicate approval or disapproval of GATT.

"TOKEN OF GOOD WILL"

DEBATE -- May 2 -- A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Enactment of HR 1 would "enable the President...to ease some irritating spots in our international trade program," would be "a token of good will" to friends abroad, and would not seriously affect U.S. industry.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Through the reciprocal trade agreement program, "Congress is delegating a constitutional function solely entrusted to it."

May 3 -- John J. Sparkman (D Ala.), Stuart Symington (D Mo.), H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) spoke in favor of HR 1.

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Though a co-sponsor of the amendment to set oil import quotas, he supported the milder Committee amendment authorizing the President to limit imports "because I was assured by those in the Administration responsible for the...program that if such amendment were adopted...imports of petroleum and its products would be definitely restricted." The Committee's intent was that oil imports be limited "to the average daily imports of...1954."

SELL-OUT CHARGED

George W. Malone (R Nev.) -- HR 1 and GATT are "a sell-out of American workingmen and investors."

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- No trade agreement should take effect until approved by Congress.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- HR 1 is a "watered-down, namby-pamby bill" that "is largely symbolic, except in the case of Japan."

May 4 -- A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- On most manufactured products, there is consumer preference for the quality of U.S. goods but "a barrel of oil or a ton of zinc concentrates is the same the world over." Stronger protection than the Committee amendment on imports is needed to protect vital domestic industries.

Douglas -- "This bill is being put through on a tacit agreement between the Administration and the protectionists...The Administration can get the publicity...But the protectionists will get the bacon."

J. Glenn Beall (R Md.) -- Offered, and then withdrew, an amendment to make Tariff Commission findings in an "escape clause" case binding on the President.

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Defended the "escape clause" and pointed out that under its procedures the Administration acted to increase stockpile purchases of domestic lead and zinc.

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.), J.W. Fulbright (D Ark). -- The bill was "a watered-down version of a modest piece of legislation."

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- The bill "perpetuates machinery to make our government into a spoke in the wheel of world government."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

May 4 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Clarify the right of agricultural and other raw material producers to seek Tariff Commission action. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 4 -- Malone -- Delegate all trade agreement authority to the Tariff Commission, which would set rates so as to provide fair competition between domestic and foreign articles (a substitute for HR 1). Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Authorize a trade adjustment program to aid communities and businesses suffering from import competition. Voice.

Matthew M. Neely (D W.Va.) -- Set tariff rate on toy marbles at 34 percent ad valorem, based on the U.S. selling price. Voice.

Douglas -- Repeal "peril point" provision of existing law. Roll call, 9-82.

Neely -- Limit quarterly imports of petroleum to 10 percent of domestic demand in the similar quarter of the previous year; place the same limit on residual oil imports; permit the President to suspend such quotas if fuel supplies did not meet consumption. Standing.

O'Mahoney -- Require that no trade agreement take effect until Congress approved it by law. Voice.

Morse -- Provide that a trade agreement would not take effect if either house of Congress, within 90 days, voted to disapprove it. Roll call, 13-73.

Morse -- Require the President, in rejecting Tariff Commission recommendations for use of the "escape clause," to report his reasons to Congress; permit Congress to uphold the Commission's findings by concurrent resolution within 90 days; and require the President then to carry them out. Voice.

Douglas -- Delete provisions for immediate publication of Tariff Commission findings and others amending "peril point" and "escape clause" law. Roll call, 21-67.

Malone -- Limit extension of the reciprocal trade program to one year. Voice.

Malone -- Limit the program to trade agreements with countries of the Western Hemisphere. Voice.

A May 16 letter from Gerald D. Morgan, special counsel to the President, to Senate-House conferees on HR 1 said all Senate amendments except the Morse proposal were acceptable to the Administration.

Conference

REPORT -- The conferees June 9 filed a report (H Rept 745) on the reciprocal trade bill, recommending adoption of most of the changes added to the bill by the Senate.

Major compromises reached by the conferees:

Changed Senate language permitting use of the "escape clause" to read: when imports contributed "substantially toward causing or threatening" serious injury to domestic industry. The Senate language was "contributed materially to the serious injury or the threat of serious injury."

Dropped the Senate amendment sponsored by Wayne Morse (D Ore.) designed to aid domestic producers of raw materials in seeking "escape clause" protection.

Added to the definition of domestic industry a requirement that articles suffering from import competition must be produced "in commerical quantities," to qualify for relief.

House Action

The House June 14 agreed to the conference report by a 347-54 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 152.)

DEBATE -- Democratic conferees voiced regret that major Senate amendments to the House (and Administration) version of the bill had prevailed. Republican conferees said the Senate had greatly improved the bill.

Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- Senate conferees, "armed with a letter from the White House approving the Senate amendments, were not inclined to relent on their protectionist position.... The escape-clause amendment and the national-security amendment will open the door to pressure and abuse which will be difficult for the President to police and avoid."

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- "This bill is a decided step in the right direction, as (compared with) the bill we passed in the House, and which I voted against."

Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) -- Advocates of the Senate amendments believe "that no person can withstand the pressures that will be created by these amendments.... Every one of them is calculated to make information available to somebody who has an ax to grind; somebody who can get to the White House...to press a point of view."

Richard M. Simpson (R Pa.) -- The reciprocal trade program "has utterly collapsed.... The only way it could be saved...is to protect essential industries."

Senate Action

The Senate June 15 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The charge that the Senate amendments to HR 1 "crippled the reciprocal trade program...is not true." The conference report "offers the best approach" to foreign trade on a reciprocal basis while protecting "in reasonable fashion, the proper interests of American industry."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- "The conference report marks a serious curtailment, if...not the virtual abandonment of the principles of reciprocal trade" advanced by Cordell Hull and supported "until now" by the Democratic party.

George W. Malone (R Nev.) and Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- Attacked the Japanese trade agreement signed June 8 and called for rejection of the conference report.

President Eisenhower, in signing the bill (PL 86) June 21, said its enactment was an "important milestone in the development of our country's foreign economic policy." He again urged Congress to approve American entry into the OTC and said that, thus supplemented, the new trade act "can contribute significantly to economic growth and economic well being throughout the free world." He added that he was "particularly gratified that this measure was supported by overwhelming majorities in both political parties."

The State Department said Sept. 21 that the new authority to lower tariffs would be employed in January, 1956, at a Geneva conference of 25 non-Communist signatory nations to GATT.

Group Stands

Congressional buttonholes were worn thin by the time the Trade Agreements Extension Act became law. Much in evidence in the 1955 struggle were two major national groups organized in 1953 especially to influence tariff legislation -- the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy and the Committee for a National Trade Policy, Inc.

The Nation-Wide Committee, headed by O.R. Strackbein, an ex-Tariff Commission official, sought to reduce the President's authority and strengthen the power of the Tariff Commission in the trade field.

The Committee for a National Trade Policy, a pro-reciprocal trade group, was headed by Charles P. Taft, brother of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio), and served as a strategy-coordinating organization for other supporters of reciprocal trade. These included: the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., American Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organizations, International Chamber of Commerce, American Farm Bureau Federation, the League of Women Voters, the National Grange, the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc., the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the American Veterans Committee, and the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

An active, newly formed, pro-reciprocal trade group was the Committee on Foreign Trade Education. It was headed by Bernard A. Rittersporn, a public relations executive, and waged a vigorous campaign via press, radio and television.

OPPOSITION GROUPS

In the opposition line-up were the American Tariff League, National Milk Producers Federation, Tuna Research Foundation, Bicycle Institute of America, California Grape and Tree Fruit League, Industrial Fasteners Institute, and The Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, Inc., among others.

Another newly-formed organization, the Committee for a Constitutional Tariff, joined the protectionist side in 1955. Its organizer was Clarence L. Dale, an oil businessman, and it added a new twist in pressure-group goals. Instead of lobbying for legislation, the group pressed for a court test of the constitutionality of U.S. participation in GATT, and of the Trade Agreements Act. The Committee included bicycle, paint and glassware interests.

The pro and con reciprocal trade groups aligned themselves accordingly in the debate over GATT and OTC. The protectionists termed the organization "un-American...the illegitimate offspring of the State Department." The champions of GATT called it "the most comprehensive international agreement ever negotiated for the reduction of barriers to and hence for the expansion of world trade..."

DRIVE FOR OIL QUOTAS

The battle over oil imports was a big part of pressure group activities. The questions were, should Congress place sharp curbs on oil imports, and would such action be in the interest of national security and domestic consumers?

Focus of attention was Sen. Neely's proposed amendment to limit oil imports to 10 percent of domestic demand. The amendment, defeated by an unrecorded standing vote, was pushed by oil producers, coal operators, mine workers, coal-carrying railroads, and railroad labor. They said oil imports represented an uncertain source of fuel in times of national emergency and caused serious injury to domestic industry, throwing thousands out of work.

The drive to limit imports was spearheaded by the Independent Petroleum Association of America and the Foreign Oil Policy Committee. IPAA represented 13,000 independent oil and gas companies and operators; 21 associations cooperated with the group. The Foreign Oil Policy Committee included coal companies, such as Carbon Fuel Co. and Sycamore Co., both of West Virginia. Among its members were the New York Central System, United Mine Workers and the railroad brotherhoods.

Countering this drive were six top oil-importing companies -- Standard Oil Co. (N.J.), Standard Oil Co. of California, Gulf Oil Co., Shell Oil Co., Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., and the Texas Co. They held that enactment of an oil quota would impair U.S. prestige and leadership, and work against efforts to reduce the need for dollar aid. Their viewpoint was shared by the Committee for a National Trade Policy and the National Oil Jobbers Council.

The oil companies were told Oct. 31 by Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization to cut their imports from all countries except Canada and Venezuela by 7 percent or face the threat of government curbs.

NEW TRADE AGREEMENTS

The government granted substantial tariff concessions to Japan on June 9, 1955, and these were followed by lesser concessions the next day to Switzerland, Canada, and Belgium. The reductions, worked out at the Geneva conference on GATT, lowered existing tariff rates on about $131 million worth of imports from Japan. In return, Japan reduced or continued at the same level its tariff rates on almost 50 percent of its imports from the U.S., totaling nearly $400 million.

The agreement with Switzerland reduced some $8,100,000 worth of annual U.S. imports an average of 44 percent. It was designed to mollify the Swiss for a 50 percent increase in 1954 in watch tariffs. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 522.)

Reaction to the Japanese agreement included some Congressional calls for relaxing trade restrictions with Red China. Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) June 11 said there would be "sharp and destructive competition" between the U.S. and Japan unless Japan was "allowed to trade in her ancient and natural markets" on the Chinese mainland.

Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) June 10 denounced the agreement as part of "a cleverly conceived sell-out" of the U.S. textile industry to the Japanese.

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) said the expanded trade opportunities for Japan would give her "a concrete basis for continuing...(her) alignment with the free world." He added that "it might be well" to consider relaxing trade restrictions between Japan and Red China.

The American Cotton Manufacturers Institute June 10 said reductions between the U.S. and Japan were "a staggering blow both to the cotton textile industry and to the cotton growers" of this country. The Institute added: "It is incredible that the State Department could commit this ravishment on one of the nation's greatest industries, or that the people of the South and New England, where most mills are centered, can tolerate this action."

BICYCLE TARIFF RAISED

Lobby groups had another opportunity to "vocalize" when President Eisenhower Aug. 19 ordered an immediate 50 percent tariff increase on imported bicycles. The President concurred in Tariff Commission "escape clause" findings that the domestic bicycle industry had "suffered serious injury...from increased imports resulting in part from tariff concessions."

The Bicycle Institute of America had said April 6 that foreign bicycles "control 55 percent of the American market" and that the "days of the American (bicycle) manufacturers were numbered unless tariff relief is forthcoming."

However, lobbies on both sides of the foreign trade fence were unhappy over the President's action. Groups favoring freer international trade attacked the decision on grounds it would lead to higher bicycle prices for U.S. consumers, while handing a new "psychological rebuff" to nations friendly to the U.S. Protectionist spokesmen termed the tariff boost "too long delayed" and "too inadequate" to lessen an "unfair competitive advantage" held by foreign producers in the U.S. bicycle market.

Officials of the Committee For a National Trade Policy Aug. 23 said there was "no good reason" for the boost, and registered a "vigorous protest." They asserted that a prior Tariff Commission report on bicycles "did not establish evidence of injury to domestic industry."

However, spokesmen for the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy Aug. 29 accused the President of "dragging his feet" on the matter. They said the decision added up to "doing as little as possible" to provide "needed assistance" to U.S. bike producers.

Among other freer-trade lobbies who said they were disappointed by the President's action were the American Farm Bureau Federation, CIO, National Farmers Union, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., Cooperative League of the U.S., and the Friends Committee on National Legislation.

The American Tariff League termed the bike tariff hike "a faltering step toward more adequate protection."

BUY-AMERICAN DIRECTIVE

Still another facet of the foreign trade program created trouble in 1955. It was the Buy America Act, passed in 1933 to give preference to American bidders for federal business. It did not set the amount of preference American producers were to enjoy, but in practice foreign bidders had to submit prices 25 percent or more below American quotations to get orders.

In December, 1954, President Eisenhower ordered that, except under special circumstances, business should go to foreign suppliers in instances where their bids were 6 to 10 percent below those of American competitors. Domestic bidders, however, would be given preference even if their bids were higher than the new standards, if their production would be located in areas with high unemployment.

In February, 1955, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson chose the 6 percent figure as the price differential. Then, in August, he directed the Army to reject British bids to supply generators for the Chief Joseph Dam in the Columbia River basin at $964,033 less than the lowest domestic bids. The Westinghouse Electric Corp. and the Pennsylvania Transformer Co. won the awards, Wilson said, because they had plants in the Pittsburgh area and that section had "substantial unemployment."

The British Embassy made diplomatic representations to the State Department soon after the action and expressed British concern over the rejection -- the third one for English Electric Co. on bids for equipment for the dam. The firm also had lost out on a bid to supply transformers, and in 1954 was turned down on its bid for hydroelectric generators.

In September, Defense Mobilizer Flemming announced formation of a special government committee to study "Buy American" policies. The Committee was composed of representatives of the State, Commerce, Defense and Interior Departments, the Small Business Administration, and the General Services Administration. The Committee's study was being pushed, Flemming said, so a policy could be drafted prior to U.S. purchase of $65 million worth of machine tools for defense mobilization.

MUTUAL SECURITY ACT

S 2090 -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 383) May 27, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 59-18 roll-call vote June 2. (See p. 127.)
- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 912) June 24.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 273-128 roll-call vote June 30. (See p. 156.)
- Conference Report (H Rept 1071) agreed to by the Senate July 7, by voice vote; by the House July 7 by a 262-120 roll-call vote. (See p. 158.)

P.L. 138 -- Signed into law July 8.

The Mutual Security Act of 1955 authorized appropriations of $3,285,800,000 for foreign aid. Most of the authorizations were for fiscal 1956.

The major share of the money was earmarked for military assistance to non-communist nations. Asia was the principal beneficiary of funds for non-military aid.

The mutual security appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 7224 -- PL 208) granted $2,703,341,750. (See pp. 235ff of this volume).

PROVISIONS -- The Mutual Security Act of 1955 authorized the following funds:

Military assistance	$1,133,000,000
Direct forces support	317,200,000
Defense support	1,022,300,000
Development assistance	182,000,000
Technical cooperation	172,000,000
Other programs	459,300,000
TOTAL	$3,285,800,000

MILITARY ASSISTANCE

The military assistance funds were not earmarked for specific countries nor projects because, said H Rept 912, "detailed tentative materiel programs...(have) proved to be unrealistic because changes in the international situation involving new and different military requirements...have required major revisions."

Restrictions in regard to procuring military equipment outside the United States were lifted to give the program more flexibility.

The requirement that only nations which had ratified the European Defense Community treaty could receive military assistance was killed since EDC had been supplanted.

The deadline for completing the military assistance program to Japan was extended one year to June 30, 1956.

DIRECT FORCES SUPPORT

Direct forces support -- supplies for military forces of friendly nations -- would be divided this way:

Europe (Yugoslavia), 1.3 percent of the total or $4 million.

Near East and Africa (Iran, Turkey), 8.7 percent or $27.5 million.

Asia (Pakistan, Formosa, Korea, Philippines, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam), 90 percent or $285.7 million.

The President was authorized to consolidate direct forces funds with military assistance money if he wished.

DEFENSE SUPPORT

The Act provided that nations which expanded their defense facilities beyond their normal needs, (such as Spain, which contained air bases used by the U.S.) were entitled to defense support funds.

The Act authorized these allocations:

Europe (excluding Greece, Turkey), $92 million.

Near East (including Greece, Turkey), $102.5 million.

Asia (Pakistan, Formosa, Korea, Philippines, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam), $827.8 million.

The Act specified that, subject to satisfactory negotiation and agreement, defense support for Greece in fiscal 1956 should not be less than that in fiscal 1955.

DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE

For development assistance the measure authorized;

Near East and Africa, 40.1 per cent or $73,000,000,

Asia, 39 percent or $71,000,000 (India, $70 million; Nepal, $1 million).

American Republics, the remaining 20.9 percent, or $38 million (Bolivia, $20 million; Guatemala, $15 million; Haiti, $3 million).

The Act eliminated a previous requirement that at least 30 percent of the development assistance be on a loan basis.

TECHNICAL COOPERATION

Of the $172 million authorized for "Point Four" technical assistance programs, $146.5 million was earmarked for bilateral technical assistance, $24 million for expanded United Nations programs, and $1.5 million for Organization of American States programs.

About 62 percent of U. S. assistance in bilateral technical cooperation was earmarked for agriculture, health, sanitation, and educational projects.

OTHER PROGRAMS

The Act specified that at least $300 million of the money appropriated should be used in fiscal 1956 to sell U.S. surplus agricultural commodities abroad.

The Act did not authorize new money for either the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration nor North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters on grounds the 1954 law covered them.

Other authorizations:

United Nations Refugee Fund, $1.4 million.

Escapee program, $6 million.

United Nations Children's Fund, $14.5 million.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees, $65 million.

Shipment of goods for non-profit relief agencies and for transport of agricultural surpluses, $15 million.

Administrative expenses for carrying out provisions of the Act, $34.7 million for fiscal 1955; $35,225,000 for fiscal 1956.

President's Fund for Asian Development, $200 million to be available until June 30, 1958, with at least 50 percent of the amount given out on a loan basis and not more than 25 percent of the total going to any one nation.

The Act stipulated that the U. S. share of operating the World Health Organization after 1958 could not be more than one-third of the total assessment.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

The Mutual Security Act of 1955 also:

Set $200 million as the maximum amount of unexpended balances which could be carried into fiscal 1956.

Repealed the requirement that half of the goods bought with funds made available by the Act and traveling between foreign countries must be carried in U. S. ships.

Permitted aid dollars to be used to buy marine insurance to cover commodities to be shipped out of the U. S.

Stated it was the sense of Congress that:

"Those nations that have been assisted in their recovery should, in the future, share with the United States to a greater extent the financial burden of providing aid to those countries which are still in need of assistance of the type provided under this Act.

"Assistance under this Act shall be administered so as to assist other peoples in their efforts to achieve self-government or independence under circumstances which will enable them to assume an equal station among the free nations of the world and to fulfill their responsibilities for self-government or independence.

"The Communist regime in China has not demonstrated its willingness to fulfill the obligations contained in the Charter of the United Nations and should not be recognized to represent China in the United Nations."

The Mutual Security Act of 1955 continued United States' efforts to strengthen countries in the free world through economic aid.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the foreign aid program already had proved its worth. The mutual security program was "intimately related" to U. S. foreign policy, its continuance was essential to free world security, the Committee said.

After mentioning the Communist threat to the free world, the Committee said: "The increasing imbalance in world economic conditions is in itself disadvantageous to the United States. This imbalance results from the fact the American economy is growing at a rate faster than that of most of the free world. This growth cannot be sustained in isolation. The American economy is too dependent upon the rest of the world, both as a market and as a source of raw materials, to continue to expand at a rate far in excess of that of half the world."

Congress had passed other legislation designed to destroy economic "imbalance," including:

Export-Import Bank -- Exec Order 6581. Feb. 2, 1934. Acts of Congress followed.

Lend-Lease -- P L 11, 77th Congress, March 11, 1941.

Mutual Security -- P L 165, 82nd Congress, Oct. 10, 1951.

Since 1948, emphasis in overseas aid had shifted in Europe -- from economic to military assistance. Military aid had been paramount in Asia until 1955 legislation when it shifted to economic assistance.

President Eisenhower Jan. 17, 1955, in his budget message, requested an extension of the Mutual Security Act to provide $3.5 billion for fiscal 1956.

Point Four Study

An appraisal of the technical assistance phase of the foreign aid program was ordered by S. Res 214, adopted July 7, 1954. A bipartisan committee of six Senators was directed to make a "full and complete study of technical assistance and related programs."

On Feb. 17, 1955, a Senate Foreign Relations special subcommittee began hearings on the technical assistance program. The hearings, which concluded March 10, resulted in a March 11 staff report which said serious problems would confront the technical aid program until "a consistent concept...of its role in foreign policy" was developed.

The report said the technical assistance program "has been scattered among various executive agencies with minimum coordination." It added that "the program had not yet found its level and place in the government."

Subcommittee Chairman Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) said the report did not necessarily reflect the Subcommittee view, but he added that "repeated changes" in the organizational structure of technical assistance must stop if the program was to be a stable part of U.S. policy.

SUBCOMMITTEE HEARINGS

Testimony about the technical aid program:

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 18 -- Witnesses told of their agencies' part in technical assistance program. Marshall Smith, acting Assistant Secretary for international affairs, Department of Commerce, said "many" of the projects "have often been hastily drawn up." He said "temporary agencies...inevitably do not possess the experience...(of) permanent agencies" in operating the programs.

Feb. 21 -- Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen said he would "cordially welcome" continuation of the technical assistance program but "would not support" any move to have the entire U.S. technical program handled through the United Nations.

Feb. 24 -- Charles P. Taft, chairman of the Foreign Operations Administration advisory committee on foreign aid, said technical assistance programs might well be handled directly by the Department of State. Chairman Mansfield said return of the program to the State Department would provide needed continuity. Another witness, Norman D. Palmer of the University of Pennsylvania, said the program's return to the State Department would create the "danger" that it would be "buried in the hierarchy of the Department."

ORGANIZATION VIEWS

March 2 -- John A. Baker of the National Farmers Union said Communism eventually might collapse because of farmers' resistance to collective farming. He urged "a special study" of his complaint "that agricultural land reform has never been given the important place it deserves in our foreign policy."

John C. Lynn of the American Farm Bureau Federation said the Federation believed technical assistance should be a program of "know how and show how -- not a further expansion of foreign economic aid."

Wallace J. Campbell, Co-operative League of the U.S.A., urged increased financial support for both U.S. and UN technical assistance programs.

Robert F. Loree, National Foreign Trade Council, was "strongly opposed to the diversion of public funds provided for technical assistance to the direct promotion of industrial development of underdeveloped countries."

March 3 -- Henry Ford, II, Ford Motor Co. president, generally endorsed the technical aid programs of both the U.S. and the UN.

James T. Duce, president, Arabian-American Oil Co., said assistance should not be regarded as "a quick cure" but "must be a long-term project, for its effectiveness grows only through the years."

March 4 -- An expanded program of aid was urged by Michael W. Straight of Americans for Democratic Action, E. Raymond Wilson of the Friends Committee on National Legislation, Bernard Weitzer of the Jewish War Veterans, and Philip M. Klutznick of B'nai B'rith.

Straight suggested some means be found by which the U.S. could appropriate funds for the United Nations program on a three- to five-year basis. Wilson favored expansion of both the U.S. and UN programs.

Weitzer said "a doubling of current appropriations and activities...and those conducted by the UN can bring us closer to...avoiding hot wars."

President's Message

President Eisenhower outlined his $3.5 billion foreign aid program in a message to Congress April 20. He said it reflected the fact that "immediate threats to world security and stability are now centered in Asia" rather than in Europe.

Without specifying exact figures, the President said "the preponderance of funds requested" would be used in "the vast arc of free Asia, which extends from the Republic of Korea and Japan to the Middle East." Other nations whose needs he singled out were Spain, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey, Iran, Guatemala, and Bolivia, as well as the City of Berlin.

He said technical cooperation programs (Point Four) should be intensified in Latin America; Africa should receive aid; and the U.S. should help "both sides" in the Arab-Israel controversy in their economic and pacific efforts. Original Marshall Plan countries, he said, no longer needed economic aid.

The breakdown of funds which the President asked Congress to authorize in the Mutual Security Act of 1955:

Military Aid and Direct Forces Support	$1,717,200,000
Defense Support (non-military items)	1,000,300,000
Economic Aid	712,500,000
Contingency Fund	100,000,000
TOTAL	$3,530,000,000

The largest component of economic aid would be a new President's Fund for Asian Economic Development, for which $200 million would be authorized for spending "over a period of years" through loans and grants. He asked Congress to establish "broad rules" for the Fund and grant flexibility in its use.

Economic aid would be divided into these programs:

Technical Cooperation	$172,000,000
Special Programs	175,500,000
Development Assistance	165,000,000
President's Fund	200,000,000
TOTAL	$712,500,000

The President did not break down proposed allotments of defense and military aid funds, though he said "substantial" parts would go for defense of Formosa and Korea. He again asked Congress to permit funds to be transferred from "one geographic area or purpose, to another," in order to "overcome new dangers, or to capitalize upon favorable developments."

Mr. Eisenhower also asked continued support of the United Nations' technical assistance program and Children's Fund, as well as refugee programs carried on by the U.S., UN, voluntary organizations, and the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration.

NEW AGENCY ESTABLISHED

The President repeated his intention of transferring most functions of the expiring Foreign Operations Administration to the State Department and some "military aspects" to the Defense Department. He asked Congress to authorize "broad authority to revise the organization." He also proposed that current and new military assistance funds be authorized for use until expended.

On May 9 President Eisenhower signed Executive Order 10610 transferring the functions of the FOA to the Departments of State and Defense, effective June 30. The International Cooperation Administration would carry out FOA's functions within the State Department.

Ex-Rep. John B. Hollister (R Ohio, 1931-37), executive director of Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, was designated to head ICA. His appointment was confirmed by the Senate June 15.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

HEARINGS -- May 5 - 20, intermittently.

TESTIMONY -- May 5 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said "it would be a great mistake to relax our mutual security efforts just as they seem to be bearing the desired fruits." He said there had been a "significant improvement of conditions in Europe" but added that Communism was "pressing hard" to extend its influence in Asia.

He called a "dangerous misconception" suggestions "that our superiority in modern weapons has lessened our need for allied support." He said, in answer to a question from Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), that a "program of this kind probably" would be needed "for a considerable period of time."

May 6 -- Foreign Operations Administrator Harold E. Stassen said "Asia is the focal point of present Communist pressure" where the "most immediate threats to world security and stability are now centered."

Stassen said the $1.7 billion requested for military aid would "obtain more defense for the United States than would the same amount...spent on U.S. military forces."

AID PART OF DEFENSE EFFORT

May 9 -- Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the military foreign aid program was "part and parcel of the U.S. Defense Department program." Radford said "were it not for the strength which has been generated in the past five years by our allies -- and in most instances made possible by our military aid programs -- the requirements of our own program would be much larger."

Assistant Secretary of Defense H. Struve Hensel said it would be "unthinkable" to discontinue the mutual defense assistance program "just when our past efforts are bearing so much fruit."

May 11 -- William J. Sebald, deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern affairs, said the Soviet Union "recently increased sharply her proffers of technical aid and even capital equipment" to Southeast Asian nations "under the guise of contributing to economic development programs."

May 12 -- Allen, Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern affairs, said "this accelerated Soviet economic activity can be attributed in part to the success of our own programs in South Asia." He said the major purpose of the 1956 program was "to consolidate the initial economic successes in those countries."

May 13 -- Stuart H. Van Dyke, deputy foreign aid director for European operations, said the $95 million asked for Spain, Yugoslavia, and West Berlin was needed because the three areas "face serious economic difficulties. Yet each is making a very substantial contribution to the military, political, or psychological defense of the West."

C. Burke Elbrick, deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European affairs, said aid to Europe produced "combined strengths" which cost less and were stronger. The original North Atlantic Treaty countries, he continued, could get along without extra defense aid, but such help still was needed for Spain and Yugoslavia.

DISCHARGE AUTHORITY ASKED

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), a Committee member, said the Administration's request that special authority be given Hollister, as head of the proposed International Cooperation Administration, to discharge some foreign aid employees "might set a precedent for giving the same power to other agency heads." The Administration had asked that Hollister be allowed to fire employees making more than $5,500 a year without regard to their civil service status. Employees with veterans' preferences would be exempted.

May 16 -- Support for the Administration's proposed $52.5 million for South American countries came from Edward J. Sparks, deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American affairs, and Marion N. Hardesty, regional foreign aid director for Latin America.

Sparks said $16 million of the total would go to Bolivia, mainly in the form of food and agricultural equipment to "counteract Communist pressure" fomented by a drastic decline in tin prices in 1953.

Hardesty said "the primary objective of our technical cooperation and development assistance program is to assist the countries of Latin America in their own efforts toward economic development."

AID REQUEST "INADEQUATE"

May 19 -- A spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action termed the Administration's proposal "woefully inadequate" and criticized what he termed the emphasis on military aid.

Lynn, American Farm Bureau Federation, called for continued economic aid, but on the basis of loans only. He said aid programs would have done "more lasting good ...if greater emphasis had been placed on the expansion of mutually profitable trade and more development of natural resources..."

May 20 -- Chester A. Bowles, former ambassador to India, urged as much emphasis as possible on economic aid. He said that only one-fifth of the amount recommended by the President would go to raise living standards.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee May 22 reported S 2090 (S Rept 383) by a 13-2 vote. The recommended authorization was $3,408,000,000. Voting against the bill were William Langer (R N.D.) and Wayne Morse (D Ore.). The Committee rejected, by a 5-8 vote, the request that Hollister be authorized to fire any employee earning more than $5,500 a year without regard to civil service regulations.

S Rept 383 said evidence showed the Soviet bloc was "now putting even greater stress on the political and economic aspects of their activities" than on the military.

The Committee said Asia would receive $1,451,000,000, or 68 percent, of the funds authorized for programs other than military assistance. The funds provided were "vital to the interests of the United States," the report said, since Asia was "currently the primary target of Communist infiltration, subversion, and military pressure."

Floor Action

The Senate June 2 passed, by a roll-call vote of 59-18, the Mutual Security Act of 1955 (S 2090) authorizing a $3,425,000,000 foreign aid program. The Senate rejected, by a 16-62 roll-call vote, a recommittal motion by William E. Jenner (R Ind.). Jenner's move would have sent S 2090 back to the Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees with instructions to report back two bills, one assigning all military aid funds to the Defense Department, the other assigning the balance of funds to the State Department. (For voting, see charts, pp. 126, 127.)

As passed, S 2090 authorized $17 million more than the amount approved by the Foreign Relations Committee. The $17 million, which increased development assistance funds for Bolivia, Guatemala, and Haiti, was added by an amendment from the floor offered by George A. Smathers (D Fla.). An amendment by Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.), while adding nothing to the fiscal 1956 total, changed the amount of previously authorized funds earmarked to finance sale of surplus farm goods from $600 million for fiscal years 1955 and 1956, to $350 million for fiscal 1955 and $300 million for fiscal 1956.

Two other amendments, neither of which affected funds authorized by S 2090, were accepted. Twelve amendments, most of which would have reduced funds in the bill, were rejected. Six of them were sponsored by Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.).

An attempt to permit dismissal of 200 FOA employees without regard to civil service regulations lost on a 40-40 tie roll call. Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who could have cast a tie-breaking vote, was not present.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 2090 provided authorization for these funds:

Military assistance	$1,278,000,000
Direct forces support	317,200,000
Defense support	1,000,300,000
Development assistance	182,000,000
Technical cooperation	172,000,000
Other programs	475,500,000
TOTAL	$3,425,000,000

Funds authorized for "other programs" would be allotted to the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration, UN Refugee Fund, UN International Children's Fund, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the President's Fund for Asian Economic Development, and certain other organizations.

S 2090 would extend many provisions of the Mutual Security Act of 1954. It would also:

Express Congress' pleasure at the "recent progress in European cooperation;" reaffirm Congress' belief in the necessity of further "efforts toward political federation, military integration, and economic unification" of Europe; and propose that foreign aid be administered to support "concrete measures" in the direction of European cooperation.

Repeal restrictions on military assistance to nations not ratifying the European Defense Community Treaty.

Extend until June 30, 1956, the program of transfer of United States military equipment and supplies to the government of Japan.

Earmark $350 million for fiscal 1955 and $300 million for fiscal 1956 to finance the export and sale, for foreign currencies, of surplus farm commodities.

Authorize establishment of the President's Fund for Asian Economic Development and the appropriation of $200 million to remain available for the fund until June 30, 1958, with the fund to be used for projects, decided on by the President, contributing to the economic development of the Asian region as a whole.

Stipulate that not less than 50 percent of the President's Asian fund would be available for furnishing assistance only on a loan basis and that not more than 25 percent of the fund could be used for assistance to any one nation.

Authorize the transfer, in any fiscal year, of up to 10 percent of funds allotted under any section of the act to any other section, provided the section to which funds would be transferred would not be increased, in any fiscal year, by more than 20 percent of the amount originally made available to it.

Repeal the requirement of the Mutual Security Act of 1954 that 30 percent of development assistance funds be made available only on a loan basis.

Exempt sea transportation between foreign ports of goods obtained with foreign currency under the Act from a requirement that 50 percent of aid cargoes be carried in American ships.

Repeal provisions setting up regulations for procurement of equipment and material outside the U.S. with military assistance funds.

Allow the President to make three-year contracts for carrying out development assistance projects.

Give the President power to transfer any function or officer from the International Cooperation Administration to another agency, provided he does not make such transfers to a new agency, and provided he observes civil service and veterans' preference laws.

Continue available the unexpended balances of previous appropriations, but provide that such funds in excess of $200 million which were still unobligated or unreserved on June 30, 1955 could not be carried over.

Permit foreign currency received in payment for sales of commodities to be used for the purposes for which the funds providing the commodities were appropriated.

Repeal earlier foreign aid laws, restate basic policy on foreign aid as a permanent law, and slightly change administrative provisions of the program.

SUPPORT FOR EISENHOWER ASKED

DEBATE -- May 31 -- Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- He did not want the President to go to the Big Four conference in Geneva "weakened by hasty and perhaps ill-advised action we might take on this floor." It was "of vital importance to the future of this nation that he (the President) be unimpeded by any indication that the American people and their representatives in Congress do not back 100 percent the substantial tokens of freedom represented by this bill."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "So far as India is concerned...we have stressed very much the loan provisions, our feeling being that India must develop her own economy and must do so by way of investment based upon the loan principle."

June 1 -- Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "If democracy is to progress, if the areas of freedom are to be extended, we...must have a coordinated, comprehensive program which touches every area of the world."

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- "...it has been my feeling that year by year we should undertake to have less and less outright grants, and that the amount of money that we give to foreign nations, both for arms and economic assistance, should be steadily reduced...there is no war going on...world tension is somewhat reduced...the policy of Congress should be one of gradual reduction of foreign aid."

June 2 -- Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- "The hands of the Administration will be tied in dealing with the recipient countries" unless the Senate accepted his amendment to put development assistance funds in the bill on a 75 percent loan basis. If funds were not provided on a loan basis, the Administration would have to tell recipient countries, "'Congress has said you are not to ask for loans but, rather, that the money is to be given you in grants'."

Humphrey -- The President's Asian fund was an "uncharted, unplanned, unscheduled, unprogrammed...contingency fund" and he approved of the Committee amendment to place 50 percent of this fund on a loan basis. But to place 50 or 75 percent of development assistance funds on such a basis would be "compounding a misdeed... (and) we shall be indicating we have no regard for, no trust and no faith in, those administering the program."

GIVE-AWAYS ATTACKED

George W. Malone (R Nev.) -- "Giving our goods and wealth away to foreign nations...is a disease. Every year about this time we break out in a new rash to give away more millions...We are in so much of a hurry that we hardly understand what the legislation is about."

Jenner -- The Mutual Security program and foreign aid spending were "not geared to any plan for our security as a nation...The security, perhaps the very survival of the United States, depends on our ability to rescue our military planning from the global welfare, boondoggling confusion into which it has been locked. Our spending in Europe has left us almost as vulnerable as we are in Asia."

Long -- "We should insist that there be no expansion of the foreign aid program which already has on hand a balance approximately $9 billion beyond what it was in the previous year."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- His amendment to waive civil service laws on the dismissal of certain FOA employees was not based on political motives. The new foreign aid director should have the right "to get rid of deadwood or employees he does not need or who are inefficient."

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- "There is no existing justification for such blanket disregard for the normal civil service rights of federal employees. The purpose can only be to permit the Administration to replace personnel with new employees cleared by the Republican National Committee."

Mundt -- "We should not let the idea exist in our country or...beyond our shores that we are in any way approving or passing a promissory note that has to be redeemed 100 cents on the dollar in its full amount by the Congress as a whole or by the Appropriations Committee.... The bill establishes a ceiling beyond which we cannot go. It now becomes our responsibility to decide how far we shall go with our appropriations in moving toward this very maximum ceiling."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Mundt -- Earmark $350 million for fiscal 1955 and $300 million for fiscal 1956 to finance the export and sale of surplus farm goods for foreign currencies. Voice.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Provide that United States dollars be made available for marine insurance on shipment of certain goods bought under the Mutual Security Act. Voice.

Smathers -- Increase by $17 million funds for development assistance for Bolivia, Guatemala, and Haiti. Voice.

Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) -- Declare it the sense of Congress that the administration of the foreign aid program be on a cooperative basis, with recipients, when able, extending assistance to underdeveloped countries. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Potter -- Provide that 75 percent of the funds appropriated or transferred for economic development be available only on a loan basis. Roll-call, 29-52.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Amend the Potter amendment to make the loan basis 50 percent instead of 75 percent. Roll-call, 33-50.

Ellender -- Cut funds for defense support to Europe, the Near East and Africa, and Asia by one-half, or to $500,150,000. Roll-call, 27-56.

Malone -- Transfer all available funds previously authorized for mutual defense, plus all funds authorized by S 2090, to the National Defense Administrator for the construction of planes, guided missiles, and atomic submarines. Voice.

Long -- Reduce overall authorizations in S 2090 by $318 million. Roll-call, 27-53.

Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) -- Provide that no funds in the bill would be made available to any nation exporting goods to Red China while that country held American citizens as prisoners. Roll-call, 18-60.

Ellender -- Eliminate authorization of the President's $200 million fund for Asian development. Roll-call, 17-63.

Ellender -- Require that the President's Asian fund be entirely on a loan basis, rather than only 50 percent of it on such a basis. Voice.

Ellender -- Eliminate authorization for fiscal 1956 of President's $100 million fund for worldwide development. Voice.

Ellender -- Eliminate provision for $165 million for development assistance. Voice.

Ellender -- Reduce from $65 million to $16.5 million the authorization for contribution to the United Nations Agency for Palestine Refugees. Voice.

Capehart -- Authorize waiver of civil service laws with respect to the dismissal of not more than 200 Foreign Operations Administration employees above Grade GS-9, except for veterans. Roll-call, 40-40.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

HEARINGS -- May 25 - June 17.

TESTIMONY -- May 25 -- Secretary of State Dulles said continuation of foreign aid was an "essential part of our overall policy" to convince the Communists that "world conquest is futile."

May 26 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Hensel said the U.S. would continue for a "substantial period" to spend large sums to maintain the military strength of allies.

June 8 -- Foreign Operations Administrator Stassen urged approval of the President's plan, and backed a section authorizing $40.5 million in economic aid to Yugoslavia. He said Tito was "independent of the Cominform" and described Yugoslavia as "independent and sovereign" rather than "with the West."

Stassen defended economic aid to India, which he said was waging a "successful struggle against economic distress under a democratic form of government." Ex-Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky., 1946-48, 1952-54), U.S. ambassador to India, and Allen, a former ambassador to India, also urged continued aid to India.

June 9 -- Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, NATO commander, issued a statement, after a three-hour executive session, in which he said the U.S. held "a substantial superiority over the Soviets in long-range airpower." He said that recent Yugoslav-Russian conversations had not "created any military problem."

William J. Sebald, acting Assistant Secretary of State, advocated continued support for the Chinese Nationalists as a means to a position of strength on Formosa and "the only sound basis for a cease-fire" in the Formosa Straits.

ECONOMIC AID SUPPORTED

Dr. Raymond T. Moyer, FOA regional director for the Far East, supported the Administration's request for $1,070,000 in economic assistance to nine Far Eastern countries. He said economic aid was of "major importance" in checking subversion and building national strength on the periphery of Communist China.

June 13 -- Adm. Radford stressed America's need for allies. He said these allies could neither equip nor maintain strong forces without U.S. economic aid. He advised against indefinite continuation of arms aid to Yugoslavia "without more assurance...as to where (it) will stand in an emergency."

June 15 -- James W. Riddleberger, U.S. ambassador to Yugoslavia, testified in closed session. He said later that Yugoslavia was a "good risk." A recent visit of Soviet leaders to Belgrade had not hurt Yugoslav-American relations, he said.

June 16 -- Bowles said the Russians understood better than many Americans that the "middle world" of free Asia, Africa, and South America represented the "ultimate balance of power."

John B. Hollister, designated chief of the new International Cooperation Administration and executive director of the Hoover Commission, said he did not fully agree with the Hoover Commission's recommendations to revamp foreign assistance by distributing most of its functions among other agencies.

June 17 -- Gustave Burmeister of the Department of Agriculture's foreign agricultural service endorsed the section of S 2090 requiring $300 million to be used for the purchase of U.S. surplus agricultural commodities in fiscal 1956. James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union said programs to raise standards of living and education "are as much a part of a program for peace as military armament."

A spokesman for the Association of Marine Underwriters proposed an amendment to give U.S. insurance companies a greater share of the business involved in underwriting foreign aid shipments. Representatives of the AFL and CIO backed the program.

Rep. Michael A. Feighan (D Ohio) urged an "on the spot investigation" before any more aid was granted Yugoslavia.

SENATE VERSION CUT

ACTION -- The Committee June 24 reported S 2090, amended, (H Rept 912) after cutting the authorization by $139.2 million, to $3,285,800,000. The vote to report the bill was 20-4.

The Committee trimmed the Senate version by: eliminating from military assistance funds $145 million requested as a contingency fund by the Department of Defense; and deleting the Senate authorizations of $12.5 million for the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration and $3.7 million for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on grounds that existing legislation covered both agencies.

FUNDS FOR SPAIN

The House group increased the defense support allocation by adding $22 million to the funds earmarked for Spain. The Committee contended the $50 million total for Spain was necessary "to facilitate the Spanish defense effort and particularly the construction of U.S. military bases in that highly strategic area."

The Committee said that for the first time it "did not feel it necessary to reevaluate the fundamental premises on which the mutual security program is based... or to question whether...it was worthwhile.... There is ...evidence on every continent that the...program has begun to give us important foreign policy advantages."

MINORITY VIEWS

This view was challenged in a minority report signed by Republican Reps. E. Ross Adair (Ind.), Alvin M. Bentley (Mich.), Marguerite Stitt Church (Ill.), and Lawrence H. Smith (Wis.).

"We do not feel that there should be any authorization for a new mutual security program until the Department of Defense can...give us its detailed findings on the soundness of these past programs... We do not feel that Congressional authorization and appropriation for the continued concept of a blank check in the mutual security program...would constitute the proper exercise of our responsibilities as representatives of our people," they said.

Floor Action

The House June 30 passed S 2090 by a roll-call vote of 273-128. (For voting see chart, p. 156.) A motion to recommit the bill offered by Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.) was rejected by voice vote. Five motions, offered June 28 and 30, were rejected to strike the enacting clause (which would kill the bill).

As passed, S 2090 was substantially as reported by the House Committee. Amendments to the Committee's version of the bill deleted language to exempt 50 percent of the surplus agricultural commodities shipped overseas from the requirement that they be carried in U.S. ships. The House also agreed to an amendment putting Congress on record as favoring loans, rather than outright grants.

A Committee amendment expressing the sense of Congress that Red China not be admitted into the United Nations was adopted by a division vote of 221-0.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference, most of the provisions in the Senate bill were retained except that the House version:

Provided $145 million less for military assistance; $22 million more for defense support; $16.2 million less for other programs. The total authorization was $139.2 million less than the Senate bill:

Military Assistance	$1,133,000,000
Direct forces support	317,200,000
Defense support	1,022,300,000
Development assistance	182,000,000
Technical cooperation	172,000,000
Other programs	459,300,000
TOTAL	$3,285,800,000

Specified that Greece should receive the same amount of defense support in fiscal 1956 as it received in fiscal 1955 ($26.2 million).

Authorized establishment of a joint U.S. - Philippines committee to concentrate on rural development of the Philippines. A maximum of 10 percent of the money earmarked for the Philippines in S 2090 could be used for the committee's work.

Stipulated that not less than $250 million in fiscal 1956 should be used to finance the export and sale of foodstuffs abroad.

Declared that Communist China should not be seated in the UN.

NO TIME TO CUT AID

DEBATE -- June 28 -- James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- "I do not believe there are many...American people who believe we can cut down on our foreign aid program because the danger (from Russia) is diminishing."

John M. Vorys (R Ohio) -- "This is the bill where the House has its chance to implement the foreign policies of President Eisenhower or to wreck them." However, a large portion of economic aid should be made on a loan, rather than grant, basis.

Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.) -- "The mutual security program and other related programs of our foreign policy are beginning to pay dividends.... We must strengthen the hand of the President and Secretary Dulles at these meetings (of the Big Four). The best way to do it is to pass this bill intact."

Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) -- "The American people have been sympathetic to the unfortunate people of the world for the past 10 years and it is time for foreign economic aid to be curtailed."

June 29 -- E. Ross Adair (R Ind.) -- "There is in this bill...a looseness, a lack of Congressional and executive control (over expenditure of funds)...that is most dangerous."

John Jarman (D Okla.) -- The bill will aid "the free world in meeting the challenge of communism on a global scale." But the Administration, though giving "fond lip service...to the need for more private foreign investment" has been "frustrating FOA's" and "Congressional efforts to encourage it."

Martin Dies (D Texas) -- "To say that we can continue to pour billions of dollars into the East or into Europe and thereby purchase freedom and security, is simply to ignore the lessons of history."

W. J. Bryan Dorn (D S.C.) -- "The world is on a spree and hayride with America picking up the check. This is a fallacious foundation for friends, allies, and permanent peace."

James G. Fulton (R Pa.) -- "This bill should be passed for the safety and security of the American people and our free world, but primarily to insure the defense of this country...."

June 30 -- Gross -- "...you will not collect this money even if it is loaned any more than you collected under lease-lend."

Armistead I. Selden, Jr. (D Ala.) -- "Of the more than $14 billion loaned since World War II we have already been repaid more than $3 billion. Also, more than a billion in interest has been collected."

D. R. Matthews (D Fla.) -- "If someone were to say to me: You are voting for a giveaway program to foreign nations, I would say...: It is a gamble with money rather than with the precious lives of our boys."

SUBSIDIZE U.S. SHIPPING

Clark W. Thompson (D Texas) -- Supported an amendment to continue the requirement that half of surplus farm produce be sent in U.S. ships, saying "all the major merchant marines of the world are subsidized. This is a question whether you want us to spend part of our money on our own people or spend it all on some other subsidized merchant marine."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 30 -- Vorys -- Express the sense of Congress that loans, rather than grants, should be made wherever possible. Standing, 54-23.

Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) -- Delete language exempting the shipping of surplus agricultural commodities from the requirement that at least 50 percent must be transported in U.S. vessels. Division, 181-51.

Michael A. Feighan (D Ohio) -- Spell out the right of the U.S. to inspect the manner in which assistance authorized was carried out. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 29 -- James Roosevelt -- (D Calif.) -- Provide that the President receive commitments from countries receiving military aid that it would not be used for aggression, and that he report to Congress on such commitments. Voice.

Adair -- Delete authority for the President to consolidate appropriations for military assistance and direct forces support. Standing, 47-102; teller, 62-111.

Fulton -- Prohibit delivery of late model U.S. jet planes to any country that does not have a mutual defense agreement with the U.S. (i.e., Yugoslavia) until requirements of U.S. and allied forces are met. Voice.

Alvin M. Bentley (R Mich.) -- Require that countries receiving military aid agree to support other peoples' efforts to achieve self-government and independence. Standing, 41-126.

June 30 -- Hamer H. Budge (R Idaho) -- Bar assistance to countries unless they waive all criminal jurisdiction over U.S. military personnel. Teller, 111-129.

Adair -- Delete $70 million authorization for aid to India. Standing, 59-104.

George Meader (R Mich.) -- Create a commission to study and remove obstacles from private capital program for developing backward countries. Standing, 23-74.

Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.) -- Cut $100 million from the President's fund for Asian Economic Development. Voice.

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- Increase by $100 million the authorization for guaranteeing private capital investments. Standing, 46-91.

Gross -- Fix the 1955 U.S. payment to the World Health Organization at 33 1/3 percent of its total membership assessment. Voice.

Edna F. Kelly (D N.Y.) -- Bar any assistance to Yugoslavia. Standing, 52-162.

Vorys -- Grant John B. Hollister, new foreign aid head, authority to remove 200 top bracket officials without regard to Civil Service regulations. Standing, 108-136.

Harrison A. Williams, Jr., (D N.J.) -- Declare it the sense of Congress that countries receiving aid should use their full resources to see that democratic principles were carried out and a democratic land system developed, and declare it the sense of Congress that the nations band together into a regional group to plan for the use of economic aid funds. Voice.

Selden -- Provide that 50 percent of the funds authorized must be given in the form of loans. Standing, 19-52.

Feighan -- Prohibit aid to Yugoslavia until the House Foreign Affairs Committee inspects the country's condition and determines that such aid was in the security interest of the United States. Standing, 7-92.

Conference

REPORT -- In a report filed July 6 (H Rept 1071), Senate-House conferees agreed on the major House amendments to the Senate version of the bill. They recommended the following modifications in the House version:

Deletion of language earmarking specific sums for Spain and Greece.

Acceptance of the Senate provision requiring that $300 million be used in the export of surplus farm commodities (a $50 million increase over the House figure).

Deletion of a House provision that would have permitted 10 percent of the funds given the Philippines to be used for the Joint Committee on Rural Development.

In agreeing on the smaller House authorization for military aid ($145 million less than the Senate figure), the conferees said they "were influenced by the gyrations" of Administration witnesses who gave "unsatisfactory explanations" of the amount of previously appropriated but unobligated military aid funds on hand. In addition, the conferees said they "were shocked" at the "rush" in which the Defense Department obligated funds "during the last few days" of fiscal 1955. (See Mutual Security appropriation, pp. 235ff.)

The report asked that in future years foreign aid legislation be sent to Congress early in the session, "preferably by Feb. 1."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 7 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Criticized the Defense Department for obligating on June 30, the last day of fiscal 1955, $575 million in previously appropriated military aid funds. (S 2090 limited to $200 million the amount of unobligated funds that could be carried over into fiscal 1956.) He said the Department's "bookkeeping transaction" was tantamount to thwarting Congress' intent to curtail carryover spending authority.

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Expressed gratification that the bill reiterated Congress' opposition to the seating of Red China in the United Nations.

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 7 approved the conference report by a 262-120 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 158.)

DEBATE -- Edward H. Rees (R Kan.) -- "In view of the size of our national debt and the heavy tax burden..." the fund authorization should be cut 50 percent.

James P. Richards (D S.C.) -- It is a bad practice to have termination dates for obligating funds in view of the Defense Department's obligation of funds on the final day of the fiscal year.

INTER-AMERICAN ROAD

HR 5923 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 611) May 23, 1955.
- Passed by the House, by a roll-call vote of 353-13, June 8. (See p. 152.)
- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 542) June 14.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote June 17.
- Senate amendments agreed to by the House June 21, by voice vote.

P.L. 129 -- Signed into law July 1.

Congress in 1955 authorized appropriation of $74,980,000 for the completion of the Inter-American Highway from Laredo, Texas, on the Mexican border to the Panama Canal, under an accelerated three-year program.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 5923:

Authorized $74,980,000 for completion of the Inter-American Highway.

Provided for the appropriation of $25,730,000 in new funds.

Provided that $49,250,000 in funds authorized in previous years for appropriation in future years be made available immediately.

Funds totalling $62,980,000 were appropriated during Congress' 1955 session:

HR 6367 - P.L. 121 -- Commerce Department Appropriation Bill for fiscal 1956 - Granted $25,250,000 for construction of the Highway. (See pp. 210ff.)

HR 7278 - P.L. 219 -- First Supplemental Appropriation Bill for fiscal 1956 - Granted an additional $37,730,000 for the Highway. (See pp. 242ff.)

Background

The Inter-American Highway project was begun in 1934. When completed it would provide an all-weather road from the Mexican border at Laredo, Texas, through the Central American Republics and Panama to the Canal Zone. Since its inception, Congress had appropriated $53,723,000 through fiscal 1955 for the U.S. share of construction of the road.

Acceleration of the project with completion in a three-year period was recommended in 1955 by the Departments of State and Commerce and Bureau of Public Roads.

President Eisenhower sent a special message to Congress, March 31, 1955, urging early completion. He said he believed "this would be the most significant single action which the United States can take in Central America and Panama to bring about the most mutually advantageous results."

Congress was informed that completion of the project in three years would require a total expenditure of $112,470,000 of which $74,980,000 would be the share of the United States, and $37,490,000 the combined share of the cooperating countries on a 2 to 1 matching basis.

In the Federal Aid Highway Acts of 1952 and 1954 Congress authorized expenditure of $56 million for the project, ($8 million for each fiscal year through 1959) but appropriations totalled only $6,750,000, leaving $49,250,000 yet to be appropriated. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp 499ff.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- May 23 reported a bill (HR 5923 -- H Rept 611) authorizing appropriation of $65,730,000 to enable the U.S. to cooperate with Central American governments in surveying and constructing the Inter-American Highway.

Floor Action

The House June 8 passed the bill by a roll-call vote of 353-13, without amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 152.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 5923:

Authorized total appropriation of $65,730,000 -- $8 million for fiscal 1955, and $57,730,000, to be available immediately and to remain available until expended.

Provided that no more than one-third of the appropriation could be expended without requiring the country or countries in which the funds were to be spent to match a part of the sum.

DEBATE -- George H. Fallon (D Md.) -- The benefits which would come from completion of the highway would be "political stability...economic development...increased trade...increased tourism...strategic benefits." Central American countries were "ready and willing to contribute their share toward the added cost of an accelerated program."

Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) -- "It seems to me it would be good business, since we have been 21 years on building this highway, to take another six years to complete it and thereby save $12 million for the American taxpayers over what the road will cost us if we undertake to build it in three years."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Mack (R Wash.) -- Eliminate fund-matching requirement for a country or countries receiving more than one third of the total funds. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- June 14 reported HR 5923 (S Rept 542) with an amendment in the form of a substitute to authorize $74,980,000 for completion of the Inter-American Highway.

Floor Action

The Senate June 17 passed the bill by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 5923:

Authorized $25,730,000 in new funds.

Provided that $49,250,000 in funds authorized in previous years for appropriation in future years be made available immediately.

DEBATE -- Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- "We can talk all we want about it, but nothing would do more good and bring greater economic benefit, not only to the countries involved in the Pan American Highway, but to the people of this country, than would passage of the bill."

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- "It is the rather general understanding in the Congress that our own interest is extremely well served by this bill, and that a tremendous amount of good will in Central America, and, for that matter, throughout Latin America, is tied in with the early passage of the bill."

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

The House June 21 concurred in the Senate amendments by voice vote and sent the bill to the White House.

ANTI-COLONIALISM

H Con Res 149 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 897) June 22, 1955.

- Adopted by the House June 23 on a 367-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 154.)
- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee, amended, (S Rept 855) July 13.
- Adopted by the Senate, amended, July 14, on an 88-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 131.)
- Amendments concurred in by the House July 18, by voice vote.

Congress in 1955 expressed its belief that the United States should conduct its foreign policy so as to support other peoples in their efforts to achieve self-determination or independence.

PROVISIONS -- As adopted, H Con Res 149 called attention in its preamble to the evils of Communist imperialism and other forms of colonialism, and expressed Congress' desire that the United States "administer its foreign policies and programs and exercise its influence" so as to support other peoples in their efforts to achieve self-determination or independence "under circumstances which would enable them to assume and maintain an equal station among the free nations of the world."

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

ACTION -- June 22 reported H Con Res 149 (H Rept 897), introduced by Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.), calling it timely because of the current celebration of the 10th anniversary of the founding of the United Nations.

Floor Action

The House June 23 adopted the resolution by a roll-call vote of 367-0. (For voting, see chart, p. 154.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, H Con Res 149 asked that the U. S. administer its foreign policy and exercise its influence "through its membership in the United Nations and in other international organizations" to support other peoples in their efforts toward self-government.

DEBATE -- McCormack -- Described the resolution as a "declaration...of faith on our part in the ideals of the founders of our country." He said there were "millions...who look to us for hope and encouragement in their efforts to obtain their just national aspirations."

James C. Wright, Jr. (D Texas) -- Called the resolution the "answer to the critics who have said that our national foreign policy has been one of expediency and temporizing."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

ACTION -- July 13 voted, 13-1 (J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) dissenting), to report the resolution with an amendment deleting the reference to the United Nations (S Rept 855).

Floor Action

The Senate July 14 adopted, by an 88-0 roll-call vote, the concurrent resolution as amended by the Committee and by amendments proposed by Karl D. Mundt (R S.D.). Fulbright answered "present" when the roll was called. (For voting, see chart, p. 131.)

DEBATE -- Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- Urged passage of the resolution. "We have been tarred with a kind of colonial guilt-by-association in many parts of the world."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- "To try to regulate world affairs by resolution is a rather risky business."

Fulbright -- Agreed with Aiken and said the resolution's "timing was bad."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Mundt (two amendments) -- Change the word "self-government" to "self-determination", and add the words "and maintain" after "assume". Voice.

On July 18 the House concurred in the Senate amendments by voice vote, without debate.

SOVIET SATELLITES

S Res 116 -- Adversely reported June 21, 1955 by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 621.)
- Rejected by the Senate June 22 on a 4-77 roll-call vote. (See p. 129.)

S Res 127 -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee July 13 (S Rept 854).
- Adopted by the Senate July 14 on an 89-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 131.)

In June and July, 1955, the Senate considered several resolutions designed to influence negotiations at the Geneva "summit" conference, which began July 18. On June 22 the Senate rejected a resolution (S Res 116) introduced by Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) which attempted to secure commitments from the Big Four to discuss Communist satellites at the conference. Three weeks later, the Senate adopted a resolution (S Res 127) expressing the hope that the enslaved peoples would again be free to govern themselves.

PROVISIONS -- As adopted July 14, S Res 127:

Cited in its preamble the "millions of people in Europe and Asia" living under "totalitarian imperialism" and "aggressive despotism."

Proclaimed the hope that they should "again enjoy the right of self-determination within a framework which (would) sustain peace", and that "the sovereign rights of self-government (should) be restored to them all in accordance with the pledge of the Atlantic Charter."

Senate

On June 20 McCarthy submitted a resolution (S Res 116) asking that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who was then meeting with the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union, Great Britain and France to draw up an agenda for the Geneva conference, secure in advance their agreement to discuss the "present and future status of the nations of Eastern Europe and Asia now under Communist control."

McCarthy asked for an immediate vote on the resolution, but later agreed to have it referred to the Foreign Relations Committee when Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) promised quick committee action.

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

TESTIMONY -- June 21 -- McCarthy said the Russians had indicated that if any concessions were to be made at the Geneva conference, they would have to come from the West.

Herbert Hoover, Jr., Under Secretary of State, voiced the Administration's opposition to the resolution. He said the President and Secretary of State were "in complete sympathy with the ultimate humanitarian objectives" of S Res 116, but "it is necessary and desirable to rely on the judgment and ability" of these two leaders at the summit meeting.

Majority Leader Johnson denounced the resolution as an effort to "place a loaded gun at the President's temple."

ACTION -- The Committee June 21 adversely reported S Res 116 (S Rept 621) by a vote of 14-0. A motion to table S Res 116 was defeated by a 7-8 vote, reportedly along party lines.

Floor Action (S Res 116)

The Senate June 22 rejected the resolution by a 4-77 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

Prior to the vote, the Senate rejected, by voice vote, a motion by William E. Jenner (R Ind.) to recommit to the Foreign Relations Committee both S Res 116 and a proposed substitute. The Senate also rejected, by voice vote, a second proposed substitute for S Res 116.

An objection by J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) blocked an effort by McCarthy to obtain unanimous consent to withdraw his resolution in order to offer a substitute. McCarthy then offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute which would have expressed the Senate's sympathy for the "ultimate humanitarian objectives" of S Res 116 and the chamber's hope that the satellite question could be discussed at the Big Four conference.

Jenner thereupon offered a substitute for McCarthy's amendment. The Jenner proposal would have recorded the Senate's support for any efforts by the President, when attending any international meeting, to state the deep interest of the American people in the satellites' status.

Jenner unsuccessfully attempted to have S Res 116 and both proposed substitutes recommitted. When this move was rejected, McCarthy accepted the Jenner substitute. The Senate rejected the substitute, then went on to reject the original resolution.

McCarthy and Jenner four times failed to secure sufficient support for "yea-and-nay" votes.

NO STRAIGHT-JACKET FOR PRESIDENT

DEBATE -- Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "The issue...is whether the President of the U. S. shall be sent to the Big Four Conference in a straitjacket."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- Complained that the resolution should never have come to the floor of the Senate for debate. It should have been tabled in committee, not reported adversely.

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Agreed with Knowland. The Foreign Relations Committee established a "haunting" precedent in reporting the measure adversely. Those who brought the resolution to the floor were "playing politics...making a field day out of something that should have been thrown into the trash can..."

McCarthy -- "It is in accord with the long record of the Democrat Party to whine and whimper whenever the red-hot stove of Communist agression is touched.... But...it is not the role of the Republican Party to backtrack, to appease, to whine, to whimper."

WHIMPERING DENIED

Knowland -- "The Senator has no right to say...that... the Minority Leader is whining and whimpering..."

McCarthy -- By blocking his request for unanimous consent to withdraw the original resolution, Fulbright "rendered a very valuable service to the Communist Party.... He knows what a propaganda weapon (the defeat of the resolution) will give the Communists."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

McCarthy, as modified by Jenner substitute, which McCarthy accepted -- Express Senate's support for any efforts by the President, when attending any international meeting, to state the deep interest of the American people in the satellites' status. Voice.

NEW RESOLUTION REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

ACTION -- July 13 voted 14-0 to report S Res 127 (S Rept 854), which had been introduced by Minority Leader Knowland for himself and Sens. Earle C. Clements (D Ky.), acting Majority Leader, Walter F. George (D Ga.), and Alexander Wiley (R Wis.), ranking members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

In introducing the resolution July 11, Knowland said it had been drafted "with the full knowledge and approval of the Department of State and the President" and was "in keeping with prior statements of the President and Secretary of State relative to our concern over people who have lost their freedom."

The Committee tabled a second resolution submitted by McCarthy (S Res 126) declaring the Senate in favor of withdrawing recognition from the Communist regimes in Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, and Rumania, and of extending it to free anti-Communist governments-in-exile.

Floor Action (S Res 127)

The Senate July 14 adopted Knowland's resolution by an 89-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 131.)

DEBATE -- Knowland -- "This resolution... is in conformity with the pledges of both the great national political parties." The U. S. would be concerned about any form of tyranny which might arise in the world, but "there is only one tyrannical totalitarian government loose in the world today, and that is the Soviet Union."

McCarthy -- S Res 127 "will no doubt undo much of the damage that was done by the rejection of my resolution, which was along similar lines except couched in stronger terms."

REFUGEE RELIEF

President Eisenhower on May 27, 1955 sent Congress a special message (H Doc 173) proposing 10 amendments designed to liberalize the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. The President said "the purposes of the Act are not being achieved as swiftly as we had all hoped." He said the proposed changes would "again reaffirm that the great tradition of sanctuary lives on in America."

The President's message highlighted a wave of criticism of the immigration and refugee programs from Members of Congress and leading church, labor, and welfare organizations.

Congress in 1955 took no action to amend the Refugee Relief Act but a Senate subcommittee held hearings on administration of the Act and on several bills to liberalize its provisions.

CORSI DISMISSAL

Controversy over the refugee relief program broke into the headlines with the April 10 dismissal of Edward J. Corsi as a special State Department assistant on refugee problems. Corsi wrote Secretary of State John Foster Dulles April 11 that "an intolerant minority both in Congress and within the (State) Department" had sabotaged administration of the Refugee Relief Act. Dulles said Corsi had made reckless charges and had sought to circumvent provisions of the law.

Background

The Refugee Relief Act of 1953 (PL 203, 83rd Congress) authorized permanent admission to the United States of 214,000 refugees, orphans, escapees, and relatives of U.S. citizens by Dec. 31, 1956, in addition to quotas (154,657 annually) set up under the Immigration and Nationality (McCarran-Walter) Act of 1952. (For passage of the Refugee Relief Act, see CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 242ff.; for passage of the Immigration and Nationality Act, see CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 154ff.)

The Refugee Act actually authorized entry of 209,000 immigrants, since it provided that 5,000 aliens who lawfully entered the U.S. before July 1, 1953, and who could not return to their native lands for fear of persecution might be granted permanent U.S. residence.

Of the 209,000 to be admitted, 145,000 -- including 4,000 orphans -- were to be refugees, 45,000 escapees, and 19,000 relatives of U.S. citizens.

A REFUGEE was defined as any person in an area not Communist dominated who, "because of persecution, fear of persecution, national calamity of military operations" is not living in his native land, cannot return, has not been resettled, and needs assistance to live or travel. An ESCAPEE was defined as any refugee forced to flee from Soviet Russia or other Communist-dominated country and unable to return for fear of persecution. An ORPHAN, under terms of the Act, included children of under 10 years of age.

The Act also provided that:

- It should be administered by the State Department's head of the Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs, currently Scott McLeod.
- Before a refugee could be admitted under its provisions, a U.S. citizen must give the administrator assurance, first that the refugee would be "suitably employed without displacing some other person from employment;" second, that neither he nor his family would become "public charges;" third, that he and his family would have housing "without displacing some other person from such housing."
- "It shall be the duty of the administrator to verify the authenticity of such assurances and (they) shall be subject to final acceptance and approval by consular and immigration officials."
- Before a refugee could be issued a visa for the U.S. he must present a certificate guaranteeing his readmission to the nation in which the visa would be issued.
- Visas should be issued to refugees "without discrimination in favor of or against a race, religion, or... national origin."
- "A thorough investigation and written report" should be made regarding the visa applicant's "character, reputation, mental and physical health, history, and eligibility..."
- No person should be admitted unless "complete information" is available about him for "at least two years immediately preceding his application for a visa."
- Priorities in the granting of visas should be given to "persons whose services or skills are needed in the United States," parents of U.S. citizens of 21 years of age or older, and "spouses or unmarried sons and daughters under 21... of aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or brothers, sisters, sons or daughters" of U.S. citizens.

REFUGEE AMENDMENTS

President Eisenhower Aug. 31, 1954, signed a bill (PL 751, 83rd Congress) amending the Refugee Relief Act. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 283.) The amendments:

- Eliminated a requirement that 15,000 Italian, 2,000 Greek, and 2,000 Dutch refugees be relatives of U.S. citizens.
- Exempted orphans from being required to produce certificates of readmission.
- Required relatives of U.S. citizens to obtain employment and housing assurances. (They previously had been exempt from this requirement.)
- Permitted small groups of aliens brought from other Western Hemisphere republics during World War II to apply for permanent residence in the U.S. under the 5,000 quota set for refugee status adjustment.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Refugees and Escapees Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- In closed session April 13-14 and in open session April 15-22, May 27, on Edward J. Corsi's dismissal as a special State Department assistant on refugee problems and on the administration of the Refugee Relief Act.

TESTIMONY -- April 15 -- Scott McLeod, State Department security chief and administrator of the Refugee Relief Act, said his administration of the program could accomplish its mission by the Dec. 31, 1956, deadline.

McLeod said he was concerned lest the program wind up with more persons granted visas then there were sponsors willing to guarantee jobs. He said he had difficulty with U.S. Employment Service representatives abroad in getting them to prepare a "catalog of skills available" among refugees from which American sponsors might choose immigrants for jobs. He added that it would be "poor humanitarianism" to create a "pool" of eligible refugees from which sponsors might select. McLeod said this might raise some foreigner's hopes that he would be admitted.

He also said that of 115,000 refugees believed eligible for admittance, "3,722 have been visaed and 1,044 admitted." McLeod acknowledged that as of June 30, 1954, only one visa actually had been issued to a refugee, but he said this was because his office had concentrated on clearing the so-called "preference cases" of immigrants seeking to join relatives in the U.S.

McLeod said that on March 16 he advised Corsi either to "withdraw gracefully" from his job as adviser to Dulles or serve under McLeod as deputy administrator. He said he originally suggested to Dulles that Corsi be brought to Washington. After Corsi's arrival, however McLeod said he was unable "to tie Corsi down as to what he was doing or who was running the program."

Rep. Francis Walter (D Pa.) testified that Corsi was not fit to administer the Refugee Relief Act.

TEXAS RANGER NO SPY

April 20 -- McLeod denied that a former Texas Ranger, Roy Wade, who accompanied Corsi on an inspection trip of European refugee centers, was sent to spy on Corsi. He admitted that Wade reported on Corsi's activities but maintained it was done because Corsi was "not following proper procedures."

Corsi said "the security gang" headed by McLeod had turned the Act into a "complete failure and national scandal." He said the refugee program needed "new, competent, and sympathetic leadership" and should be taken from "the hands of policemen."

He said that shortly after joining the Department, McLeod told him, "'six out of every seven Americans are against immigration of any kind.' He assured me, moreover, that that was prevailing opinion on the Hill (Congress)."

Corsi said that "under no circumstances" would he have come to Washington as McLeod's assistant because, he contended, McLeod was not trying to put the program over. He said he was asked by Maxwell M. Rabb, advisor on minority problems to President Eisenhower and secretary of the Cabinet, to "push" the refugee program. He said he had "no indication of a 90-day temporary appointment," cited by Dulles April 12.

Maj. Gen. A. J. Trudeau, head of the Army corps of investigators which checks potential immigrants, said he was expanding his staff so it could handle 9,000 cases a month by the end of June, 1955. He said his agents had processed 8,700 cases since the law began operating.

Louis Marhoefer, an unpaid Subcommittee consultant, said overseas consular personnel had told him "McLeod is driving us too hard" and had issued instructions that the Act was to be interpreted as liberally as possible.

CORSI CHARGED WITH "SMEAR"

Sen. William E. Jenner (R Ind.) asked Corsi if his charges against the Refugee Act were not motivated because "you wanted a big hat and you wouldn't cooperate with anyone unless you could run the show." Corsi denied this and said he had not sought the post. Jenner defended McLeod and accused Corsi of trying to "smear" him. Corsi said Jenner's charges were "unfair" and "unbecoming a Senator of the United States."

April 22 -- The White House notified Subcommittee Chairman William Langer (R N.D.) that it would not permit Maxwell M. Rabb to testify because "the White House believes that confidential assistants to the President should not testify in regard to confidential matters in the White House offices..."

Corsi said the issue involved in his ouster was whether men called to public service "can be kicked around with impunity." He denied that he ever tried to circumvent the Refugee Relief Act's provisions or that he was interested only in making a name for himself.

Gerald L. K. Smith, former head of the America First party, described himself as chairman of the National Committee to defend the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act. Smith denounced any idea of permitting further immigration because "we have just about as many immigrants now as we can digest without adding to unemployment roles and mongrelization."

Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah), a Committee member, said Corsi was placed in "an impossible situation" because "he was supposed to give advice but he was without authority to give directions." Watkins said he regarded it as a "misunderstanding all around."

Jenner said he thought it was apparent Corsi did not want to cooperate. John L. McClellan (D Ark.), also a Committee member, said he had seen no evidence of sabotage in the administration of the refugee program.

May 27 -- Roy Wade, special representative of Scott McLeod, said Corsi acted in Europe as though he were "the final authority" on the refugee program. Wade said Corsi conducted himself in a "free-wheeling fashion" and disregarded the orderly conduct of relations between the U.S. and other countries. Wade outlined his Foreign Service career and said he was currently an "expediter," and not a security officer.

President's Message

In his May 27 message President Eisenhower asked Congress to:

- Provide for transfer of an unused quota in any refugee category to another category. The President suggested unused numbers might be used to admit orphans on a "worldwide basis."
- Redefine the term "refugee" to eliminate the reference to "resettlement."
- Eliminate the requirement that an "escapee" or an "expellee" also be a "refugee."
- Relax the requirement that a "refugee" be living away from his traditional home when he applied for admission.
- Permit the Attorney General to waive the requirement, in "meritorious cases," that aliens already in the U.S. show "lawful entry as a bona fide non-immigrant."
- Permit waiver of the requirement that refugees and escapees have passports or similar documents.
- Delete the requirement that a two-year past history be given by escapees or refugees.
- Permit welfare groups to sponsor applicants without guarantees by individuals.
- Permit family members to enter the U.S. at different times.
- Give consideration to amendments which would allow persons with tuberculosis to enter the U.S. under safeguards provided by the Attorney General and the Surgeon General and with the provision that the individual would not become a public charge.

Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) and 14 co-sponsors May 31 introduced a bill (S 2113) to carry out the President's recommendations.

Senate Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Refugees and Escapees Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 8-16, on bills (S 1794, 2113) to liberalize the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. S 1794, introduced April 25 by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) and three other Senators, would extend the Act to Dec. 31, 1960, authorize the President to appoint a special administrator, redefine the term "refugee", permit assurances by agencies, rather than individuals, and eliminate readmission requirements.

TESTIMONY -- June 8 -- Sen. Lehman said President Eisenhower had "belatedly" urged changes in the refugee relief program when Corsi's dismissal focused attention on "the failure" of the emergency refugee program. Lehman said the President and other Administration officials "can and should direct the responsible officials to turn the present cumbersome program into a 'crash' program."

Crete Anderson of the American Legion opposed both S 1794 and the bill incorporating the President's recommendations (S 2113). He said liberalization of the law would constitute "flagrant intrusion" on the Immigration Act and "would create dangerous precedents leading to destruction of established quota limitations." He said the Legion "strongly opposes the lowering of standards and safeguards as proposed in the bills."

David Carliner of the American Veterans Committee urged that administration of the refugee program be taken away from Scott McLeod. He said the history of the Act indicated "a deliberate purpose on the part of the anti-immigration bloc in Congress to place the administration of the program in the hands of people unsympathetic to the over-all purpose of refugee relief."

June 9 -- William F. Heimlich, former assistant chief of U.S. intelligence in Berlin, said relaxation of refugee laws "might constitute a considerable danger to U.S. security."

AMENDMENTS SUPPORTED

June 14 -- Corsi said he agreed "entirely" with President Eisenhower's recommendations for amending the Act. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) called for "minimum improvements" which went beyond the changes asked for by Mr. Eisenhower. In a statement submitted to the Subcommittee, Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) asked for a liberalization of the Act to "uphold American ideals."

June 16 -- John J. Gunther of Americans for Democratic Action said both Mr. Eisenhower and Congressional Democrats had reneged on 1952 campaign promises on refugees. He urged Congress to "remove...prejudice and bigotry from the basic immigration law."

Former Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, ex-chairman of President Truman's Commission on Immigration and Naturalization, a spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and Harper Sibley, past president of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and Treasurer, Federal Council of Churches, also urged liberalization of the Refugee Relief Act.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 7 reported to the full Committee, without recommendation, an amended version of the Administration bill (S 2113) to liberalize the Refugee Relief Act of 1953. No further action was taken on the bill in 1955.

QUOTAS NOT FILLED

Pierce J. Gerety, named June 9 as special assistant to the Secretary of State for Refugee and Migration Problems, Aug. 29 said the United States was admitting "a rather steady flow" of immigrants under the refugee relief program. But he said he could not guarantee that the full quota of 209,000 would be filled when the program expired on Dec. 31, 1956.

Refugee administrator Scott McLeod Oct. 21 said the program would not be completely successful. He said it was "abundantly clear" that all the visas provided for Italy and Greece would be issued. However, in Germany and Austria, for which the Act provided 90,000 visas, only 46,251 applications had been received. Up to Oct. 14, McLeod said, 57,957 visas had been issued under the Act and 10,000 visa applications had been refused.

FOREIGN CLAIMS

HR 6382 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 624) May 24, 1955.

- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House June 23.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 1050) July 20.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate July 25.
- Conference report (H Rept 1475) agreed to by the House July 29 and the Senate Aug. 1, by voice vote.

P. L. 285 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Congress in 1955 enacted legislation to authorize payment of claims brought by U.S. nationals against the governments of Bulgaria, Hungary, Rumania, Italy, and the Soviet Union. The bill was requested by the U.S Foreign Claims Settlement Commission. A Commission spokesman testified during hearings that the U.S. held $48 million in assets of the five nations. He estimated, however, that claims would reach many times that amount. The bill also was supported by President Eisenhower, who urged passage of the legislation in his Jan. 17 budget message.

BACKGROUND -- In 1950, the International Claims Settlement Act provided for claims against non-enemy countries, such as Czechoslovakia, Poland, and Yugoslavia. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1950, p. 240.)

PROVISIONS -- As enacted into law, HR 6382:

Authorized vesting and liquidation of blocked assets of the governments of Bulgaria, Hungary, and Rumania to provide funds for payment of U.S. citizens' claims.

Permitted filing of claims, within one year, for compensation for property loss or damage in Bulgaria, Hungary, Rumania, Italy, and the Soviet Union.

Limited eligibility of claimants to persons who were American citizens at the time of their loss.

Extended the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission's jurisdiction to nationalization claims in the satellite countries arising both before and after the date of the peace treaties.

Bills Acted On

How They Are Listed

Foreign Policy bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below, in order of bill number. (For all Bills Introduced in this Foreign Policy category, including bills not acted on, see page 580. For complete listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 104.)

The following summary of each bill gives description, sponsor, and date of action taken or page reference to a detailed legislative history.

In this Foreign Policy section, the Bills Acted On are divided into these groupings: Administrative Policy; Immigration and Naturalization; and International Relations. Each grouping is subdivided into those bills on which work was finished -- under the heading "Action Completed" -- and those not finished -- listed under "Unfinished Business."

RAISE IN MINIMUM WAGE

S 2168 -- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 498) June 7, 1955.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 8.

HR 7214 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 1095) July 11.

S 2168 -- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 20 after HR 7214 was passed by a roll-call vote of 362-54. (See p. 160.)
- Conference report (H Rept 1561) agreed to by the Senate July 29, and the House July 30, by voice votes.

P.L. 381 -- Signed into law Aug. 12.

Despite strong efforts by labor spokesmen in behalf of their case for a $1.25 minimum wage, the Senate passed a bill to raise the 75 cent minimum to $1. The bill included provisions applying minimum wage law to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, but made no change in exemptions under the law. The House passed a bill raising the minimum to $1 but containing no other provisions. In conference, the House version largely prevailed.

The Eisenhower Administration had asked for a minimum of 90 cents and an extension of coverage under the law.

Workers in lumber, textile, and other manufacturing industries were expected to benefit from the wage increase, with the majority of affected employees located in the South. Workers in the retail trades, service industries, agriculture, and construction work remained uncovered by the law.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, the Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1955:

Raised the hourly minimum wage from 75 cents to $1, effective March 1, 1956.

Required the Secretary of Labor, in his annual report to Congress, to evaluate the effects of the minimum wage.

Required that wage rates in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands be reviewed by an industry committee once each fiscal year, and removed the Labor Secretary's authority to disapprove reçommendations of the committee.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Minimum Wages." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. V, 1949, pp. 434 ff.).

The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 provided a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour for the first year of the law's operation, 30 cents an hour for the following six years, and 40 cents an hour by 1945. Maximum hours per week were set at 44 during the first year, 42 during the second year, and 40 hours after Oct. 24, 1941. Overtime was to be paid for at the rate of one and one-half times the regular rate. Employment of child labor was restricted by provisions prohibiting goods produced under conditions of "oppressive child labor" from being moved in interstate commerce.

The provisions of the Act applied to workers "engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce."

The Act was amended in 1949. The minimum wage rate was raised to 75 cents an hour, and exemptions from the law were granted to several industries which had previously been affected.

It was estimated that the minimum wage law applied to about 24 million persons but that only 1.3 million would benefit directly from a raise in the minimum hourly rate to 90 cents, and 2.1 million would be directly affected by a $1 wage floor. Other workers whose pay is calculated by reference to the minimum wage might be expected to benefit indirectly from an upward change in the minimum wage.

ADMINISTRATION PROPOSALS

In 1954 President Eisenhower said the Administration was studying the minimum wage question, that an increase in the minimum and an expansion of coverage was "desirable," and that "timing of these changes must be worked out to the best interests of the economy." In December, 1954, Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell sent to the White House recommendations for raising the minimum wage to 85 or 90 cents and for extending the Fair Labor Standards Act to several million more workers.

The President in his State of the Union speech Jan. 6, 1955, recommended an increase to 90 cents, together with amendments of the Act to bring protection to "many others, at present excluded." A few days later, Secretary Mitchell, at a press conference, said the Administration planned to include retail and service workers under the coverage. (By the 1949 amendments, employees of retail and service establishments doing more than 50 percent of their business within a state were exempted from the provisions of minimum wage law.)

A so-called Administration bill (S 57) introduced by Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) called for raising the minimum wage to 90 cents an hour effective Jan. 1, 1956, but did not include any provisions relating to exemptions under the Act.

In his Economic Report Jan. 20, President Eisenhower said a boost in the minimum wage would "aid the comparatively small number of workers who are at the fringes of competitive labor markets." Mr. Eisenhower added that any increase above 90 cents would bring higher prices in its wake and could lower production and cause substantial unemployment in certain industries.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare, Labor Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Intermittently from April 14 to May 18, on various bills containing proposals to raise the minimum wage and extend coverage of the wage and hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

TESTIMONY -- April 14 -- Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said boosting the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour would be "unsound" and raising it from the current 75 cents to $1 an hour "would cause very serious adjustments in some industries." He supported the Administration request for a 90 cents an hour minimum.

Mitchell said he knew of no "sound reason" why the minimum wage should not be extended to employees of interstate chain stores, hotel and motion picture chains, and some others not currently covered -- about 2 million additional persons in all.

He said an increase to 90 cents an hour would bring higher wages to 1.3 million workers, the same number he said directly profited from the increase to 75 cents an hour. An increase to 90 cents, he continued, "would adjust (wages) to the increase in the cost of living and would permit some improvement in the position of the persons protected by the Act. It is an increase which the industries can absorb."

April 15 -- Stuart Rothman, solicitor for the Department of Labor, said a $1 an hour minimum wage for the cotton textile industry was not excessive.

AFL, CIO VIEWS

April 18 -- George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor, recommended a $1.25 minimum wage and a work week of 35 hours. He said the Administration proposal to raise the minimum wage to 90 cents was "grossly inadequate."

April 19 -- Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO), said raising the minimum wage to $1.25 would "protect those fair-minded employers...now paying decent wages from the unfair competition of the sweatshop producers." Representatives of the Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Union (CIO) and Textile Workers of America (AFL) also supported the $1.25 minimum.

April 20 -- James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO and president of the International Union of Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers (CIO), said the proposed 90 cent minimum wage was "an insult to America's workers." He said Congress had "been sorely remiss" in failing to keep the minimum wage law in line with increased living costs.

April 21 -- CIO President Walter Reuther said the $1.25 hourly wage was "morally right and economically sound." He added: "I think if the President would crack the political whip on this issue as he did on the tax bill last year he would make a lot of Republicans see the light."

April 22 -- David J. McDonald, president of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO), said it was "shameful and a disgrace to America" that some workers earn as little as or less than 75 cents an hour. He supported the $1.25 an hour wage as did spokesmen for the Textile Workers of America (CIO); United Hatters, Cap, Millinery Workers Union (AFL); Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen, and Helpers of America (AFL); and Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America (AFL).

April 26 -- Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) testified in favor of his bill (S 662) which would set a $1.25 minimum and expand coverage of the Act. Lehman said the raise recommended by the Administration was "paltry and insufficient."

OPPOSITION TO RAISE

April 27 -- Thomas O. Moore, representing the National Association of Manufacturers, opposed any raise in the minimum wage because, he said, temporary benefit to the working man would be lost in the inflation of higher prices. He said attempts should be made to improve the knowledge and skills of unskilled workers. Other witnesses discussed exemptions under the act.

April 29 -- Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. denounced any move to raise the minimum wage above 75 cents an hour and to extend coverage. Dr. Emerson P. Schmidt, research director, opposed both ideas as "unrealistic and self-defeating." He said they would force many small businessmen out of operation, increase unemployment, raise prices, and depress wages in jobs not covered by the minimum wage.

May 2 -- Rowland Jones, Jr., of the American Retail Federation opposed any extension to retail stores. Extending coverage to only a part of the retail industry, he continued, would bring "utter confusion" by upsetting "local wage standards and relationships." He said state legislatures were the place where minimum wages for retailers should be considered.

Other witnesses, all opposing extended coverage, represented the National Licensed Beverage Association, National Retail Dry Goods Association and retailers from furniture, farm equipment, restaurant, hardware, lumber, and jewelry firms.

May 3 -- Spokesmen for the Conference of State Manufacturers Associations, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Council of Farm Cooperatives, cotton growing groups, fruit and vegetable growers, and dairy farmers opposed the proposals.

May 4 -- A spokesman for the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters opposed an increase to $1.25 in the minimum wage, but said the Administration proposal to lift the wage floor to 90 cents "does have some basis in a recognized theory of minimum wage determination."

Bernard E. Esters, representing the National Editorial Association, opposed an extension of the minimum wage to newspapers with less than 4,000 circulation and any increase in the 75-cent rate. Others lined up against the wage proposals included spokesmen for the U.S. Independent Telephone Association, the American Hotel Association, and the American Poultry and Hatchery Federation.

May 5 -- Spokesmen for the U.S. Wholesalers Association and the National Oil Jobbers Council opposed the bills, as did representatives of other retail and wholesale organizations.

Resident Commissioner A. Fernos-Isern (Pop Dem P.R.) opposed extension of increased minimum wages to the island on the ground that Puerto Rico's state of economic development is too far behind the United States for it to support a comparable minimum wage.

CLOTHING GROUPS FOR RAISE

May 6 -- Representatives of various clothing manufacturing associations supported the proposals, as did a spokesman for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL), who wanted a boost to $1.25 an hour.

May 9 -- James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union said he favored a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour. He termed a raise to 90 cents an hour "grossly unrealistic." A $1.25 minimum wage, he said, would "result in an added expenditure for food amounting to $606 million."

Isador Lubin, New York state industrial commissioner, urged approval of the $1.25 rate as a matter of "common decency." He said "a higher standard of living for the low income groups is our best advertisement for freedom in a world in which our free enterprise system is at war with the forces of collectivism."

May 10 -- Support for the $1.25 minimum wage came from spokesmen for the National Council of Negro Women, American Public Welfare Association, Association of Catholic Trade Unionists, and American Association of Social Workers.

May 11 -- Seymour E. Harris, Harvard University economist and chairman of the New England Governors' Textile Committee, advocated a boost in the rate "substantially above the 90 cents an hour recommended by the President."

Leon H. Keyserling, head of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Truman Administration, appearing for himself and Americans for Democratic Action, supported the $1.25 proposal. He criticized Secretary of Labor Mitchell for recommending a 90-cent rate.

May 17 -- Spokesmen for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., the American Retail Federation, and Prof. Merwyn G. Bridenstine of the University of Arkansas opposed any raise in the minimum wage or any extension of coverage. Prof. Arthur Upgren of Dartmouth College approved raising the wage to 90 cents an hour, but opposed any extension of coverage.

May 18 -- Stuart Rothman, acting commissioner of the Labor Department's Wage-Hour Division, said the Department did not specifically recommend expanding coverage to 2 million retail and wholesale workers. He said it was asking Congress to "seriously consider" whether the minimum wage should be extended to them.

Rothman's statement brought an accusation from Subcommittee Chairman Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) that the Eisenhower Administration was guilty of "an attempt to weasel out" of previous recommendations.

BILL APPROVED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee June 3 approved S 2168, a bill calling for a $1 minimum wage, by a vote of 4-1. H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.), who favored a 90-cent minimum, cast the dissenting vote.

Chairman Douglas said the Subcommittee rejected, by a vote of 2-3, a motion by Pat McNamara (D Mich.) to raise the wage to $1.25 an hour.

The Subcommittee also approved provisions which would raise the minimum wage in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The full Committee June 7 reported S 2168 (S Rept 498). The Committee rejected, by a vote of 5-8, a motion by Irving M. Ives (R N.Y.) to raise the minimum to $1.25 an hour and, by a vote of 2-11, a motion by Gordon Allott (R Colo.) to set the minimum at 90 cents an hour, the Administration figure. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) proposed another plan, to raise the minimum to $1.25 and extend coverage to new groups of workers, which was defeated by voice vote.

Floor Action

The Senate June 8 passed S 2168 by voice vote, without amendment. A proposal calling for a gradual approach to the $1 minimum wage was defeated.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 2168 would:

Raise the minimum wage to $1, effective Jan. 1, 1956.

Require the Secretary of Labor, in his annual report to Congress, to recommend any changes in the amount of the minimum wage which he deemed desirable.

Raise the minimum wage in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands by 33 1/3 percent by Jan. 1, 1956, and by at least 25 cents an hour above the July 1, 1955, rate by Jan. 1, 1958.

Require the Secretary of Labor to submit a special report to Congress between Jan. 1 and June 1, 1957, on the operations of amendments affecting the minimum wage rate in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Provide, after July 1, 1956, for annual review by an industry committee of wage rates established by wage orders in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Require the Secretary of Labor to publish, in the Federal Register, recommendations of an industry committee concerning a change in the minimum wage.

DEBATE -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- The Committee decided to postpone any amendment "dealing with coverage or exemptions from the act. That issue is very complicated and needs a great deal of study." He said the Committee hoped to develop legislation which could be presented to Congress early in the next session.

H. Alexander Smith (R N.J.) -- He had received many calls and communications "from small-business people who say that the effect of the difference between 90 cents and $1 will be such as to put some of them out of business and to cause unemployment." He said these were "principally...small businessmen who are employers of probably 100 persons or less."

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) -- A $2,080 yearly wage would be the result of a 40-hour work week at the $1 an hour minimum wage. "It is rather difficult for me to conceive how any man with a family can maintain himself and his family on such a salary in view of the high cost of rent, food, clothing...much less have anything left for luxuries or for anything beyond the bare necessities of life."

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "I recognize that while a rate of 90 cents might be low, yet a job at 90 cents an hour is better than no job at $1 an hour. I feel that if we make the minimum wage too high, many men will find themselves out of jobs." Raising the minimum "will only contribute to the inflationary spiral now underway in this country."

(See Congressional Record, June 8.)

AMENDMENT REJECTED

H. Alexander Smith -- Increase minimum hourly wage from 75 cents to 90 cents during calendar year 1956, to 95 cents during calendar 1957, and to $1 thereafter. Voice vote.

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor.

HEARINGS -- Intermittently from June 1 to June 30 on proposals to raise the minimum wage.

TESTIMONY -- June 1 -- Congressmen sponsoring various bills testified for an increase in the minimum wage and extension of the coverage of the Act.

June 2 -- Committee Chairman Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) said he was "pretty well satisfied" with increasing the minimum wage from 75 to 90 cents. Rep. Ray J. Madden (D Ind.) called for a $1.25 minimum to halt the flight of industry to "low wage" southern states. Also supporting the $1.25 sum were Reps. William T. Granahan (D Pa.) and Isidore Dollinger (D N.Y.).

Rep. Irwin D. Davidson (D N.Y.) said a $2 minimum was essential to support a family of four in major cities. Rep. James Roosevelt (D Calif.) said he would "go" for $2 if necessary to sustain labor's purchasing power.

An expanding economy was necessary to avoid "the worst depression we have ever known," said Rep. Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.). Rep. Thomas J. Lane (D Mass.) said

"every sincere American is ashamed" of the existing minimum.

June 6 -- Rep. John A. Blatnik (D Minn.) spoke in favor of his bill (HR 3397) to raise the minimum to $1.25 an hour. Rep. Robert Hale (R Maine) supported his bill (HR 277) to increase the minimum wage to $1 an hour.

EXPANDED COVERAGE URGED

June 7, 8 -- Under Secretary of Labor Arthur Larson urged favorable action on the Administration recommendation for a 90-cent minimum wage, and on various proposals to enlarge the number of workers covered by minimum wage laws.

June 9 -- William F. Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, said Senate action in approving a $1 minimum wage was "a step in the right direction but still not sufficient." He said a minimum wage of $1.25 hourly was "well within our reach" and that a 90-cent minimum was "far too short of a reasonable or acceptable level." He said the cost of a higher minimum would be met "largely through increases in efficiency of management, labor, plant, and equipment" and would not cause small businesses to close down.

June 10 -- The Committee heard requests to raise the minimum hourly wage from 75 cents to $1.25 an hour from spokesmen for the AFL, CIO, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO).

June 14 -- A spokesman for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL) supported a $1.25 rate.

June 15 -- Ex-Rep. Frank Hancock (D N.C., 1930-39), representing 12 North Carolina textile manufacturers, urged an increase of the wage standard to $1.

June 17 -- Two representatives of the lumber industry opposed any change in the existing 75-cent-an-hour minimum wage. They said an increase would cause the failure of companies in their industries.

June 21 -- Governor Luis Muñoz Marin of Puerto Rico opposed application of an arbitrary minimum wage scale to Puerto Rico. Several representatives of southern sawmill and pulpwood operators opposed an increase in the minimum wage.

June 22 -- Rep. Charles P. Nelson (R Maine) favored a minimum of at least $1 an hour.

June 23 -- Representatives of Alabama and Georgia lumber operators said a boost in wage costs would be a hardship to the small timber grower.

COST OF LIVING CITED

June 28 -- Rep. Thomas M. Pelly (R Wash.) said any national minimum wage should be calculated on the average cost of living pattern in the entire nation. In a statement, he said it was "inconceivable...that our federal minimum wage would be less than $1 (an hour) and, as far as my...district...is concerned, $1 is too low. I urge... an immediate raise which will prevent human exploitation in higher as well as lower living standard areas."

Dr. Emerson Schmidt of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said any increase in the wage would be against "sound public policy" and tend toward higher prices and fewer jobs. He said that even the 90-cent minimum proposed by the Administration would be "more risky" in 1955 than the establishment of the 75-cent minimum was in 1950. A $1 minimum wage, he continued, would cost more than twice as much as a 90-cent minimum in low-paid industries.

June 29 -- A spokesman for the National Editorial Association said an increase in the minimum wage would deal "a crippling economic blow" to small daily and weekly newspapers.

He said that "an increase of any amount...would have the immediate and inevitable effect of practically eliminating apprentice and on-the-job training programs now being carried on in many thousands of our small shops. Almost certainly this enforced curtailment in the education of skilled printing craftsmen would have the ultimate effect of causing a serious labor shortage in the entire printing or graphic arts industry."

June 30 -- Spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Cotton Council opposed any increase in the minimum wage. Matt Triggs of the Farm Bureau protested wage fixing by "government fiat" and said increases "would inevitably be reflected in higher wages for farm workers, thus further reducing farm income."

$1 RATE APPROVED

ACTION -- The Committee July 11 reported a bill (HR 7214 -- H Rept 1095) to raise the national minimum wage to $1 an hour effective March 1, 1956. HR 7214 contained no other provisions.

In its report, the Committee said it "tried without success to determine accurately the extent to which employers might adjust to a new rate without creating hardship or unemployment." H Rept 1095 said the hearings indicated "small and medium-sized businesses, especially those related to agriculture, would experience the greatest difficulty in adjusting to an increase." The Committee said "larger business firms showed little interest in the hearings, and no direct testimony was offered by any of the country's big industrial concerns."

Floor Action

The House July 20 passed HR 7214 by a 362-54 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 160.) The House then passed by voice vote and sent to conference the Senate bill (S 2168), after amending it to conform to HR 7214.

A rule (H Res 388) permitting only amendments to change the wage rate or effective date proposed by HR 7214 was adopted by voice vote July 19. Three amendments -- to set the rate at 90 cents an hour, as proposed by President Eisenhower, raise it to $1.10, or provide a two-step increase to $1 by 1957 -- were rejected by teller votes July 20.

DEBATE -- July 19 -- Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- Opposed the bill on grounds it would harm "2.5 million subnormals and elderly people," currently working, whom employers would not be willing to pay $8 a day.

Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.) -- "Only 1,850,000 people would be affected" by the $1 rate, not all of them old or handicapped.

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- Congress should "be careful not to go faster in the establishment of minimum-wage levels than the economy can stand." Raising the 75-cent minimum to 90 cents "will have an impact on small business" and an increase to $1 "would virtually double" it. A 90-cent rate "would affect 1.3 million workers; $1 would affect 2.1 million."

Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) -- "Big business is not interested in this bill...Small business is shaking in its shoes." Under a $1 minimum rate, many firms may have to "turn their employees loose to join the unemployment rolls."

Thor C. Tollefson (R Wash.) -- Coming from "an area where the average hourly wage is closer to $2 than $1," he endorsed the bill on behalf of local industries "affected by competition from areas where the hourly wage is lower."

Peter Frelinghuysen, Jr. (R N.J.) -- "The economic feasibility of any increase...is not easy to determine." But figures from the Labor Department and the President's Economic Report show that a $1 rate, as compared to 90 cents, would put "a substantially greater burden on employers."

July 20 -- D. R. Matthews (D Fla.) -- "If we go above 90 cents an hour, it will put more of our laborers out of work (and) many of our small businessmen out of business." Congress should not forget the "differences in the cost of living in different sections of the country."

George M. Rhodes (D Pa.) -- A raise from 75 cents to $1.10 an hour "is thoroughly justified, solely on the basis of upward changes in our economy over the past five years." A $44 salary per week "is little enough for the support of a family."

(See Congressional Record, July 19-20.)

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 20 -- Roy W. Wier (D Minn.) -- Set minimum wage at $1.10 an hour. Teller vote, 93-198.

Samuel K. McConnell, Jr. (R Pa.) -- Set wage at 90 cents an hour, effective Jan. 1, 1956. Teller, 145-188.

McConnell -- Raise minimum to 90 cents on Jan. 1, 1956, and to $1 on Jan. 1, 1957. Teller, 168-173.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 28 reported (H Rept 1561) a compromise version of S 2168. It dropped Senate provisions affecting minimum wage rates in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and fixed the new minimum wage at $1, effective March 31, 1956.

ACTION -- The Senate July 29, and the House July 30, agreed by voice votes to the conference report on S 2168, clearing the bill for the White House.

PRESS CONFERENCE

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell July 21 said he would recommend that President Eisenhower sign the bill to raise the minimum wage to $1 an hour.

Mitchell, however, said the legislation failed to carry out the President's recommendation to extend coverage to many occupations currently exempt. The Administration proposals, he said, would have "given to many millions of low-paid workers the protection they need."

Group Stands

Various labor unions and other groups called for a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour and for extension of coverage to bring to many more workers the protection of the Fair Labor Standards Act. These groups included the AFL, CIO, Americans for Democratic Action, the National Farmers Union, and the National Conference on Economic Progress.

Pacing the labor effort were the Joint Minimum Wage Committee and the Citizens' Committee on a Fair Labor Standards Act. The Joint Committee, formed in December, 1954, was composed of two AFL and two CIO clothing workers unions. It pushed for resolutions from city governments and state legislatures favoring a higher minimum wage. The Citizens' Committee was formed in mid-April, 1955, to help coordinate activities of consumer and civic groups. One of its projects was stimulating interest among governors and mayors.

Support for a $1.25 minimum wage also came from some employer groups. The Silk and Rayon Printers and Dyers Association of America said they supported a $1.25 minimum because "it would enable our industry to better survive in competition with low wage paying segments in other areas."

The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. opposed the raise in the minimum rate and called for continued exemption for "retail and service businesses which are essentially local in character." The National Retail Dry Goods Association also asked for a continuation of the "retail exemption" and conducted a campaign to impress Congress with the "rightness, fairness, and economic soundness of the exemption."

Opposed to a raise in the minimum rate were a number of businesses directly affected, the National Association of Manufacturers, American Farm Bureau Federation, and National Editorial Association.

Bills Acted On

Labor bills which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below. For all Bills introduced in this Labor category, including bills not acted on, see p. 586.

DRAFT LAW EXTENSION

HR 3005 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 19) Feb. 3, 1955.
- Passed by the House on a 394-4 roll-call vote Feb. 8. (See p. 136.)
- Reported, amended, by the Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 549) June 14.
- Passed, with amendments, by voice vote of the Senate June 16.
- Conference Report (H Rept 902) agreed to by the House, on a 389-5 roll-call vote, June 28 (see p. 156); and by the Senate by voice vote vote June 28.

P.L. 118 -- Signed into law June 30.

The bill (HR 3005) extended the regular draft for four years and the medical draft for two years, as requested by President Eisenhower. Extension of the doctors' draft law was opposed by the American Medical Association and dental societies.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 3005:

Extended from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1959, the Selective Service Act of 1948, later known as the Universal Military Training and Service Act, which provided for induction of men between the ages of 18½ and 26 for 24 months of active military duty followed by reserve duty.

Provided that persons deferred because they joined the National Guard before reaching 18½ years of age would be liable for induction until age 28, instead of age 35.

Provided that local draft boards could no longer consider the availability of a farm commodity when considering whether to draft or exempt a farmer.

Exempted from induction -- except in cases of emergency -- persons discharged at the convenience of the government who had served actively for six months and persons honorably discharged who served 12 months after Sept. 16, 1940.

Exempted from induction -- except in cases of emergency -- persons who served for 24 months as commissioned officers in the Coast and Geodetic Survey or the Public Health Service.

Granted persons who served in the armed forces of an allied nation for 18 months, credit toward an exemption from induction if their country granted similar privileges to United States citizens.

Extended from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1959, the Dependents' Assistance Act under which servicemen's dependents were paid monthly allowances.

Extended the authority to draft medical and allied specialists under 46 years of age to July 1, 1957.

Continued until July 1, 1959, the existing $100 monthly special pay for physicians, dentists, and veterinarians.

Exempted from induction under the medical draft persons more than 35 years old who had been refused a medical commission on the grounds of disability.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Universal Military Training and Service." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 274ff.) "Doctors' Draft." (CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 270ff.)

Both the regular draft and the medical draft laws were due to expire on June 30, 1955. In a special message Jan. 13, 1955, President Eisenhower asked Congress to extend the 24-month draft law for four years, and the doctors' and dentists' draft law for two years.

The President said extension of the regular draft was necessary because "realistic estimates set the probable ceiling on voluntary forces, in the present economic situation, at a million and a half -- more than 1.3 million men short of the planned strength goal for the end of the fiscal year 1956." He expressed hope that after two more years of the medical draft, the armed services' needs for medical men could "be met adequately by other means."

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 1-2 on HR 3005, to extend the regular draft for four years.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 1 -- Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense for manpower, said: "To maintain an armed force strength of 2,850,000 through fiscal year 1959, with 1 million of these men in the Army, we estimate it will take about 670,000 24-month inductees, or an average of 14,000 monthly. This is in addition to a requirement for 2.1 million volunteer enlistments in the same four-year period."

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, said "many" of the volunteers who had entered the armed forces since 1950 had done so because otherwise they would have been drafted. Without a draft law, he said, the armed forces would have difficulty in getting draft-age men to enlist.

Feb. 2 -- Representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Scientific Manpower Commission, National Grange, and the National Council Against Conscription testified.

ACTION -- HR 3005 was reported Feb. 3 (H Rept 19), with minor amendments.

Floor Action

The House passed the bill, with amendments, Feb. 8 on a 394-4 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 136.)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 3005 would:

Extend from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1959, the Universal Military Training and Service Act, which provides for induction of men between the ages of 18½ and 26 for 24 months of active military duty, followed by six years in the reserves.

Exempt from induction -- except in case of a declaration of war or national emergency by Congress -- men who have served honorably for six months in the armed forces, or 24 months in the Public Health Service, since Sept. 16, 1940.

End at age 26 (instead of 35) liability for induction of men who join the National Guard before the age of 18½ and who are deferred because of Guard service.

End at age 26 (instead of 35) liability for induction of men previously rejected because of physical or mental unfitness.

Prohibit consideration as a factor in denying or granting occupational deferments, of the existence of farm commodity surpluses or shortages.

Extend from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1959, the Dependents Assistance Act, under which servicemen's dependents are paid monthly allowances.

DEBATE -- Proponents of the bill based their arguments on the persistence of international tension. They emphasized that the legislation was distinct from the President's proposals for reorganizing the reserve system -- despite presence of the phrase, "Universal Military Training," in the law's title.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee -- "We are faced with the inevitable requirement of maintaining an Army, a Navy, an Air Force, and a Marine Corps, for the indefinite future, of not less than 2,850,000."

Opponents criticized administration of the draft. Their main push was an unsuccessful attempt to limit the extension to two years.

Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) proposed but did not press a system under which men would be called for about three months of training a year -- during slack seasons in education, agriculture, and industry -- instead of being drafted for two years. He objected to giving the military long-term authority, urging extension of the draft for two years rather than four.

A recommittal motion by Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) was rejected by voice vote.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Burr P. Harrison (D Va.) -- Prohibit consideration, as a factor in denying or granting occupational deferments, of the existence of farm commodity surpluses or shortages. Voice.

Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- End at age 26 (instead of 35) liability for induction of men previously rejected because of physical or mental unfitness. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Roy W. Wier (D Minn.) -- Extend the draft for two years, to July 1, 1957, instead of four years. Standing, 62-153.

Fred Marshall (D Minn.) -- End at age 26 (instead of 35) liability for induction of men previously deferred, except those deferred for educational, study, or research purposes, who would still remain liable to the age of 35. Standing, 15-106.

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Defer men essential to agriculture or "the war effort." Voice.

DOCTORS' DRAFT

On May 10 the Armed Services Committee reported a separate bill (HR 6057 -- H Rept 580) to extend the doctors' and dentists' draft for two years. The Rules Committee, however, failed to grant a rule for floor debate on the bill.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- June 9-10.

TESTIMONY -- June 9 -- Dr. Reuben B. Chrisman, Jr., representing the American Medical Association, which opposed extension of the doctors' draft, also said the U.S. Public Health Service could not constitutionally be staffed through the draft.

Dr. Philip Powers, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, backed repeated student and occupational deferments from military service to enable the United States to meet "bitter competition from our potential enemies" for scientific advantage.

June 10 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Burgess filed statements for himself, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, urging approval of the draft extension and early consideration of a reserve bill.

Gen. Hershey and Assistant Secretary of Defense Frank B. Berry also supported the draft bill. Hershey said that "without compulsory legislation I know of no way in which the armed forces...can be raised and maintained in sufficient numbers to insure the security of the nation." Dr. Berry said there were not enough physicians "vulnerable under the regular draft" to meet armed forces needs.

Assistant Secretary of State Thruston B. Morton urged the exemption of aliens from countries friendly to the U.S. who served for their own nations before entering the U.S.

ACTION -- June 14 the Committee reported (S Rept 549) an amended version of HR 3005, which extended the draft law for four years and the medical draft law for two years.

Floor Action

The Senate June 16, by voice vote, accepted Committee amendments, passed, and requested a conference on HR 3005.

One floor amendment was accepted. The Senate agreed to set 28 as the age limit for induction of persons deferred from the draft because they were members of the National Guard. The existing age limit was 35, the House recommended lowering it to 26, and the Senate Armed Services Committee had recommended an age limit of 30.

PROVISIONS -- In the form it went to conference, HR 3005 would:

Extend the regular draft until July 1, 1959.

Provide that persons deferred because they joined the National Guard before reaching 18½ years of age would be liable for induction until age 28.

Provide that local draft boards may no longer consider the availability of a farm commodity when considering whether to draft or exempt a farmer.

Exempt from induction -- except in cases of emergency -- persons discharged at the convenience of the government who served actively for six months and persons honorably discharged who served 12 months after Sept. 16, 1940.

Exempt from induction -- except in cases of emergency -- persons who served for 24 months as commissioned officers in the Coast and Geodetic Survey or the Public Health Service, and members of the reserves who, after the passage of the 1955 Act, served 24 months as veterinarians with the Department of Agriculture.

Grant persons who served in the armed forces of an allied nation for 18 months credit toward an exemption from induction if their country grants similar privileges to United States citizens.

Extend from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1959, the Dependents' Assistance Act under which servicemen's dependents were paid monthly allowances.

Extend the authority to draft medical and allied specialists under 51 years of age from June 30, 1955, to July 1, 1957.

Continue until July 1, 1959, the existing $100 monthly special pay for physicians, dentists, and veterinarians.

Exempt from induction under the doctors draft any person 35 or older who applied for a commission as a medical or allied officer and had been rejected on grounds of physical disability after July 1, 1955.

DEBATE -- Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "We have all come to recognize that the regular draft is the keystone of the arch of our national defense. Without it our entire defense structure would fall."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.), Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- The National Guard will have difficulty obtaining enlistments unless the age limit of liability for the draft is lowered, as proposed by Sen. Edward Martin (R Pa.).

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Similar action should be taken for engineers and scientists deferred from the draft.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Martin -- Provide that persons deferred because they joined the National Guard before reaching 18½ years of age shall be liable for induction until age 28. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- In filing a conference report (H Rept 902) on the bill June 23, conferees generally accepted the Senate version of HR 3005.

Changes made by the conferees in the Senate version:

Removed a proposed exemption from induction for reserve members who served 24 months as veterinarians with the Department of Agriculture.

Reduced the age of a doctor's liability for induction under the doctors' draft from 51 years of age to 46 years of age.

Exempted from induction under the doctors' draft persons more than 35 years old who had been refused medical commissions on the sole ground of disability no matter when they had applied for commissions. (The Senate had provided that the exemption should take place only if a commission had been refused after July 1, 1955.)

Floor Action

The House June 28 agreed to the conference report on HR 3005 by a 389-5 roll-call vote, after a motion to recommit the bill was defeated by a roll-call vote of 171-221. (For voting, see chart, page 156.)

DEBATE -- Extension of the doctors' draft law provoked much controversy. Medical and dental societies had opposed the extension.

The five medical men in the House agreed with the stand of the American Medical Association and voted to send the bill back to conference. Rep. Carl Vinson (D Ga.) said he had received a telegram from the AMA "urging that the conference report be recommitted."

Doctor members of the House were Ivor D. Fenton (R Pa.); Walter H. Judd (R Minn.); A.L. Miller (R Neb.); and Thomas E. Morgan (D Pa.). George S. Long (D La.) was a dentist. After defeat of the recommittal motion, all voted for the conference report.

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- "None of us like the necessity of drafting doctors but we all know that the health of the armed services comes first. We know that we cannot in good conscience extend a law to draft the young men of our nation without assuring them the best possible medical care and that is the sole purpose of extending the law."

Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- "There is no need for a doctors draft." The Rules Committee was "so thoroughly convinced that it was wrong, that no rule (for floor debate) was granted."

Walter H. Judd (R Minn.) -- "Why does the Pentagon say the (medical) draft is needed? Because it can get its doctors this way easily. They have not taken the trouble to develop a really attractive career service.... The whole principle of discriminating against one group of citizens is wrong."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "I cannot understand why anyone would vote for the extension of the general draft... which is absolutely necessary for our national security, and then refuse to vote not only for an adequate number of doctors, but doctors who are trained and well-qualified. Our armed services must have some experienced doctors and not all neophytes."

SENATE AGREEMENT

The Senate June 28 agreed to the conference report by voice vote, without debate, and sent HR 3005 to the White House. Public Law 118 was signed by the President June 30.

ARMED FORCES PAY

HR 4720 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 90) March 8, 1955.

- Passed by the House March 10, by a 399-1 roll-call vote. (See p. 140.)
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 125) March 29.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote March 30.
- House agreed to Senate amendments March 30 by voice vote.

P. L. 20 -- Signed into law March 31.

In a message to Congress Jan. 13, 1955, President Eisenhower called for legislation to ensure the "attraction of young men to a military career and the retention of men in this career once they have chosen it." His message also called for "special attractions to men who undertake particularly hazardous jobs that are becoming more important as weapons become increasingly complex."

Congress enacted a bill (HR 4720) meeting most of these proposals and it took effect on April 1, 1955.

PROVISIONS -- The Career Incentive Act of 1955:

Granted to officers with more than three years' service, and warrant officers and enlisted men with more than two years' service, pay increases based on rank and length of service. (Percentage increases ranged from 6.07 percent for major generals with 26-30 years of service to 25 percent for second lieutenants with more than three but less than four years of service; the largest percentage increase for enlisted men was 17.35 percent for Army corporals with more than eight but less than 10 years of service.)

Provided additional allowances of $100 monthly for lieutenant generals and vice admirals on active duty and $200 monthly for full generals and admirals.

Provided an increase in special monthly pay for hazardous air and submarine duty; a new "dislocation allowance" of one month's pay for service families making permanent change of station; and a raise in the daily travel allowance from $9 to $12.

Authorized a travel allowance, in lieu of the dislocation allowance, for a serviceman moving to a permanent post in a trailer to be used as a residence.

Increased retirement pay by 6 percent.

Increased West Point and Annapolis students' pay from $989 to $1,333 a year.

Provided that all pay raises become effective the first day of the month after the bill was signed.

Background

A message to Congress by President Eisenhower Jan. 13 called for a 6.7 percent increase in service pay and allowances at an estimated cost of $730 million in fiscal 1956. The President warned that the rate of re-enlistment in the armed services (currently averaging only 20 percent) was both expensive and serious because of the "loss of experience and operational efficiency which results from it."

He proposed bringing the pay of servicemen "more in line with that offered by private industry," but recommended "selective adjustments" rather than an across-the-board increase, in order to encourage career service.

The President also recommended improving "non-pay benefits," noting that studies showed wide dissatisfaction among servicemen with such benefits as PX facilities, family medical care and housing.

LEGISLATIVE REQUESTS

Mr. Eisenhower requested that Congress:

Raise military pay an average 6.7 percent.

Make no increases for the first two years of enlisted service and the first three years service of an officer.

Increase hazardous duty pay on a selective basis.

Authorize "dislocation" allowances for married personnel moving to new posts.

Raise the per diem travel allowance to $12 (from $9.)

Provide more housing for service families.

Authorize reduced rentals for those living temporarily in substandard housing.

Provide better medical care for military families.

Equalize survivor benefits according to rank for active and retired personnel.

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services Subcommittee No. 2.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 7-8, 16-18, 22-23 on HR 2607, an Administration bill to increase pay and allowances for members of the armed services. All witnesses testified in support of the bill.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 7 -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said the armed forces were losing too many trained men to private industry. "Lately we have seen an already critical situation get worse....Approximately 1 million men -- one third of our planned size for the active forces -- will become eligible for some form of release during the next year," he said.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the U.S. must maintain a core of outstanding officers and men in its military service for a period which "could be 10 years or it could be 50."

Others who testified for the bill were Secretary of Navy Charles S. Thomas; Adm. Robert B. Carney, chief of naval operations; Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Marine Corps commandant; and Charles R. Hook, industrialist who headed an advisory commission which studied military pay in 1949.

TRAINING COSTS HIGH

Feb. 16 -- Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense, said conversion to an all-jet Air Force and development of the atomic-powered submarine would bring "new dangers" to personnel which could only be met by increased military pay. The services expected to lose about 750,000 of the one million officers and men eligible for discharge in 1955, he said. He added that the pay increase would approximate three-tenths of the cost of training their replacements.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee March 4 approved HR 2607, with amendments which would bring the annual cost to $745 million. The full Committee March 8 reported a clean bill (HR 4720 -- H Rept 90) by a vote of 32-0. The new bill embodied amendments recommended by the Subcommittee.

Floor Action

The House March 10, by a roll-call vote of 399-1, passed and sent HR 4720 to the Senate. Rep. John Taber (R N.Y.) cast the dissenting vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 140.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 4720 would:

Grant to officers with more than three years' service, and warrant officers and enlisted men with more than two years' service, pay increases based on rank and length of service.

Provide an increase in special monthly pay for hazardous air and submarine duty; a new "dislocation allowance" of one month's pay for service families making permanent change of station; and a raise in the daily travel allowance from $9 to $12.

Increase retirement pay by 6 percent.

Increase West Point and Annapolis students' pay from $989 to $1,333 a year.

Provide that all pay raises become effective the first day of the month after the bill was signed.

DEBATE -- Discussion of HR 4720 lasted only half of the allotted three hours.

Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) -- "The rates of re-enlistment in recent years have been a matter of great concern, and it is imperative that we provide the incentives to reverse these unsatisfactory trends and keep our armed forces strong and experienced."

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- The bill would have a "marked effect upon...turnover" in the armed forces and would help the nation to "reach that ultimate desirable goal of an all-volunteer force."

Paul J. Kilday (D Texas) -- "It is as good a pay bill as I have seen drafted in my service in the House."

L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.) -- "It must not be as the old Duke of Marlborough said: 'God and soldier we adore in time of danger, not before; Danger past and all things righted, God forgotten and the soldier slighted.' We cannot follow that line if this nation is going to exist."

(See Congressional Record, March 10.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- On HR 4720 March 17 and 18.

TESTIMONY -- March 17 -- Secretary of Defense Wilson favored the bill but said professional military careers in the armed forces should not be "too attractive" or there would be no turnover in the reserves. Sen. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) urged a flat 25 percent raise for all servicemen with more than two years' service. Adm. Radford said the military pay bill would "prepare for the long pull and not a particular year of crisis."

Secretary of Navy Thomas and Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott supported the pay plan.

March 18 -- Generally supporting a military pay increase were spokesmen for the Retired Officers Association, Commissioned Officers Association of the Public Health Service, American Legion, Jewish War Veterans, Disabled Officers Association, Air Line Pilots Association, Fleet Reserve Association, and the Interservice Committee.

ACTION -- HR 4720 was unanimously reported March 29 (S Rept 125), with amendments. The report said the purpose of the bill was to "reduce the immense turnover of personnel in the armed forces" which, it said, led to heavy costs in training replacements (cost of a jet pilot's training -- $120,000) and to a lack of experienced men that might handicap a war effort.

Amendments recommended by the Committee:

Provided additional allowances of $100 monthly for lieutenant generals and vice admirals on active duty (currently 76 officers), and $200 monthly for full generals and admirals (26 officers).

Authorized a travel allowance, in lieu of the dislocation allowance, for a serviceman moving to a permanent post in a trailer to be used as a residence.

Floor Action

HR 4720 was passed by voice vote of the Senate March 30, after committee amendments were agreed to by voice vote. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) and Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) withdrew proposed amendments when Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), floor manager for the bill, stressed the need for speedy action by both chambers if the pay raises were to take effect April 1.

DEBATE -- Numerous Senators spoke in favor of the bill. Russell said it was "carefully drawn to apply the maximum increases at the very places where...we have been losing the greatest number of trained men."

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- "There is a tremendous decrease in airplane accidents after pilots have had 500 hours of training. The accident rate drops from almost 70 per 100,000 flying hours to about 10 or 15 after the pilots have had between 500 and 1,000 hours of training. Statistics demonstrate not only the saving in...cost of training young fliers, but also the cost of repairing or rebuilding airplanes damaged in accidents. I believe the incentive pay to induce these men to continue in service is fully justified."

(See Congressional Record, March 30.)

HOUSE ACTION

The House agreed to the Senate's amendments by voice vote March 30, after an explanation by Paul J. Kilday (D Texas).

GI HOME LOANS

HR 5715 -- Reported by House Veterans' Affairs Committee (H Rept 447) April 26, 1955.

S 654 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 243) April 28.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote May 5.
- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, June 2.
- House amendments agreed to by the Senate, by voice vote June 7, with an amendment.
- Senate amendment agreed to by voice vote of the House June 8.

P.L. 88 -- Signed into law June 21.

S 654 extended the authority of the Veterans Administration to make direct home loans to veterans until July 1, 1957. It made it easier for veterans to obtain loans to purchase and improve farm property.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by President Eisenhower, S 654:

Extended the Veterans Administration's authority to make home loans to veterans to July 1, 1957.

Authorized loans to a veteran unable to get a private loan at an equivalent rate so he could: buy a home or a farm on which there was a house for him to live in; construct a home on farm land owned by him; or improve his dwelling.

Allowed a qualified veteran who had not been granted all of the $10,000 authorized under the direct home loan law to apply for the remainder of that amount.

Stipulated that loans for purchase or construction of private dwellings, as distinguished from farm houses, should be paid back monthly. Other loans could be repaid quarterly, semi-annually, or annually.

Increased the maximum amount of money that could be loaned quarterly from $37.5 million to $50 million.

Background

REFERENCE -- "GI Home Loans." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 319-320.)

The passage of S 654 continued the direct home loan program which was started by the Housing Act of 1950 (PL 475, 81st Congress). VA-guaranteed home loans had been authorized in the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (the so-called GI Bill).

Extension of the loans was urged by President Eisenhower in his Budget Message, Jan. 17, 1955: "I recommend legislation continuing this (loan) program until expiration of the veterans' loan-guaranty program for World War II veterans on July 25, 1957."

Floor Action

The 1955 legislation to extend the program started in the House with HR 5715, which would have continued the program one more year. But the House tabled that bill and agreed, with minor amendments, to the Senate measure which extended the direct home loan program until July 1, 1957.

MILITARY RESERVES STRENGTHENED

HR 7000 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 987) June 28, 1955.

- Passed by the House, amended, July 1, by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee July 13 (S Rept 840).
- Passed by the Senate, amended, July 14, by roll-call vote of 80-1. (See p. 131.)
- Conference report (H Rept 1335) agreed to by the House July 25 on a 315-78 roll-call vote (see p. 160); and by voice vote of the Senate July 26.

P.L. 305 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Enactment of HR 7000 established the first comprehensive program aimed exclusively at bolstering United States military reserve forces.

The core of the fight over the legislation was which men should be required to serve actively in the reserves, and for how long. There was little expression in either chamber to the effect that no program whatsoever was necessary.

The final bill was a compromise reached after five months' pulling and tugging over a measure that President Eisenhower put high on his "must" list for Congressional action.

The first bill to reach the House (HR 5297) was sidetracked when Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D.N.Y.) won House agreement to an anti-segregation clause that would have affected state National Guard units. The civil rights snag eventually was bypassed through a fresh bill (HR 7000) that dropped National Guard provisions of the first bill.

Few persons directly involved with the reserve legislation were satisfied with the final bill, but most of them agreed it was better than existing reserve laws. President Eisenhower, when he signed the bill Aug. 9, said, "The bill falls short of the program which I sent to Congress...nevertheless, the bill does contain provisions that will definitely strengthen the reserve structure."

He said he was disappointed that the bill did not provide means for assuring experienced soldiers' entry into the National Guard. The President stated that he would ask the Secretary of Defense to prepare a bill for the Second Session of the 84th Congress to correct deficiencies in the new law.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by President Eisenhower, the Reserve Forces Act of 1955:

Established active and reserve service obligations of up to 11 years for men between 17 and 35 years of age who began military service after enactment of the bill. The length of the military obligation varied according to the program under which an individual entered the service.

Authorized the President in an emergency to activate up to one million Ready Reservists without approval of Congress.

Set 2,900,000 men as the maximum enrollment in the Ready Reserve.

Permitted transfers between the Ready and the Standby Reserve under regulations prescribed by appropriate armed forces secretaries.

Required rehiring of employees absent from their jobs because of military obligaions.

Declared that men graduating from college after completing the Reserve Officer Training Corps program should be commissioned. If their services were not needed immediately, they would serve six months active duty after graduation and remain 7½ years in the Ready Reserve.

Exempted ministerial students from service.

Cut the 10-year obligation of draft-deferred National Guardsmen if they volunteered for three-months active training with regular service organizations and spent eight years in the Guard.

The bill also set up various programs for men between 17 and 28 as alternatives to being drafted for two years active duty followed by three years in the Ready and one in the Standby Reserve.

SIX-MONTH PROGRAM

Provisions which dealt with the new, six-month training program:

Authorized up to 250,000 men between 17 and 18½ to sign up annually for three to six months active duty, as specified by the Secretary of Defense, providing they remained in the Ready Reserve until their service time totaled eight years.

Permitted deferments to enlistees in the six-month program until they finished high school or reached their 20th birthday, whichever came first.

Set. Aug. 1, 1959, as the deadline for the program.

Required six-month enlistees to attend at least 48 weekly Ready Reserve drills and to serve up to 17 days of active duty annually. They also could serve 30 days active duty in lieu of attending the drills.

Set the pay of six-month trainees at $50 for each month they were on active duty.

Specified that reservists in the six-month and 10-year training programs who did not perform satisfactorily could be put on active duty for 45 days or drafted "prior to the...induction of other persons liable."

Permitted men over the age limit who were engaged in essential industry to enroll in the six-month program. (The newly extended draft law covered men up to 26 years old, but those who had been deferred previously were liable for draft until their 35th birthday. See p. 329.)

Another program which the law authorized the President to open to men between 17 and 18½:

Allowed them to fulfill military obligations by attending weekly drills of the Ready Reserve until age 28.

Required them to go on maneuvers for two weeks during the summers. (The program was similar to one offered by the National Guard. Trainees in any of the reserve programs would be paid $50 per month while on active duty. National Guardsmen were paid at a rate depending on rank, beginning at $78 per month for active training duty).

TWO YEAR PROGRAM

Provisions that affected men who enlisted or were inducted in the armed forces after enactment of the reserve amendments:

Established a total service obligation of six years.

Required men serving two years active duty to serve three years in the Ready and one in the Standby Reserve. For each additional year of active service, one less year of Ready Reserve duty was required.

In order to induce a hard core of veterans to take an active part in the Ready Reserve, the law:

Allowed men inducted or enlisted before enactment of the Act to be released from active duty (with prior approval by the Secretary of Defense) after one year active duty if they agreed to serve in the Ready Reserve for three years.

Permitted release of up to 150,000 men annually until July 1, 1957, under that provision. (Otherwise, the men would face a total eight year service obligation since they would come under the Universal Military Training and Service Act which was extended in 1955. Reserve training under that Act was not considered as enforceable as under the reserve amendments).

Permitted men discharged from service between Aug. 9, 1955, and July 1, 1957, to reduce their eight-year obligation (as required by the draft law) by participating actively in the Ready Reserve for one year.

Specified that failure to perform reserve duties could lead to a callup to active duty for 45 days.

"Universal Military Training and Service" (Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 274-5). "Universal Military Training Program" (Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 194-99). "Military Reserve" (Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 199-200).

Congress had been trying to agree since 1948 on Universal Military Training legislation which would assure adequate reserve troops without robbing the civilian economy of necessary manpower.

Before enactment of the 1955 amendments to the Universal Military Training and Service Act, men between 18½ and 35 entered the reserves in various ways.

Draftees and enlistees were required to serve in a reserve component for five years if their two-year hitches began between June 24, 1948, and June 19, 1951.

The active duty plus reserve service requirement was extended to a total of eight years for draftees and enlistees who entered the armed forces after June 19, 1951, the effective date of the amendments to the Universal and Military Training and Service Act. This provision applied to men enlisted or inducted before their 26th birthday.

Men under 18½ years old could enter the reserves by joining the National Guard or other organized reserve units. They participated in weekly drills and annual training exercises, usually of two weeks duration. If they participated in this after-hours training until their 35th birthday, they were exempt from the draft except in war or other national emergency. Amendments to the Act in 1955 reduced the obligatory service time to age 28. (See p. 329.)

Men who completed the college courses set up for the Reserve Officers Training Corps were commissioned, placed on active duty for two years, and then required to remain in the reserve for six years.

But none of these programs, according to military authorities, gave the country the solid backbone of Ready Reservists required for its security. A major flaw was that only a fraction of the men who completed their two-year active duty obligations participated in reserve training to keep abreast of military skills.

UMT TURNED DOWN

At the insistence of President Harry S. Truman, the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1950 worked on a Universal Military Training bill, but it never reached the Senate floor.

In 1951, Congress passed legislation -- the Universal Military Training and Service Act (PL 51, 82nd Congress) -- extending the draft and approving UMT in spirit. The law named a National Security Training Commission to recommend a UMT program to Congress. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 274ff.)

The Commission in 1952 submitted recommendations embodied in bills (HR 5904, S 2441) which would have required all able-bodied 18-year-olds to put in six months active duty and remain in the reserve for 7½ years.

But the House, after diluting the bill by amendments, voted March 4, on a 236-162 roll call, to recommit the stripped bill, thereby killing it. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 194ff.)

Later in 1952, Congress completed action on the Armed Forces Reserve Act (PL 476, 82nd Congress). The measure set up seven reserve components for the armed forces, keeping the National Guard as a separate unit. It also divided each reserve component into a Ready, Standby, and Retired reserve and set a ceiling of 1.5 million persons for the Ready Reserve.

The Act stipulated that the Ready, Standby, and Retired Reserve -- in that order -- could be activated in time of war or national emergency declared by Congress. It also authorized the President to call up the Ready Reserve in numbers authorized by Congress. It did not set up the much-sought military training for all young men. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 199ff.)

EISENHOWER REQUESTS

President Eisenhower, in a letter dated Aug. 1, 1953, asked the National Security Commission to report on the status of the nation's reserve forces. He also asked the Office of Defense Mobilization to report on whether the nation's manpower was sufficient to fill active and reserve military ranks without endangering civilian manpower needs.

The reports of those agencies, and papers prepared in cooperation with them by the Defense Department and National Security Council, helped evolve a National Reserve Plan which was presented to the National Security Council on Nov. 15, 1954.

Adoption of a reserve plan was urged by President Eisenhower in a special message to Congress on Jan. 13, 1955. He declared that the military security of the United States was dependent upon active forces, an organized reserve which could reinforce them in a minimum of time, and a standby reserve which would "permit a quick general mobilization of all our military strength."

A goal of three million Ready and two million Standby Reservists by 1959 was set by the Administration. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson estimated the cost at $1.1 billion, or about $350 million more than his Department currently was spending for reserve and national guard activities.

Mr. Eisenhower coupled his request for the reserve program with a plea for a four year extension of the draft law. But Rep. Carl Vinson (D Ga.), House Armed Services Committee chairman, severed the two requests and pushed through the draft extension first. (See pp. 329ff.)

ADMINISTRATION BILL

The President's recommendations for a reserve program were embodied in HR 2967. The bill would have authorized:

Six months active duty followed by 9½ years training in a Ready Reserve unit for youths between 17 and 19.

Enlistment of men who had not received draft notices into the armed force of their choice for two years active and six years reserve duty.

Six months basic training for National Guard members, in addition to existing part-time instruction.

Transfer of veterans from other armed forces components to the National Guard to work off reserve obligations.

A discharge "other than honorable" for men failing to fulfill reserve obligations.

Drafting of men between 17 and 19 into the reserve units when quotas could be filled.

The call-up of 750,000 reservists by the President without Congressional approval.

Establishment of state militias for home front service.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Armed Services Subcommittee No. 1.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 8 -- March 24 on HR 2967.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 8 -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said world conditions required the armed forces to be put on "a basis of more immediate readiness." He warned that all men of military age would be required to serve "in some capacity."

Feb. 9 -- Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, said only active forces could supply needed Army units at the outbreak of war. About 10 months would be needed, he said, to train and transport National Guard and reserve units to overseas battle positions. After four or five years of operation, he estimated, the proposed reserve plan could cut this period to five months.

Adm. Robert B. Carney, chief of naval operations, said the Navy feared the proposed six-month trainee program might deter four-year enlistments in the Navy.

Feb. 14 -- James H. Douglas, Under Secretary of Air Force, said there was "concern as to serious difficulties arising over our ability to get long-term enlistees."

Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff, said he feared the proposed six-month trainee program would drain off four-year enlistments which the Air Force needed. But if the program was "kept...under control," he said the Air Force probably could get enough long-term enlistees to meet its requirements.

COMPULSORY RESERVE DUTY URGED

Feb. 15 -- Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense, urged support for a provision subjecting men with reserve obligations to loss of retirement and promotion benefits and to discharge under conditions other than honorable if they failed to keep up reserve training.

Burgess said that only about 700,000 of the 2,200,000 men in the Ready Reserve participated in the training program. He added that 83 percent of the Army reservists were over 24. "This indicated a need for a program that will bring young men with adequate initial military training directly into the Reserves," he asserted.

Feb. 17 -- Albert Pratt, Assistant Secretary of Navy; Vice Adm. James L. Holloway, Jr., chief of naval personnel; and Maj. Gen. L.J. Sverdrup (ret.), commanding general, 102nd Infantry Division, U.S. Army Reserve, St. Louis, Mo., testified for the bill.

Feb. 18 -- Testifying favorably were three members of the National Security Training Commission: Gen. Walter Bedell Smith (ret.), Adm. Thomas C. Kinkaid (ret.), and Warren H. Atherton. Smith said that "for every new advancement in weapons, more men -- not less -- have been required to fight wars." This meant, he said, that an atomic "push button war" would not provide an "easy way out" to avoid training a large pool of military manpower.

Atherton said that nearly 3.5 million draft-age men received no military training between 1945 and 1950, and as a result, between 600,000 and 700,000 World War II veterans with reserve obligations had to be recalled to fight in Korea.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- On Feb. 19, statements supporting HR 2967 were issued by Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Adm. Carney; Gen. Ridgway; and Adm. William M. Fechteler, commander-in-chief of Allied Forces, Southern Europe. Ridgway said a reserve plan must include measures for compulsory participation in reserve activities. Without such measures, he said, the reserve system "would fail us in an emergency."

VOLUNTARY METHODS

Feb. 23 -- As hearings resumed, Arthur S. Adams, chairman of the Reserve Forces Policy Board, said the group had recommended that "the voluntary concept should be given more experience and use before using compulsion" to get young men to keep up their reserve training.

Feb. 24 -- Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.), president of the Reserve Officers Association, other ROA representatives, and Rocco C. Siciliano, Assistant Secretary of Labor, testified.

Feb. 25 -- Rep. James Roosevelt (D Calif.) and officials of the Reserve Officers Association testified.

Feb. 28 -- Arthur S. Flemming, director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, said the idea of compulsory rather than voluntary reserve service "is an indispensable part of a reserve program if we are to have a truly ready reserve."

John A. Baker, of the National Farmers Union, attacked the part of the program which would provide for six months active duty training and 9½ years of reserve duty as a "gimmick" designed to slip over a form of universal military training.

March 1 -- L.S. Buckmaster of the CIO said the bill would be the "first step" toward UMT. He said the CIO wanted a strong military reserve but opposed "compulsion" to build it.

March 2 -- National Commander Seaborn P. Collins of the American Legion urged the Subcommittee to turn to a UMT bill, backed by the Legion, as a means of eliminating what he termed existing inequities and to "prepare every able-bodied young man for effective service" in the reserves.

March 3 -- Mrs. Percy A. Lainson and Mrs. Jane Gould Rishworth, of the American Legion auxiliary, testified that American women wanted UMT in order to give their men "every chance of" returning from battle. They urged support of the Legion plan.

James H. Straubel of the Air Force Association said the Administration proposal for special training of 100,000 volunteers "is a potential danger to the voluntary enlistment program of the Air Force."

Arthur W. Hauck, president of the University of Maine and representing the Association of Land Grant Colleges, asked the Subcommittee to write into the bill a provision specifying that four years' scholastic training in the Reserve Officers Training Corps was equal to six months' active duty. Otherwise, he said, under the new bill the ROTC would lose ground as a primary source for young reserve officers.

CIVILIAN SCIENTISTS, ENGINEERS NEEDED

Edmund Claxton, of the National Association of Manufacturers, urged establishment of a special Presidential board to screen reservists to insure "proper distribution between the military and civilian activities of scientists and engineers."

March 4 -- Federal Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson endorsed the Administration reserve plan and suggested that some civil defense training also be given.

George D. Riley of the AFL supported the plan but said "even this limited program could possibly be seized upon as an opening wedge for developing full-scale UMT."

March 8, 10 -- National Guard Association representatives and Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) testified.

March 21 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Burgess said the Administration program was "not an absolute parallel with UMT." He said the program should include "standby" power to draft youths for six months training. Charles M. Boyer of the Reserve Officers Association said "six months couldn't ruin a boy's life" and said the reserve training section should "have a little teeth."

March 22 -- Melvin Maas of the Marine Reserve Officers Association said that, short of war, reserves should be subject to recall only during the first year after their active service.

March 23 -- Additional testimony was received from representatives from the Defense Department and officers' organizations.

March 24 -- Rep. Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) wrote Subcommittee Chairman Overton Brooks (D La.) urging creation of a civilian appeal board "to which members of the reserve may appeal when they are involuntarily recalled to active service."

BILL AMENDED BY SUBCOMMITTEE

In closed sessions, the Subcommittee agreed to eliminate the main compulsory feature of HR 2967 -- authority to grant "other than honorable discharge" to men who did not complete their required reserve training.

ACTION -- On March 28, by a 9-1 vote, the Subcommittee reported to the full Committee proposals to reorganize the reserve forces.

Subcommittee Chairman Brooks March 29 introduced a clean bill (HR 5297) incorporating proposals approved by the Subcommittee as a substitute for the Administration bill (HR 2967).

PENALTY PROVISION UPHELD

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- April 18, 20, and 26 in executive session on HR 5297.

ACTION -- The Committee April 27, by a 31-5 vote, favorably reported the bill (H Rept 457).

Voting against it were Reps. Robert H. Mollohan (D W. Va.), Lester Holtzman (D N.Y.), William J. Green, Jr. (D Pa.), William G. Bray (R Ind.), and Charles P. Nelson (R Maine). Rep. Dewey Short (R Mo.) abstained. A proposal by Rep. Arthur Winstead (D Miss.) to eliminate a provision that reservists who failed to keep up prescribed training could be recalled for a maximum of 45 days' active service was rejected, 2-32. Nelson and Winstead voted for the amendment.

NEW BILL REPORTED

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House floor, HR 5297 would have:

Established a ceiling of 2,900,000 men for the Ready Reserve.

Required men up to 35 years old entering the service to serve eight years, partly on active duty and the remainder in a reserve status.

Permitted men under 19 to fulfill service obligations either by enlisting for six months active duty and 7½ years in the Ready Reserve or by volunteering for two years active duty and six years in the Ready Reserve. (The bill did not authorize drafting youths into the six-month program, as requested by President Eisenhower).

Allowed men who had not received draft notices to join an armed forces reserve unit so they could serve a two year active duty hitch in the branch of their choice. They would be called to active duty within two years of their enlistment.

Voided retirement and promotion benefits for reservists who did not perform satisfactorily.

Authorized transfers, when desirable, from the Ready to the Standby reserve and vice versa under direction of appropriate secretaries.

Deferred from reserve duty present and prospective clergymen.

Deferred from reserve drills men who had been on active duty before July 27, 1953.

Required the Defense Secretary to report annually to Congress and the President on the reserve program.

Made it mandatory for employers to hire back employees after they had served in reserve training.

Commissioned all qualified Reserve Officer Training Corps students upon graduation. If they were not needed immediately, they would take six months of training and then become members of the reserve for 7½ years. Failure to participate in the reserve could lead to revocation of commission.

NATIONAL GUARD PROVISIONS

Provisions of HR 5297 that affected the National Guard:

Authorized transfer of reserve personnel into the National Guard when volunteers did not fill its ranks, a procedure previously prohibited.

Allowed trainees between 17 and 19 to serve their required six months of active duty in the National Guard. They would have remained in the Guard as Ready Reservists for an additional 7½ years.

Permitted states and territories to raise militias for homefront protection.

Sections dealing with the six month program:

Set a ceiling of 250,000 men under 18½ who could enlist annually in the six-month active duty program.

Required the National Security Training Commission to advise the President and Defense Secretary on the welfare of six-month trainees.

Permitted persons in essential industry to join the six-month program, regardless of age.

Paid six-month trainees $50 a month. (Administration bill had recommended $30).

Authorized drafting for two years the six-month trainees who did not carry out reserve duties satisfactorily. They could also be ordered to active duty for 45 days if they did not perform annual 17 days training.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson April 26 said the Defense Department preferred to have the authority to draft youths into the six-month program. But he added that "it doesn't ruin the bill" if the training program was made voluntary.

Floor Action (HR 5297)

The House May 19 postponed action on HR 5297 after three days of debate. Adoption of an anti-segregation amendment had jeopardized enactment of the bill.

Postponement was through adoption of a motion by the Committee of the Whole House to rise from its deliberations without acting either to pass or reject the bill. The motion, by Carl Vinson (D Ga.), was adopted by a 161-124 teller vote.

Vinson moved for postponement after failing to remove from the bill an amendment by Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D N.Y.) to prohibit enlistments in or transfers to racially segregated reserve units, including the National Guard. Powell's amendment was agreed to May 18 by a 126-87 standing vote. The House May 19 affirmed its acceptance of the Powell amendment by rejecting a Vinson amendment. Vinson would have rewritten amended sections of the bill so as to delete Powell's amendment and to delete language which Powell said would sanction segregation. Vinson's amendment was rejected by a 116-143 standing vote and a 143-167 teller vote.

Also adopted May 18 was an amendment that would have banned the assignment of U.S. servicemen to any country which, by agreement with the U.S., exercised jurisdiction over American personnel. The amendment was directed at the NATO Status of Forces treaty. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 337-38.)

PRELIMINARY TO UMT?

DEBATE -- During the first two days of debate, the bill's proponents contended that it was needed to provide an effective reserve and keep down the size and cost of the standing Army. Opponents charged that it was the opening wedge for Universal Military Training. Debate May 19 focused on the anti-segregation amendment.

May 17 -- Overton Brooks (D La.) -- HR 5297 "is in no sense a UMT plan.... It is not permanent...compulsory (or) universal legislation."

Olin E. Teague (D Texas) -- "It seems strange...that we should provide induction to meet the needs of the regular military service and should be too timid to provide induction to meet the needs of the reserve."

May 18 -- Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "This legislation is a vital part of the Eisenhower program for peace; it is the price we must pay for liberty and security."

George S. Long (D La.) -- The bill "leaves the door wide open for" UMT.

SEGREGATION ISSUE

May 19 -- Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D N.Y.) -- "The effort...of my friend from Georgia (Vinson) to get support for his amendment has but one objective, to destroy the action the committee took yesterday (in passing Powell's amendment). Under the language (in HR 5297) the National Guard has the power to go into the reserve and put men in their National Guard, whether it is segregated or integrated. I say by my amendment they cannot do it as long as they are segregated."

Vinson -- Powell "has no grounds for complaint because the language which he criticizes will not be in there" if the Vinson amendment is accepted.

NATIONAL GUARD "WRECKED"

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- "...if these (Powell) amendments should stay in the bill...it would mean the defeat of, or the recommittal of this legislation." The Powell amendment was "so broad as to practically wreck the (National) Guard in many of the states where integration has progressed...."

Powell -- If the House retains the Powell amendment "I will vote for the UMT bill even though it is against my conscience...so that no one can say that I used the amendment...as a gimmick to destroy this bill.... Is sectionalism more important than national loyalty?"

E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) offered an amendment to exclude high school students under the age of 19 from eligibility to enlist in the six-month training program, and to raise the maximum age from 19 to 20. Vinson said he was willing to accept Thomson's amendment, but the House neglected to vote. When the Vinson amendment came to a vote, the Chair put the question as the Vinson amendment as amended by the Thomson amendment. However, the Parliamentarian's office told CQ this was a "mistake," that the Thomson amendment had not been made part of the Vinson amendment.

(See Congressional Record, May 17, 18 and 19.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 18 -- Adam C. Powell, Jr., (D N.Y.) -- Provide, under the six-month training and reserve program, that no one could enlist in racially segregated reserve or National Guard units or be transferred to such units. Standing vote, 126-87.

Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) -- Prohibit assignment of members of the armed forces who joined after enactment of the bill to any country permitted, by agreement with the U.S., to have jurisdiction over U.S. personnel. Standing, 174-56.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 18 -- Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) -- Permit students over 17 to take 91 days of active training annually for four summers and then serve one year in the standby reserve, as an alternative to other forms of military service. Standing, 77-113; teller vote, 109-145.

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Reduce required length of active and reserve service to four (rather than eight) years. Standing, 85-127.

May 19 -- Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- Rewrite sections of the bill to delete the Powell anti-segregation amendment; delete language authorizing the Defense Department to assign reservists to National Guard units involuntarily; and incorporate the Bow amendment on overseas assignments. Standing, 116-143; tellers, 143-167.

SENATE DECLINES TO ACT

President Eisenhower, asked at his May 18 press conference whether he approved the reserve bill as reported from Committee, said: "I support it very actively and urgently hope that it will be passed."

Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) May 21 declared that the Senate would take no action on a military reserve bill until the House acted. He was supported in this attitude by Chairman Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), however, stated in a speech May 20 that the whole reserve system was "woefully poor," and called for early Senate passage of a reserve bill. Sens. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) and A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) jointly warned that in the absence of a sound reserve system the armed services cuts called for by President Eisenhower might be unwise.

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. declared May 21 that the House would recall and pass the reserve bill because "we have to have it."

Sen. Johnson told newsmen June 6: "The issue (segregation) that is now holding up passage of this crucial measure is one that has been settled in a number of different forms by the courts and the executive agencies. Congress is no longer a meaningful forum for such debate."

Defense Department officials, testifying for the draft-extension bill (HR 3005) June 10, appealed to the Senate Armed Services Committee for early consideration of a reserve bill. But Chairman Russell said June 11 he would oppose any attempt to attach a reserve bill to the draft-extension legislation.

PRESIDENT APPEALS TO VOTERS

President Eisenhower June 17, from the "underground Pentagon" where he stayed during a Civil Defense test, appealed directly to the voters to press for a "proper" reserve bill.

He said that "one trained reserve battalion in the proper place would be worth five divisions located a thousand miles away" in a bombing disaster. He termed the reserve program "so important" that "we cannot allow any extraneous matter of any kind" to kill it.

NEW HOUSE BIL

A compromise military reserve bill (HR 6900) was introduced June 20 by Chairman Carl Vinson (D Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee in an attempt to get the stalled program moving again.

It was described as a "skeleton" of the original reserve plan by Chairman Overton Brooks (D La.) of Armed Services Subcommittee No. 1. Vinson attempted to get full Committee approval of HR 6900 at a June 21 meeting, but the Committee voted 16-14 to send the bill to Brooks' Subcommittee.

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) June 20 said he approved of HR 6900 and thought it would be passed. Following a conference with President Eisenhower June 20, Martin said the President was "not too pleased" with the Vinson bill.

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services Subcommittee No. 1.

ACTION -- June 22 approved for the full Committee an amended version of HR 6900.

Major changes from the earlier, stalled bill (HR 5297) eliminated all reference to the National Guard, softened penalties provided for violation of the special teen-age training program, and lowered the total reserve obligation from eight to six years.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D N.Y.) June 22 accused House leaders of trying to force through a "dishonest" compromise that would bypass his amendment. On June 23, Powell rejected a personal appeal from President Eisenhower that he not offer anti-segregation amendments to HR 7000.

In a letter dated June 21, the President wrote Powell that "progress in ending segregation is difficult if not impossible if we are to depend on incorporating non-segregation clauses in legislation that the Senate will not favorably consider and hence will never become law." The President added that "no legislation, however meritorious, containing such a (non-segregation) provision has ever passed the Senate."

Powell said the President committed "a major error of fact." He explained that the Senate in 1940 had passed the Draft Act with an amendment prohibiting discrimination. He said interpretations of this by some commanders led to segregation, and thus, he said, it was necessary to spell out requirements in the reserve bill.

COMPARISON WITH HR 5297

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House floor, HR 7000 embodied most of the provisions of HR 5297 but carried these changes:

Reduced the total service obligation of men who enlisted for two years active duty from eight to six years. Also reduced to six years the obligation of those who had served in the armed forces since June 19, 1951.

Gave the President authority to call up one million members of the Ready Reserve without Congressional approval.

Omitted all language about the National Guard and militia.

Provided 45 days of active duty as a penalty for those who did not fulfill reserve obligations.

Allowed men under 18½ to fulfill their military obligation by attending Ready Reserve drills until their 28th birthday.

Floor Action (HR 7000)

The House July 1 passed HR 7000 by voice vote. One amendment was agreed to which would provide that youths volunteering for the special six-month training program must have completed high school or be 19 years of age. An amendment designed to eliminate segregation in National Guard units was rejected on a 105-156 standing vote.

A motion by H.R. Gross (R Iowa) to strike out the enacting clause was defeated by voice vote. A motion by Charles P. Nelson (R Maine) to recommit the bill for further study was rejected by a 52-161 standing vote.

DEBATE -- Overton Brooks (D La.) -- HR 7000 would "provide the machinery by which our reserve forces may be so organized and trained that, in the event of war, they can be mobilized quickly to augment the active forces in combat and to carry out internal security missions here at home.... This bill will provide authority to increase the size and to strengthen the reserve forces and will assure particpation in reserve training."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- HR 7000 "is not half as good a bill as its proponents think it is, nor is it half as bad as its opponents believe. It is more or less of an innocuous thing, and if kept as it is, I can see that it certainly would not do any harm and, if properly administered, I think it could materially strengthen our reserves and increase the security of our country.... There is no compulsion in this (bill). It is voluntary. It does give the youth of the land a chance to choose the branch of service they serve in under the reserve unit of the different services, and it shortens the length of obligated service from eight years to six years."

Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.) -- HR 7000 was necessary to keep the nation prepared to meet any threat to U.S. security from "the ever-increasing armed might of Communist Russia and her satellites...." He opposed Universal Military training "and I will continue to oppose it. This bill...has none of the elements of UMT.... It even reduces the degree of compulsion imposed by existing law."

Nelson -- "This bill, rather than strengthening the reserves, would weaken them and also weaken our active forces...."

GUARD CALLED "ESCAPE HATCH"

Adam Clayton Powell (D N.Y.) -- "...if HR 7000 is passed without my (National Guard antisegregation) amendment, the National Guard will still be an escape hatch for those boys who refuse to serve in a...democratic, integrated Army." President Eisenhower "has been and is now being used by a distinct minority who if they themselves tried to present this plan before us would be laughed out of this room.... I charge today that the President...has been deliberately misinformed, misled, and falsely maneuvered into a position which will ultimately do harm to our country."

Philip J. Philbin (D Mass.) -- "...this bill, insofar as boys already drafted or enlisted...are concerned... requires them under pain of punishment to remain in the reserves after they have completed their tour of active duty. If the bill is enacted, Congress would thus be changing the rules of the game while the game is in progress. There are thousands of young men who entered the various services...believing that when they had completed their tour of duty they would be free to resume their civilian pursuits unhampered and unfettered by further military obligation."

(See Congressional Record, July 1.)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) -- Provide that youths volunteering for the six-month training program must have completed high school or reached 19 years of age before enlisting. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Powell -- Deny draft immunity currently given to teen-age volunteers in the National Guard if they joined segregated units. Standing, 105-156.

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Authorize the National Security Training Commission to supervise and report to Congress on training given the six-months' volunteers. Standing, 54-122.

August E. Johansen (R Mich.) - Exempt from reserve training requirements persons on active duty prior to the enactment of HR 7000. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- July 7, 8, 11 on HR 7000.

TESTIMONY -- July 7 -- Chairman Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), in a statement opening the hearing, said HR 7000 would place "our prior servicemen...right where they were at the time of Korea. (They are) the only men available...to shoulder the heavy burden of an active, combat-ready reserve."

Rep. E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) said the existing reserve program was "dangerously weak" because most career officers wanted it that way. Thomson, a World War II infantry officer, said he and other experienced young officers were not called during the Korean War "because it would break up the playhouse for promotion which we called the WPA." He defined "WPA" as the "West Point Protective Association." He said he and other officers quit the reserve because they were convinced the Defense Department had no real interest in it.

George D. Riley of the AFL said the new program would be "frankly experimental" and called for a full Congressional review two years after it took effect. He also said an appeals procedure "should be set up under which the reservist would have the opportunity to contest his induction for 45 days training."

KOREAN RECALL CITED

Seaborn P. Collins of the American Legion said an effective reserve program would need compulsory features. He called for Senate passage of HR 7000 "if for no other reason (than) to prevent a repetition of the Korean War mobilization when more than 800,000 World War II veterans were called back into military service, even though more than 2 million young men who came of military age between V-J day and the outbreak of hostilities in Korea were not called at all."

James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union said the entire reserve program should be delayed and the Pentagon directed to "correct ills of the present reserve program." Although the Farmers Union was "unalterably opposed to universal military training," Patton said it would support a voluntary reserve program. Few farmers, he continued, could attend 48 drill periods and two weeks of field training a year, as required by HR 7000. He suggested deferments be given to farmers, scientists, skilled industrial workers, and similar groups.

Edmund Claxton of the National Association of Manufacturers supported HR 7000 but suggested that limited numbers of young scientists and engineers be screened and divided between "both the military and essential industry."

July 8 -- The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People proposed an anti-segregation amendment. A National Guard Association spokesman said he did not care if the Guard was included in the bill, while a Reserve Officers Association representative asked that the Guard be included.

In a letter, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson urged retention of "enforcement measures" and a requirement for eight years service for youths. Chairman Russell proposed giving $400 bonuses to all persons who joined the active reserve and eliminating all obligatory features.

July 11 -- Sen. Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) backed compulsory reserve training, as did Assistant Secretary of Defense Carter L. Burgess and Adm. Arthur E. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Radford assured Russell the Administration would not propose a big military budget cut if the reserve plan was enacted.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), a Committee member, July 6 said he favored broadening the reserve plan "to cover draft age men who have done no duty at all." He supported a proposal to free draftees, who serve two years, or volunteers, who serve longer, from additional reserve training.

REVISED BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee July 13 reported HR 7000 (S Rept 840), with amendments. As sent to the Senate floor, the measure included provisions differing from the House version that would:

Eliminate compulsory reserve training for persons in active service up to 30 days after enactment of the program.

Grant bonuses of between $200-$600 to men currently serving in combat reserve units or with 18 months' active service, who enlisted in the active reserve of the Army or Marines before July 1, 1957.

Restore to eight years the total active service and reserve duty obligation, with at least five years to be spent on active duty and in the Ready Reserve.

Open the special teen-age training program to youths between 17-20 years of age by eliminating the requirement that youths be 19 years old or high school graduates before they could participate in the special program.

Permit the executive branch to give the youths from three to six months' active training.

Remove the ceiling of 250,000 on the number of persons eligible for the special program.

Cut the 10-year obligation of National Guard members if they volunteered for three months active training with regular service organizations and spent a total of eight years with the Guard.

Subject those who did not fulfill reserve training satisfactorily to induction.

Floor Action

The Senate July 14 passed HR 7000 by a roll-call vote of 80-1 after agreeing to the Committee amendments and two floor amendments. (For voting, see chart, p. 131.)

The lone vote against passage was cast by William Langer (R N.D.), who earlier had unsuccessfully tried to attach a rider to the bill which would have set up a new scale of income taxes for persons earning more than $20,000 yearly. The amendment would have increased tax rates so that the government would take everything an individual earned above $25,000 a year. His proposed amendment was not voted on, as the Senate, on a division vote, sustained a point of order brought by William F. Knowland (R Calif.) that Langer's proposal was unconstitutional.

Another proposed amendment, which would have prohibited any member of the armed forces from serving in a foreign country which, through treaty with the U.S., exercised criminal jurisdiction over U.S. personnel, was rejected by a 14-70 roll-call vote.

(On July 21, Sens. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) and Pat McNamara (D Mich.) said they regretted their votes in favor of the bill.)

DISCRIMINATION REGRETTED

DEBATE -- Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "I believe it is very tragic that in our military forces, on whom we depend to defend our security...we should still be willing to permit discrimination...I expect to vote for the bill but with misgivings and heartaches."

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Supported the amendment to prohibit the stationing of servicemen in countries which would have criminal jurisdiction over them. "The Senator from Indiana (William E. Jenner (R) who offered the amendment) is absolutely right...because we (of the Judiciary Committee) found that our soldiers in foreign countries who were accused of crime were kept in jail month after month after month, and were denied bail."

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- "Out of simple fairness to the men who have already served in the armed forces, compulsory features for securing trainees are completely justified, and I have grave apprehension that it will be found necessary yet to resort to some such program before we can have a strong reserve...."

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- Opposed the bonus provision. "I do not think it is necessary to pay American boys for patriotism. I do not think we are lending anything to strength when we put materialism...above the natural desire which should exist in the heart of every young man to serve his country."

(See Congressional Record, July 14.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Direct the National Security Training Commission to submit to the Secretary of Defense recommendations for the personal safety, health, and morals of the Ready Reserve members, including regulations on alcoholic beverages. Voice.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Provide graduates of the Air Force Officers Candidate School with the same consideration given ROTC graduates for active commissions. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

William E. Jenner (R Ind.) -- Bar the service of any member of the armed forces, including reserves, in any foreign country with which the United States had a treaty or agreement authorizing the country to exercise criminal jurisdiction over U.S. military personnel. Roll call, 14-70.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 21 reported (H Rept 1335) a compromise version of the military reserve forces bill (HR 7000).

Sen. Russell, conference chairman, conceded that the bill probably would not increase the combat-ready reserve from 800,000 to 2.9 million men in four years, as the Administration sought. But he added: "We now have a workable bill, and this is as far as we can go at this time."

In their major compromises, the conferees:

Agreed to the Senate provision that anyone in service from June 19, 1951, until enactment of the bill did not have to train in the reserves as specified in the new legislation but would come under the 1951 law. The House sought to make July 27, 1953, the deadline date.

Stipulated that the total service obligation, except for those in the six-month training program, would be six years. The Senate sought a total of eight years but conferees agreed to the House version.

Accepted the Senate provision that the training period should not be less than three nor more than six months. The House bill did not set a minimum.

Set the annual limit for enlistments in the six-month program at 250,000 men. The Senate version had no set maximum.

Scrapped Senate cash bonuses for enlistments by trained men into the Ready Reserve for House incentives which reduced the total service obligation of men already on active duty and permitted others an early release from active duty, in return for participation in the Ready Reserve.

Altered the Senate provision authorizing drafting of six-month trainees if they did not fulfill their reserve training and agreed on the House's 45-day active duty provision as a penalty.

Accepted the Senate provision cutting draft-deferred Guardsmen's service if they volunteered for three-months active training.

House Action

The House July 25 agreed to the conference report by a 315-78 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 160.)

DEBATE -- Overton Brooks (D La.) -- After the conferees agreed that men in service before enactment of the bill should not be required to participate in reserve training, "the serious problem arose of providing trained men for the Ready Reserve over...the next two years, which is the period when persons serving on active duty will be discharged with no obligation to participate in reserve training." By adopting two voluntary programs, "we believe we have offered sufficient incentives to these young men to voluntarily...work off their Ready Reserve obligation."

Roy W. Wier (D Minn.) -- Despite compromises, the bill still is "an opening wedge to Universal Military Training."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "If there is one person who could smell a rat and detect Universal Military Training even before he saw it, it would be...Dewey Short.... One reason I am for this bill...is that if it is wisely administered by the Defense Department...they can build up an adequate reserve,...reduce the number of men in the standing forces, and we can let the draft expire in 1959."

Senate Action

The Senate July 26 agreed to the conference report by voice vote, clearing the bill for the White House.

DEBATE -- Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- To encourage servicemen to participate in the Ready Reserve program "during the two-year period before the effects of the compulsory features (of the bill) would become apparent," conferees dropped the Senate's "monetary bonus feature" and substituted "a time bonus."

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Opposed the conference report, arguing that it made it impossible for a young man "to plan his future," and that its training provisions would work hardships on farmers.

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- While the bill "does not go as far as we should like to have it go, I trust that it will be administratively feasible."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- A study of the hearings on the bill convinced him he was wrong to have voted for the bill July 14, and that "establishment of a compulsory reserve system at this time is not advisable... If compulsion is necessary to meet the reserve demands of the Army, I cannot understand the wisdom of the Pentagon in reducing the size of the Army by 25 percent."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- On July 21, Neuberger and Pat McNamara (D Mich.) announced that they regretted their original votes in favor of the bill. As an alternative to the compulsory features of the reserve program, Neuberger, with the co-sponsorship of Langer, McNamara, Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), Wayne Morse (D Ore.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), introduced a bill (S 2602) to grant educational benefits similar to those in the expired GI Bill as incentive for voluntary participation in reserve training.

PRESIDENT'S COMMENTS

President Eisenhower signed HR 7000 into PL 305 Aug. 9. He said the measure fell "short" of what he sought but would strengthen the reserve structure because:

"It provides a statutory means of assuring that our federal reserves will be composed of prior-trained men on a planned basis.

"It will permit an increase in the Ready Reserve manpower ceiling from 1,500,000 to 2,900,000.

"It clearly establishes the obligation to participate in reserve training and provides for effective and reasonable enforcement measures to achieve this participation.

"It authorizes the President to order up one million Ready Reservists in an emergency proclaimed by him."

He said he was concerned by the failure to require prior training in the ranks of the National Guard and regretted the discrepancy between the pay of six-month trainees and draft-exempt Guardsmen.

Mr. Eisenhower also expressed disappointment that the bill did not authorize the drafting of young men into the reserve components and National Guard if quotas could not be filled by volunteers.

Group Stands

Strongest support for the Administration's reserve program came from veterans' groups while opposition was voiced by several religious and women's groups and others. (See Lobby Roundup, pp. 672ff.)

Leaders of 10 veterans' organizations June 3 wrote President Eisenhower that they would "vigorously direct efforts" to secure passage of legislation to strengthen the reserves.

The letter was signed by representatives of the American Legion, Military Order of World Wars, Reserve Officers Association, American Veterans of World War II, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans, Marine Reserve Officers Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary and the National Security Committee.

Admitting that they differed over specific details of the reserve program, the groups said they backed the bill in general because "we believe the security of our country imperatively requires enactment of this legislation."

The National Grange, in a letter read into the Congressional Record June 24, and the CIO, in one read into the Record June 28, opposed the reserve plan.

After passage of HR 7000, the American Legion July 29 said the military reserve program "lacks some of the strong features" of the Legion proposals but represents a "major step forward."

The August newsletter of the Friends Committee on National Legislation said the reserve program was a "long step in giving the military great control over the lives of individual citizens."

MILITARY PUBLIC WORKS

HR 6829 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 865) June 20, 1955.

- Passed by a 316-2 roll-call vote of the House June 27. (See p. 156.)
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 694) June 30, with amendments.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 1.
- Conference report (H Rept 1083) agreed to by the House July 7, and by the Senate July 11, by voice votes.

P.L. 161 -- Signed into law July 15.

HR 6829 authorized the armed services and the Central Intelligence Agency to spend $2,360,530,300 on construction projects in fiscal 1956.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 6829 allotted for military public works:

Army	$ 533,904,000
Navy	564,224,300
Air Force	1,207,902,000
Central Intelligence Agency	54,500,000
TOTAL	$2,360,530,300

It provided for classified installations: Army, $223,993,000; Navy, $151,342,400; Air Force, $14,196,000.

Other provisions authorized:

Transfer of the Air Force Air Research and Development Command from Baltimore, Md., to a site to be determined.

For restoring damaged or destroyed facilities: Army, $10 million; Navy, $60 million; Air Force, $5 million.

The Army to spend $160.5 million for anti-aircraft facilities, most of them Nike guided missile positions.

The Air Force to spend $234,996,000 for European bases and $98,552,000 for aircraft control and warning systems.

The armed forces to spend $253,902,300 to build or rehabilitate 20,081 military family housing units.

For new installations:

Army West Coast Ammunition Terminal, Calif., $3,209,000.

Naval auxiliary air stations at Port Isabel, Texas, $5,544,000, and New Iberia, La., $24,361,000.

Air Force Air Defense Command facilities at Buckingham Weapons Center, Fort Myers, Fla., $11,577,000, and the greater Milwaukee, Wis., area, $16,608,000.

Central Intelligence Agency headquarters, $53,500,000, including $1 million for land acquisition.

HR 6829 also authorized the Secretary of Defense to provide $100 million worth of family housing for overseas personnel with proceeds from the sale of Commodity Credit Corp. farm surpluses.

The First Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 7278--PL 219) granted $442,628,300 for Navy construction, $994,291,000 for Air Force construction, $485,077,000 for Army construction -- to be transferred from other funds previously appropriated -- and $5.5 million for CIA. (See p. 242.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- May 4 - June 14.

ACTION -- June 20 reported (H Rept 685) HR 6829 authorizing appropriations of $2,368,998,900 for Army, Navy, Air Force, and Central Intelligence Agency construction, $14,646,600 more than the Defense Department sought.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, HR 6829 authorized: $551,105,000 for Army, $596,140,900 for Navy, and $1,165,453,000 for Air Force public works.

$50 million for a new CIA headquarters building and $6 million for land acquisition.

Floor Action

The House June 27 passed HR 6829 by a 316-2 roll-call vote, after agreeing to two amendments offered from the floor and accepted by the Armed Services Committee. (For voting, see chart, p. 156.)

DEBATE -- William M. Colmer (D Miss.) -- Urged passage of a bill (HR 34) to authorize a joint Congressional committee on the budget. "We are incapable of going into these (military public works) matters in detail... This is one of the weaknesses of our system of operating in the Congress," which should not have to rely "entirely upon the people who propose" the projects. "The Kremlin wants neither war nor peace..." The Russians want "us to spend ourselves into bankruptcy, and we are doing a pretty good job."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "By our own preparedness we can make aggression an enterprise of disaster for any potential enemy. The Air Force program for the defense of the United States is based solidly on that premise."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- General Motors Corp. headed the list of private concerns that won government bids from July 1, 1950, to Dec. 31, 1954, when GM received 6.8 percent of the contracts. The awards to GM were worth $7,036,900,000.

Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) -- "So what? General Motors today has 10 percent of all the machinery of...industries producing war goods."

George A. Dondero (R Mich.) -- "I have never heard anything or seen anything in the public press that the contracts which General Motors gets from the federal government were unfairly obtained."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Lawrence H. Smith (R Wis.) -- Name a facility in greater Milwaukee, Wis., "Richard Bong Air Force Base," after the late World War II ace pilot. Voice.

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- Give the Secretaries of Army, Navy, and Air Force discretionary authority to acquire FHA-insured houses near military installations. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- May 9 - June 27, intermittently.

ACTION -- June 30 reported HR 6829 (S Rept 694) to authorize appropriations of $2,357,317,300 for armed forces and Central Intelligence Agency public works. The Committee recommendation was $11,681,600 less than the House voted.

Floor Action

The Senate July 1 passed the bill by voice vote, with Committee amendments.

DEBATE -- Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) -- The bill would authorize land acquisition of 31,020 acres, including transfer to the Army of 10,700 acres of the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge, Okla., for training men at Fort Sill in the use of new, long-range field-artillery weapons.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- "There are only two practical alternatives to using Fort Sill for artillery firing purposes, namely, either to obtain some additional range or to abandon the post...We would be destroying a wildlife area which cannot be re-created...in a thousand years... It may not be destroyed by the proposed operation. At the same time, its value as a wildlife refuge would be greatly impaired."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Authorize the secretaries of the armed services in fiscal 1956 and 1957 to lease 1,000 housing units near Nike sites for military use at rentals up to $150 a month. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 7, reported (H Rept 1083) a compromise version of HR 6829 setting $2,360,530,300 as the total appropriation for military and Central Intelligence Agency public works construction. The figure was less than the amount voted by the House and more than approved by the Senate.

Provisions stricken in conference included: transfer of the Air Force Air Research and Development Command from Baltimore, Md., to Dayton, Ohio; a $300,000 grant for new quarters for the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; expansion of Bancroft Hall, Naval Academy dormitory, and establishment of an auxiliary Naval Air station in Annapolis, Md. The future site for the Air Force research command was not specified.

Retained were provisions voted by the Senate dealing with new Army, Navy, and Air Force installations; the amendment of Sen. Stennis authorizing the armed services to lease housing units near Nike bases, and fund authorizations for classified installations.

ACTION -- The House agreed to the compromise version July 7, the Senate July 11, clearing HR 6829 for the President.

NAVAL SHIP PROGRAM

HR 4393 -- Reported by the House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 209) March 15, 1955.

- Passed by a 373-3 roll-call vote of the House April 21. (See p. 144.)

Although the Navy in previous years had been authorized to build the ships described in HR 4393, the House Armed Services Committee, in reporting the bill, said it wanted an annual review by Congress of the Navy program. The Senate took no action on the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 4393 would have authorized construction of the following ships, all of which were to be charged against previously authorized and unobligated tonnage:

One 60,000-ton aircraft carrier (Forrestal class).

Six destroyer leaders and six destroyers.

Three nuclear-powered submarines, four regular submarines, and one guided-missile submarine.

Landing craft not to exceed 14,000 tons.

Two minesweepers, two escort vessels, two ammunition ships, one general stores ship, and five patrol vessels.

HR 4393 also would have authorized the Navy to modernize certain existing vessels and convert them to:

Six aircraft carriers.

One heavy cruiser, one guided-missile light cruiser, and one guided-missile destroyer.

Twelve radar picket escort vessels, two cable repairing and laying ships, one seaplane tender, and four ocean radar station ships.

Congress in 1955 appropriated $1,387,634,000 for the Navy shipbuilding program in the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for fiscal 1956 (HR 6042 -- PL 157). (See p. 219.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- March 7 and 9.

TESTIMONY -- March 7 -- Favoring passage of HR 4393 were Secretary of Navy Charles S. Thomas; James H. Smith, Jr., Assistant Secretary of Navy (air); Rear Adm. Wilson D. Leggett, Bureau of Ships; and Adm. Donald B. Duncan, vice chief of Naval operations. Thomas defended the aircraft carrier as "indispensable" in modern warfare, and said it would be "extremely difficult to destroy, even with an atomic bomb." Duncan read a statement by Adm. Robert B. Carney, chief of Naval operations, in which Carney called the carrier "the most important ship" in the program.

March 9 -- Leggett said the Navy had "developed and tested out a wash-down system which enables any ship to rapidly decontaminate itself" from nuclear radiation.

ACTION -- The Committee March 9 voted, 34-0, to report favorably the bill to authorize a $1.3 billion program for Naval construction. HR 4393 was reported March 15 (H Rept 209).

Floor Action

The House April 21 passed HR 4393 by a roll-call vote of 373-3. Seven Representatives voted "present," while Reps. Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.), Robert D. Harrison (R Neb.), and Fred Marshall (D Minn.) cast dissenting votes. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.)

DEBATE -- Errett P. Scrivner (R Kan.) -- "The only enemy we are talking about now is Russia...Any (super) carrier would be their No. 1 target...they would be able to put that carrier out of business before it got very many miles from home." "It is ill-advised to bring all these details (of naval programs) out in public... I wish the Russian legislature would hold a session like this..."

Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- "The speed and mobility of a carrier task force makes it difficult to find and difficult to hit...The carrier...enjoys a great advantage in its ability to avoid (hydrogen bomb) fallout." The recommendation for construction of the super carrier was one "we may ignore only at our peril and at the peril of the safety of our homeland."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "The battleship has become obsolete, as we all know. Today it is the aircraft carrier that is the highly mobile, hard-hitting, effective weapon."

Leon H. Gavin (R Pa.) -- "This is, I hope, the first of a series of bills to accomplish an annual review of the Navy shipbuilding program. I believe that is one of the most important functions of the Congress...to authorize the specific numbers and types of ships the Navy is to have."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Carl T. Durham (D N.C.) -- Name proposed super aircraft carrier "USS Kitty Hawk" instead of "USS Congress" as proposed in original bill. Voice.

STATE MILITIAS

HR 7289 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee without a written report, July 26, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 26.
- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee without a written report, July 30.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote, July 30.

P.L. 363 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

HR 7289 authorized the states and territories to establish militias for homefront protection.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 7289:

Allowed states to maintain defense forces in addition to the Army National Guard and the Air National Guard.

Prohibited state defense forces from being drafted into the armed forces of the United States.

Prohibited membership in state defense forces to members of the reserve forces.

Background

Legislation permitting states to maintain militias was requested Jan. 13, 1955, by President Eisenhower in a message to Congress that covered his proposals for strengthening armed forces reserves.

The President said it was a "matter of urgent importance" to insure that state forces would be available for local use if National Guard units were called into federal service.

A House fight over an anti-segregation amendment caused provisions pertaining to state militias and the National Guard to be deleted from HR 7000, which set up the military reserve program. (See p. 334.)

GI EDUCATION

HR 587 -- Reported by House Veterans' Affairs Committee (H Rept 8) Jan. 25, 1955.
- Passed by the House Jan. 27 by a 366-0 roll-call vote. (See page 136.)
- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 26) Feb. 8.
- Passed by the Senate Feb. 9 by voice vote.

P.L. 7 -- Signed into law, Feb. 15.

The bill allowed members of the armed forces serving as of Jan. 31, 1955, to continue to build up credits for education benefits under the Veterans' Readjustment Act of 1952 (the Korean GI Bill).

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 587:

Granted full educational entitlement under the Korean GI Bill (PL 550, 82nd Congress) to members of the armed forces who were on active duty on or before Jan. 31, 1955.

Specified that such an individual might continue to accrue entitlement to education at a specified rate until his first discharge, or until the maximum of 36 months entitlement had been accrued.

Set Jan. 31, 1965, as the final date for completing schooling under the bill.

Background

REFERENCE -- "GI Bill Extended to Korea Veterans." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 206-207.)

The Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952, following the general outlines of the GI Bill of 1944 for World War II veterans, included a provision requiring Korean veterans to start their schooling or training by Aug. 20, 1954, or two years after discharge, and finish it within seven years.

In 1954 Congress extended the time limits. PL 610 (83rd Congress) provided that veterans must start their education within three years after discharge from service and must complete it within eight years of discharge. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 319.)

President Eisenhower issued an executive order Jan. 1, 1955, that set Jan. 31 as the final date on which servicemen would be eligible for certain wartime benefits. The order had the effect of cutting off the serviceman's right to accumulate education and training time after Jan. 31. A White House statement Jan. 13 said the President favored passage of legislation similar to HR 587.

House

COMMITTEE -- Veterans' Affairs.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 24-25 on HR 587, introduced by Chairman Olin E. Teague (D Texas).

TESTIMONY -- The Committee heard favorable testimony on HR 587 from 15 Congressmen, officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, AMVETS, and American Legion, and members of executive agencies.

ACTION -- Jan. 25 the Committee unanimously reported HR 587 (H Rept 8) with an amendment to extend until 1965 (rather than 1967) the date by which GI schooling must be completed.

Floor Action

The House Jan. 27 passed HR 587 by a 366-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart, p. 136.) All speakers endorsed the objectives of the bill.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

ACTION -- Favorably reported HR 587 without amendment Feb. 8 (S Rept 26). The Committee voted unanimously after hearing 34 minutes of testimony.

The Senate Feb. 9 passed HR 587 by voice vote, without debate, and sent the bill to the President.

SURVIVORS' BENEFITS

HR 7089 -- Reported by House Select Committee on Survivors' Benefits (H Rept 993) June 28, 1955.

• Passed by the House by voice vote July 13. (For roll-call vote, see p. 158.)

The House in 1955 passed legislation (HR 7089) to amend the government's program of payments to the survivors of servicemen and some veterans. The bill also would place servicemen under a contributory social security setup instead of retaining the government-financed program.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate Finance Committee July 14, HR 7089 would have:

Increased Veterans Administration survivor benefits and repealed the existing $10,000 free insurance program.

Set the minimum monthly payment to a serviceman's dependent survivor at $112, plus 12 percent of his basic pay (a range of $122-$242 per month).

Revised the six months' death gratuity payment paid by the Defense Department, setting the range at $800-$3,000.

Authorized payment of the gratuity to survivors of men who died of service-connected causes within 120 days after separation from service.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Placed all servicemen under contributory social security, replacing the existing $160 per month gratuitous wage credit.

Removed Federal Employees' Compensation Act benefits currently granted reservists.

Authorized government reimbursement to the social security trust fund for the wage credits given servicemen since Sept. 15, 1940 ($21 million to be paid annually for 10 years to cover OASI payments already made, plus an estimated $380 million for future payments).

Authorized one application form for survivors, to be sent either to the Social Security Administration or the VA.

Background

The House set up a Select Committee in 1954 to study benefits provided by law for the surviving dependents of deceased servicemen.

The Select Committee released a report (H Rept 2682) on Dec. 21, 1954, stating that "thousands of survivors" were receiving monthly benefit payments in excess of the deceased's active duty pay. It added that other survivors were receiving benefits "inadequate to meet their basic minimum needs." The Committee recommended an overhaul of existing legislation.

President Eisenhower in his State-of-the-Union message, Jan. 6, 1955, declared that "we now have under study the system of benefits for veterans and for surviving dependents of deceased veterans and servicemen." On Jan. 14, the President named a seven-member Commission on Veterans' Pensions. Gen. Omar N. Bradley was appointed head of the Commission by Mr. Eisenhower March 5.

In a letter to Bradley, the President said he wanted recommendations for "modernization" of veterans benefits and "clarification of their relationship to our broader government social insurance and family protection programs." Target date for submission of the Commission report was first set at Nov. 1, 1955, later was extended until 1956.

The House Select Committee study was confined to payments to survivors. The Bradley Commission's investigation was on a broader scale and included veterans' pensions.

House

The House Feb. 2, by voice vote, agreed to continue its Select Committee on Survivors' Benefits (H Res 35). The resolution empowered the Committee to recommend legislation to improve the government program for taking care of the survivors of veterans and servicemen.

Members of the Committee were: Porter Hardy Jr. (D Va.), chairman; Olin E. Teague (D Texas); Paul J. Kilday (D Texas); William H. Bates (R Mass.); and Robert W. Kean (R N.J.).

COMMITTEE -- Select Committee on Survivors' Benefits.

HEARINGS -- April 19 through June 17, intermittently.

ACTION -- The Committee June 28 favorably reported (H Rept 993) HR 7089. (For Provisions, see above.)

Floor Action

The House July 13 passed HR 7089 by voice vote. A closed rule (H Res 295) prohibiting all but Committee amendments was adopted by a 376-24 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 158.)

DEBATE -- John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Opposed the closed rule because he wished to offer an amendment to provide $140 monthly for widows of privates and generals alike. The bill's provision basing the payment on rank and length of service "is un-American...class distinction."

William H. Bates (R Mass.) -- "Does the gentleman contend that the American Legion would support a bill which was un-American?"

Saylor -- Legion leaders "said that officially they are on record for (the provision) put privately they asked me to do everything I could to oppose it...Representatives of the VFW, DAV, and AMVETS...asked me to oppose this provision."

Porter Hardy, Jr. (D Va.) -- Because of "the interrelationship of the various benefits" in the bill, adoption of Saylor's amendment "would completely throw the whole thing out of kilter." In the first year of operation the new program would cost $14-$20 million more than current benefits, in five years the cost would be equal, and after 18 years, estimated "annual savings will be $83 million."

James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) -- "This extension of social security coverage (to servicemen) could be the opening wedge in the eventual abolishment of the Veterans Administration and its related services, including hospitalization and medical care."

OVERSEAS VOTING

HR 4048 -- Reported by House Administration Committee (H Rept 60) Feb. 18, 1955.

- Passed by the House Feb. 24, amended, by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Rules and Administration Committee (S Rept 580) June 17.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate, amended, July 20.
- Conference Report (H Rept 1625) agreed to by the Senate Aug. 1, by voice vote, (for roll-call vote, on a motion, see p. 135); and by the House, by voice vote, Aug. 2.

P. L. 296 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Congress in 1955 passed legislation to aid absentee voting by members of the armed forces, their dependents, and other citizens outside the territorial limits of the United States.

Some controversy focused on federal vs. states' rights in regard to writing election laws, and on attempts to prevent states from levying poll taxes on absentee voters. The final version of the bill made recommendations to the states for handling absentee voting.

PROVISIONS -- The Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955:

Repealed all of a 1942 law on the subject and all amendments to it.

Urged states to enact laws permitting servicemen, federal employees abroad, dependents of both groups, and merchant seamen to register for voting by use of uniform postcard applications, and to vote by absentee ballot.

Authorized the President to designate a department head to coordinate federal activities to assist absentee voting.

Background

Agitation for a strong servicemen's voting act started shortly after the enactment of the Sept. 16, 1942, measure (PL 712, 77th Congress) which set up voting machinery for the armed forces in World War II.

Legislators from the outset clashed over states' rights in making voting policies. In 1944, Congress enacted a law permitting servicemen to vote in that election only. President Franklin D. Roosevelt called the bill "wholly inadequate" but let it become law without his signature. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. I, 1945, p. 143.)

In 1951 an American Political Science Association committee reported that 24 states did not have adequate provisions for absentee voting by servicemen.

A bill sponsored by the Truman Administration providing machinery for servicemen voting was passed by the Senate on June 20, 1952, but was pigeonholed by a House Rules subcommittee. (See CQ Almanac, Vol VIII, 1952, p. 205.) In following years, states' rights arguments killed a number of other voting proposals.

In 1955 President Eisenhower, in Feb. 6 letters to state governors, urged states to adopt uniform absentee voting laws for overseas servicemen. The President said he had been informed that three-fourths of the states fell short of "criteria established in World War II as substantially necessary to assure effective overseas voting by service people." He attached to his letters copies of a bill (HR 3121), introduced by Rep. Karl M. LeCompte (R Iowa), calling for uniform provisions in state laws on absentee voting by servicemen and women.

House

COMMITTEE -- Administration.

ACTION -- Feb. 3 reported a bill (HR 3406 -- H Rept 20) to give servicemen permanent voting rights instead of restricting the privilege to wartime.

COMMITTEE -- Rules.

HEARING -- Feb. 8 on a request for a rule to bring HR 3406 to the House floor.

ACTION -- None.

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) said Feb. 10 that "as a result" of the Rules Committee hearing, the Administration Committee was giving "further consideration" to provisions in the bill that would have prohibited poll tax requirements for servicemen.

COMMITTEE -- Administration.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 17.

ACTION -- Feb. 18 reported a new bill (HR 4048 -- H Rept 60) recommending to the states means by which members of the armed services and other absentees overseas could vote.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 24 adopted minor committee amendments and passed HR 4048 by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, the bill would:

Establish procedures for the states to follow in regard to absentee voting.

Repeal a Sept. 16, 1942 Act which bypassed state voting requirements for servicemen during time of war.

Recommend extension of the voting franchise to federal employees working outside the territorial limits of the United States.

Authorize the President to designate the head of an executive department or agency to coordinate federal assistance under the bill.

DEBATE -- In brief debate that preceded passage, Reps. Karl M. LeCompte (R Iowa) and Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., (D Mass.) spoke in favor of the bill.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Rules and Administration.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- June 17 reported HR 4048 (S Rept 580) without amendment.

Floor Action

The Senate July 20 passed the bill by voice vote, with an amendment.

DEBATE -- Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.) -- The bill will permit the states, "within their own judgment and determination, (to) follow the federal pattern with relation to soldier voting."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- A number of states "have laws and constitutional provisions restricting...the poll tax exemption for members of the armed forces." Since 1951, the draft law has contained an exemption from the payment of poll taxes for persons drafted or enlisted under that law.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Hennings -- Retain Title I (exempting servicemen from poll taxes) of the Act of Sept. 16, 1942 (PL 712, 77th Congress). Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees Aug. 2 recommended (Rept 1625) deletion of Hennings' amendment, which would have enabled servicemen to vote without paying poll taxes, during wartime.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate Aug. 1 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report after rejecting, by a roll-call vote of 22-56, a motion by Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) to return the bill to conference. (For voting, see chart, p. 135.)

DEBATE -- Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.) -- "All existing legislation on the subject would be repealed by this one comprehensive bill.... The bill itself is simply a recommendation to the states that they enact legislation of this sort so that men and women in the service can vote at elections."

Morse -- Wanted the Hennings amendment reinstated. "I believe all who support progress in civil rights legislation in the Senate should vote to send the conference report back to conference."

HOUSE ACTION

The House Aug. 2 agreed, by voice vote, to the conference report on HR 4048. This action cleared the bill for the White House.

BILLS ACTED ON

How They Are Listed

Military and Veterans bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below, in order of bill number. (For all Bills Introduced in this Military and Veterans category, including bills not acted on, see page 589. For complete listing of Public Laws, by public law number, see page 104.)

The following summary of each bill gives description, sponsor, and date of action taken or page reference to a detailed legislative history.

In this Military and Veterans section, the Bills Acted On are divided into two groupings: Defense Policy; and Veterans. Each grouping is subdivided into those bills on which work was finished -- under the heading "Action Completed" -- and those not finished -- listed under "Unfinished Business."

CONGRESSIONAL, JUDICIAL PAY

S 462 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 25) Feb. 1, 1955.

HR 3828 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 49) Feb. 14.

- Passed by the House Feb. 16 by a 283-118 roll-call vote. (See p. 138.)
- Passed by the Senate, amended, Feb. 23 by a 62-24 roll-call vote. (See p. 117.)
- First conference report (H Rept 79) agreed to by voice vote of the House Feb. 25; rejected by the Senate by voice vote Feb. 25.
- Second conference report (H Rept 81) agreed to by the Senate Feb. 28, by voice vote and by the House March 1, by a 223-113 roll-call vote. (See p. 140.)

P.L. 9 -- Signed into law March 2.

The bill provided pay raises for Members of Congress, the Vice President, the Speaker of the House, federal judges, and certain officials of the Justice Department. The chief difference between the House and the Senate bills was a $2,500 expense allowance for Congressmen which would have been retained by the House. Both the Senate version and the final version of the bill deleted this item.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 3828 raised salaries to the following amounts:

$22,500 for Members of Congress, Delegates, and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico (from $15,000, including a $2,500 taxable expense allowance).

$45,000 for the Vice President and Speaker of the House (from $40,000), including $10,000 taxable expense allowance in both cases.

$35,500 for the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (from $25,500).

$35,000 for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court (from $25,000).

$25,500 for judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals, Court of Claims, Customs and Patent Appeals Court, and Military Appeals Court (from $17,500).

$23,000 for chief judge of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia (from $15,500).

$22,500 for judges of District Courts, Customs Court, and Tax Court (from $15,000).

$21,000 for the Deputy Attorney General (from $17,500).

$20,500 for the Solicitor General (from $17,500).

$20,000 for Assistant Attorneys General -- except Assistant for Administration -- (from $15,000).

The bill also:

Permitted the Attorney General to set salaries of U.S. attorneys from $12,000-$20,000 (existing maximum $15,000) and assistant and special U.S. attorneys at a maximum of $15,000 (from $12,000).

Gave judges of the Court of Military Appeals up to $15 a day for travel expenses.

Placed pay raises in effect March 1, 1955.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Salaries Commission," CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 408ff.

Congress in 1953 set up a Commission to review salaries of Congressmen and judges. The Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries made its report on Jan. 15, 1954. It proposed increases of $12,500 for Congressmen and District judges, and larger raises for other judges, including Supreme Court Justices. Congress did not act on the recommendation during 1954.

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union message Jan. 6, 1955, urged Congress "to approve a long overdue increase in the salaries of Members of Congress and of the federal judiciary to a level commensurate with their heavy responsibilities." Ex-President Harry S. Truman also urged the pay raises in a Feb. 16 statement.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- Feb. 14 reported a bill (HR 3828 -- H Rept 49) that recommended lower pay raises for Members of Congress and federal judges than had the Commission, and also provided raises for U.S. attorneys and staff employees of House committees.

Floor Action

HR 3828 was passed by the House Feb. 16, by a roll-call vote of 283-118. Voting for the bill were 166 Democrats and 117 Republicans; opposing it were 59 Representatives from each party. (For voting, see chart, p. 138.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 3828 would raise salaries to the following amounts:

$22,500 for Members of Congress, Delegates and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico (from $12,500), retaining the existing $2,500 taxable expense allowance.

$45,000 for the Speaker and Vice President (from $40,000), including the existing $10,000 expense allowance.

$35,500 for the Chief Justice of the United States (from $25,500).

$35,000 for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court (from $25,000).

$25,000 for judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals, Court of Claims, Customs and Patent Appeals Court, and Military Appeals Court (from $17,500).

$22,500 for judges of District Courts ($500 more for chief judge of D.C. court), Customs Courts and Tax Courts (from $15,000).

$21,000 for the Deputy Attorney General (from $17,500).

$20,500 for the Solicitor General (from $17,500).

$20,000 for each Assistant Attorney General except the Assistant Attorney General on Administration (from $15,000).

The bill would also:

Permit the Attorney General to set salaries of U.S. attorneys from $12,000-$20,000 (existing maximum $15,000) and assistant U.S. attorneys from $6,000-$15,000 (existing maximum $12,000).

Permit chairmen of standing House committees to set base salaries of professional staff members from $5,000-$10,000 and clerical staff members from $2,000-$10,000 (existing maximum for both, $8,000).

Permit gross salaries of staff members to equal the pay of the highest grade in the classified civil service.

Make pay raises for Vice President, Speaker, and Congressmen effective at the commencement of the 84th Congress and all other increases effective Jan. 1, 1955.

LIVING COSTS CITED

DEBATE -- Proponents of the bill said cost-of-living increases since the last pay raise for Congressmen in 1946 justified the $10,000 raise proposed in the bill. Citing the costs of maintaining two homes and travel between their districts and Washington, they said Congressmen with families to support could not meet expenses on their current salary.

Among those speaking for the bill were Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.), Reps. Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.), Martin Dies (D Texas) and Chauncey W. Reed (R Ill.). Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) warned that if Congressional and judicial salaries were not raised, the posts eventually would be filled only by "political hacks and millionaires."

Opponents contended passage of the bill would "open the floodgates" for raises for other groups. Others took the line of Rep. Thomas J. Lane (D Mass.), who said he could not vote himself a raise when there was heavy unemployment in his district. "I do not believe the voting public will look favorably" on the bill, Robert T. Ashmore (D S.C.) said.

Efforts to cut down increases provided in the bill were defeated. Reps. Usher L. Burdick (R N.D.) and Richard H. Poff (R Va.) were ruled out of order on attempts to have the salary raises take effect in 1957. The rule that brought the bill to the floor permitted only amendments to raise or lower salaries affected by the bill, or to delete provisions of it.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Woodrow W. Jones (D N.C.) -- Reduce by $5,000 proposed raises for Supreme Court Justices. Standing, 27-161.

Jones -- Reduce by $2,500 proposed raise for circuit court judges. Voice.

Jones -- Reduce by $2,500 proposed raise for district court judges. Voice.

Burdick -- Reduce by $5,000 proposed raise for Congressmen. Standing, 63-176.

Omar Burleson (D Texas) -- Delete provisions raising the ceiling on base pay of professional and clerical staff members of House committees. Standing, 126-123; teller vote, 139-146.

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- Delete provision dealing with clerical staff members. Standing, 77-117.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- On pay bills (S 462, 540), Jan. 25 and 28. S 462, introduced by Chairman Harley M. Kilgore (D W.Va.), would have carried out the recommendations of the Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries, including a $12,500 raise for Congressmen. S 540, introduced by Walter F. George (D Ga.) and Styles Bridges (R N.H.), would have provided a $7,500 raise.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 25 -- Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., supported pay increases and said salaries paid federal judges were inadequate to retain many able men on the bench and attract new ones. Similar testimony came from Loyd Wright, president of the American Bar Association, Morris Mitchell of the ABA, and Bernard G. Segal, who had headed the Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries.

Ex-Rep. Evan Howell (R Ill., 1941-47), a former Court of Claims judge, said he had resigned from both government positions because of the need for more income. Harold M. Kennedy, a former District judge, gave similar testimony.

Jan. 28 -- Appearing in favor of pay increases were William P. Rogers, deputy Attorney General; Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens, Court of Appeals, District of Columbia; Judge Don N. Laramore, Court of Claims; Henry L. Woolfender, Michigan Bar Association president; and Charles L. Rhyne, counsel to the Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries.

EXPENSE ITEM REPEALED

ACTION -- The full Judiciary Committee reported an amended version of S 462 (S Rept 25) Feb. 1.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Committee, the bill would have raised salaries to the following amounts:

$22,500 for Members of Congress (but repealing the existing $2,500 expense allowance).

$35,000 for the Vice President and the Speaker of the House, plus the existing $10,000 expense allowance.

$35,000 for the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

$34,500 for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

$25,500 for judges of appellate courts.

$25,500 for judges of District Courts, Customs Courts, and Tax Courts.

The Committee bill also would:

Permit reimbursement to Members of Congress for five round trips a year between their homes and Washington, at a rate to be fixed. These trips would be in addition to the one permitted under existing law for which Congressmen were paid 20 cents a mile.

Authorize official travel and maintenance expenses for judges of the Court of Military Appeals.

Set the effective date for all provisions as the first day of the month following enactment of the bill.

Floor Action

HR 3828 was passed by the Senate Feb. 23, by a 62-24 roll-call vote, after the text of the Committee version of S 462 was substituted for the provisions of the House bill. All attempts to delete or reduce proposed pay increases were defeated. (For voting, see chart, p. 117.)

The Senate insisted on its amendments and asked for a conference.

TWO DAYS OF DEBATE

DEBATE -- Feb. 21 -- The Senate leadership hoped the bill would be passed in one day but a lengthy speech by Wayne Morse (D Ore.), who said the subject deserved extensive debate, forced voting to be postponed.

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- Praised the thorough studies of the Commission on Judicial and Congressional Salaries which, in 1954, recommended pay increases of more than $10,000. The Judiciary Committee, he said, cut the proposed increases "by $5,000 all across the board."

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Since the last Congressional pay raise, federal employees had received five raises amounting to a total increase of 51 percent.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Stressed the need for better compensation in order to enlist or retain able Congressmen and judges.

Prescott Bush (R Conn.) -- Congressional salaries should not be raised while the budget was unbalanced but the raises for the judiciary were justified because judges were not permitted, in most cases, to earn outside income.

Morse -- "Members of Congress are now well paid. In my opinion, they are paid all they are worth." Instead, limits on particular expenses should be raised.

Feb. 23 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Congressional and judicial pay increases should not be "authorized with borrowed money," since only three of the preceeding 25 federal budgets had been balanced.

Allen J. Ellender (D La.) and Francis Case (R S.D.)-- Said proposed hikes in Congressional pay were too high.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Sought to include in the bill raises for Justice Department officials but Kefauver and Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) said the subject had not been studied by the Salary Commission and should be considered separately.

Morse was ruled out of order on an amendment to require the publishing of names and salaries of all Congressional employees. Under a debate limitation agreement, the Senate had ordered Feb. 21 that all amendments be germane to the bill.

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Most Congressmen are dependent on lectures, magazine articles or business connections for added income to meet expenses.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Feb. 23 -- Bush -- Delete increases for Congressmen, the Speaker and Vice President. Roll-call vote, 3-80.

Williams -- Provide that no salary increase should take effect until the federal budget were balanced. Roll call, 15-71.

Case (S.D.) -- Set Congressional salaries at $17,500. Voice vote.

Ellender -- Set Congressional salaries at $20,000. Voice.

Morse -- Increase allotments for clerical assistance, telephone, telegram and stamp expenses, and keep salaries at $12,500 plus $2,500 for expenses. Voice.

Morse -- Increase to $5,000 (from $3,000) Congressmen's tax deductions for living expenses. Voice.

Thye -- Raise salaries of Justice Department officials and U.S. Attorneys, as provided in House version of HR 3828. Voice.

First Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate Conference Committee Feb. 24 reported (H Rept 79) a compromise version of HR 3828 that would:

Set $22,500 as salary for Members of Congress.

Replace the $2,500 Congressional expense allowance (retained in the House bill but left out of the Senate's) with a $1,250 allowance payable on voucher for expenses actually incurred.

Set Supreme Court salaries as in the Senate bill and appellate court salaries as in the House bill.

Agree to House provisions raising the pay of top Justice Department officials, and the salary range of U.S. attorneys.

Accept Senate provisions permitting Congressmen expenses for six annual round trips between Washington and home, and providing travel expenses for Military Appeals judges.

Delete House provisions for raises for committee staff members (conferees urged exploration of legislative employees' salaries).

Place pay raises in effect March 1. (Senate would have made raises effective on first of month following enactment; House would have made legislative raises retroactive to Jan. 5, others effective Jan. 1).

Floor Action

The House adopted the first conference report by voice vote, and without debate, on Feb. 25.

The Senate rejected the report by voice vote Feb. 25 after a number of Senators attacked the proposed tax-deductible expense allowance of $1,250. John J. Williams (R Del.) moved for a second conference and offered a motion to instruct Senate conferees to insist on elimination of the item. His motion was agreed to by a 62-7 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 118.)

DEBATE -- Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) said the expense allowance might "raise in the public mind questions about the propriety of what we are doing for ourselves."

A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.), Williams, and Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) expressed similar views.

Second Conference

The second conference report (H Rept 81) was filed Feb. 28. It eliminated both the $1,250 expense allowance and the extra round trip travel provision.

Floor Action

The report was agreed to Feb. 28, by voice vote of the Senate, after Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) explained that in return for yielding on the expense allowance, the House conferees had insisted that the travel item be eliminated.

The House March 1, by a roll-call vote of 223-113, accepted the second conference report and sent the bill to the President. (For voting, see chart, p. 140.)

BILL SIGNED

President Eisenhower signed HR 3828 into Public Law 9 on March 2. The President said he approved the idea of encouraging able young men of modest means to serve the country. He said that members of the judiciary, as well as Congressmen, had been "badly underpaid."

Group Stands

Proposals for Congressional and judicial pay raises were of interest to a number of national organizations.

Sen. Kefauver inserted letters in the Feb. 21 "Congressional Record" from the National Grange, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and the National Society of Public Accountants, supporting the pay raises. The American Bar Association took the lead in urging judicial and Congressional pay boosts and also favored raises for Justice Department officials.

POSTAL PAY RAISE

S 1 -- Reported by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 41) March 2, 1955.

HR 4644 -- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 224) March 16.

- Failed to pass House under suspension of the rules, on a 120-302 roll-call vote March 21. (See p. 142.)

S 1 -- Passed by 72-21 roll-call vote of the Senate March 25. (See p. 121.)

- Passed by voice vote of the House after the text of HR 4644 was substituted, April 20. (For roll-call votes, see p. 144.)
- Conference report (H Rept 494) agreed to by the House on a 328-66 roll-call vote May 9 (see p. 148); by the Senate on a 66-11 roll-call vote May 11. (See p. 124.)
- Vetoed by President Eisenhower May 19.
- Senate, by a 54-39 vote, failed to override the veto May 24. (See p. 125.)

S 2061 -- Reported by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 382) May 26.

- Passed by 78-0 roll-call vote of the Senate June 1. (See p. 126.)
- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 728) June 2.
- Passed by 410-1 roll-call vote of the House, amended, June 7. (See p. 152.)
- Senate agreed, by voice vote, to House amendments June 7.

P.L. 68 -- Signed into law June 10.

President Eisenhower Jan. 11 requested an increase in mail rates and a 5 percent pay raise for all postal employees. He also proposed reclassification of certain postal workers, giving them an added 1.5 percent average increase. The Senate passed a bill providing a flat 10 percent increase with no reclassification features; the House a bill to raise pay an average 8.2 percent with reclassification.

A compromise on these two versions was agreed upon. A bill granting a flat 7 percent wage boost to all postal employees and an additional 1.59 percent average pay raise for certain employees to be reclassified was sent to the White House. It was vetoed by the President and the Senate failed to override the veto.

Congress then passed -- and the President signed -- legislation granting an average 8 percent pay raise through a flat 6 percent boost for all postal employees, and limited reclassification for certain others, giving them an added average pay hike of 2 percent. Congress took no action on the President's plea for an increase in postal rates.

The cost of the bill as it became law was estimated at about $200 million a year -- $165 million of it due to the pay raises alone. Pay increases which would have been provided by the vetoed bill were estimated at $173 million. The Administration's original wage request would have cost about $129 million annually.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law S 2061:

Granted all postal workers a 6 percent pay raise retroactive to March 1, 1955.

Reclassified postal jobs to provide an estimated average 2 percent salary increase for certain employees.

Continued city and rural letter carriers, postal clerks, and special delivery carriers in their existing salary brackets.

Provided automatic annual "step increases" for all postal employees.

Provided field service employees working between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. an extra 10 percent of their salary.

Changed Post Office Department paydays from twice a month to once every two weeks.

Regulated working hours so a regular working day could not extend longer than 10 consecutive hours.

Granted employees below Grade 9 time and a half for all work over eight hours a day.

Granted employees below Grade 9, for Saturday or Sunday work, compensatory time off during the next week, except in December, when time and a half would be paid for weekend work.

Raised the daily travel allowance of postal transportation clerks from $6 a day to $9 a day.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Postal Rates, Postal Pay Hikes." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 385ff.) "Vetoed Federal Pay Raise" (Vol. X, pp. 388ff.).

President Eisenhower in 1954 pocket vetoed a 5 percent pay raise bill for classified and postal workers, partly because it did not provide for increased postal rates.

In a Jan. 11, 1955, postal message to Congress, Mr. Eisenhower recommended "an increase in the average wage of postal employees along with correction of the serious inequities in the salary structure" in order to "provide for a more proper and effective relationship between pay and work performed." He also requested an interim increase in postal rates to "provide needed revenue" and help "check a deficit in the operation of the Post Office Department which, since World War II, has reached the staggering total of more than $4 billion."

Other points in Mr. Eisenhower's proposed program: adoption by Congress of a policy to make the Post Office Department self-supporting; separation of "those postal costs to be paid by the patron from those costs which should be raised by general taxation;" establishment of a commission to make future postal rate adjustments.

The National Federation of Post Office Clerks (AFL) Jan. 11 called President Eisenhower's message "a serious disappointment." The union said the proposed wage increase was "so small as to be of little real help."

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 1-4, 8, 9, 15-17, on Administration-backed bills (HR 2987, 3017) to raise postal salaries an average of 5 percent and reclassify certain workers, and on HR 1592, to provide postal employees with a flat 10 percent raise.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 14 -- Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield and Assistant Postmaster General Eugene J. Lyons supported HR 2987, 3017. William C. Doherty, president, National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL), opposed them and endorsed HR 1592. Similar testimony came from E.C. Hallbeck, National Federation of Post Office Clerks (AFL).

Feb. 8, 9 -- Sam Klein of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks (Ind.) opposed the Administration-backed measures, particularly the reclassification features. Support for the Administration bills came from the National Postal Transport Association (AFL), and National Rural Letter Carriers' Association (Ind.).

Feb. 15-17 -- More than a score of Congressmen testified on the various measures.

ACTION -- The Committee March 16 reported a clean bill (HR 4644 -- H Rept 224) to raise the pay of postal workers an average 7.6 percent and reclassify certain employees.

Floor Action

The House March 21 rejected, by a 120-302 roll-call vote, a motion to suspend the rules and pass HR 4644. Rejection of the motion left HR 4644 on the calendar, and before the Rules Committee. (For voting, see chart, p. 142.)

DEBATE -- Opponents of the bill contended it needed amendment to grant higher salaries to rank and file workers. Proponents warned that amendments raising the cost would bring a Presidential veto.

Tom Murray (D Tenn.) -- "The cost of the original bill (before the Committee) was $129 million and the new bill (HR 4644) has raised the total cost to over $152 million...This is an equitable, constructive bill." If Congress provided higher raises, "the President then would veto the bill."

John E. Moss, Jr. (D Calif.) -- Although HR 4644 would provide a 7.6 percent average increase in payroll costs, "it is a bill representing less than 7 percent for 60 percent of the employees."

Edward H. Rees (R Kan.) -- HR 4644 "is the best that can be worked out," considering the government's interest in keeping salary increases "within reasonable bounds."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 28, 31; Feb. 7, 10 on a bill (S 1) to grant postal employees a 10 percent pay raise effective Dec. 31, 1954, and an Administration-backed bill (S 773) to provide a 5 percent wage boost to all employees plus additional raises averaging 1.5 percent to certain personnel through reclassification.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 28 -- Favoring S 1 were Doherty of the Letter Carriers and Hallbeck of the Post Office Clerks. A statement favoring S 773 was filed by Raymond V. McNamara of the National Association of Postmasters (Ind.).

Doherty said a 10 percent increase would correct "an inequity of enormous proportions." He criticized tying a postal rate increase to a pay raise, contending that "several agencies of government are more costly to maintain and operate than the postal service" and the Post Office Department "comes closer to paying its own way than any other activity of government."

Hallbeck called the 10 percent increase proposal the "very minimum necessary" to eliminate what he termed a lag of "monstrous proportions" in postal salaries. He attacked the reclassification proposal as "unsound, discriminatory and destructive of past benefits secured..."

Feb. 7 -- Postmaster General Summerfield said he would recommend Presidential veto of a postal pay raise if Congress passed any "substantial" increase above the 5 to 6.5 percent recommended by the Administration.

Feb. 10 -- Representatives of postal employee unions generally testified in favor of a 10 percent raise. But Jesse V. Horton, national legislative representative, National Association of Postal Supervisors (then AFL), supported the Administration bills. Lawrence P. Jones, president, National League of Postmasters of the U.S. (Ind.), favored Administration proposals. He said they would remove many pay injustices suffered by postmasters.

ACTION -- The Committee March 2 reported S 1 (S Rept 41) after defeating, by a 3-6 vote, a motion to report S 773.

Floor Action

The Senate March 25 passed S 1 by a 72-21 roll-call vote. A motion by Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) to table an amendment that would have substituted provisions of an Administration-backed bill (S 1489) similar to S 773 was accepted by a roll-call vote of 52-41. Tabling the amendment, offered by Frank Carlson (R Kan.), eliminated the possibility of working out a compromise to it. (For voting, see chart, p. 121.)

An amendment by Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) to make the increase effective on the first day of the first pay period following enactment of the bill was agreed to by voice vote. The Senate rejected, by voice vote, a motion by Sen. William Langer (R N.D.) to reconsider the Byrd amendment. Langer wanted to date the increase back to Aug. 23, 1954, when the President pocket vetoed a government workers' pay bill. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 388ff.)

VETO PREDICTED

DEBATE -- William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "It is my belief that a bill calling for a 10-percent increase ...and having no reclassification provisions will not become law. If the bill is vetoed -- and it is my belief it will be -- I doubt very much that the veto will be overridden."

A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "The House... refused to be gagged and compelled to rubber-stamp an Administration bill...because they did not wish the bill of the Postmaster General to be rammed down their throats, and did not want to be dictated to by the Postmaster General...We must stand on our feet and pass the...legislation which is necessary to meet the conditions we face and not be confronted...with the statement that we shall have a Presidential veto thrown at us -- not by the President but by Mr. Summerfield, the Postmaster General."

Carlson -- "The Senate has an opportunity...to render a service to 500,000 employees in the postal service, 1.5 million...in the classified service and 3 million persons in the military service by keeping the proposed pay increase within the bounds the President has recommended."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "I would have preferred to have the matter worked out on a compromise basis of possibly 8 percent or 8½ percent...That seems to be out of the question now. Therefore, I shall vote for the bill... because the postal workers deserve an increase."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Byrd -- Set effective date of the increase. Voice.

House

Floor Action (S 1)

The House April 20 passed, by voice vote, and returned to the Senate S 1, amended to provide an average 8.2 percent wage increase for postal employees. Before passage, S 1 was amended by substitution of the provisions of HR 4644.

HR 4644 was passed by the House earlier April 20 by a 324-85 roll-call vote. A recommital motion offered by John Taber (R N.Y.) was rejected by a roll-call vote of 125-287. Before passage of HR 4644, three amendments offered by John E. Moss, Jr. (D Calif.) were accepted. One, to set the proposed pay raise at an average 8.2 percent instead of 7.6 percent was accepted first by a 178-174 teller vote, then by a 224-189 roll-call vote. Passage of HR 4644 later was vacated, and the bill tabled after its provisions had been substituted for the text of S 1. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.)

PRESSURE CHARGED

DEBATE -- Most of the debate centered on a possible Presidential veto of a raise above 7.6 percent.

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "The Moss bill will bring about a Presidential veto...No one believed the measure would become a law over a veto."

John Lesinski, Jr. (D Mich.) -- "The big difficulty ...is this pressure...to hold this bill down. The (Post Office) Department is more interested in saving dollars at the expense of the employees than in giving them a justified pay raise."

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- The 8.2 percent bill "is highly prejudicial to those in the upper as against those in the lower echelons."

T. James Tumulty (D N.J.) -- "...it is interesting to note that those who want to be generous and those who want to be parsimonious are on the same side. Somebody is playing politics."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- There would be an "excellent" chance of passing the bill with the Moss amendments over a Presidential veto.

Katharine St. George (R N.Y.) -- "If any amendment were to be offered it would have been far better...to have gone the whole hog and gone after 10 percent."

Rees -- "I do not think the action some of you propose in supporting the controversial amendment before us today...will be for the best interests of all postal employees. As I said...I want to do the right thing. I know you do."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Moss -- Require the Postmaster General to submit a report to Congress by Jan. 15, 1956, on the operation of the new reclassification program. Voice.

Moss -- Increase postal salaries by an average of 8.2 percent. Teller, 178-174; roll-call, 224-189.

Moss -- Make salary increase retroactive to March 1, 1955. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee May 5 reported (H Rept 494) a compromise version of S 1 that would raise the pay of postal employees an average of 8.59 percent and reclassify some postal workers.

House Action

The House May 9 agreed to H Rept 494 by a roll-call vote of 328-66 after a Republican-led attempt to return the measure to conference was rejected by a roll-call vote of 118-275. The recommittal motion was offered by Edward H. Rees (R Kan.), who said he wanted the conferees to substitute an average 7.6 percent pay raise. (For voting, see chart, p. 148.)

DEBATE -- During discussion on the motion to return the bill to conference, Republicans favoring the move said the 8.59 percent raise was an empty gesture because the President would veto any raise above 7.6 percent. Democrats denied this, and accused Summerfield of "dictating" to Congress.

Tom Murray (D Tenn.) -- Although he thought the President would veto the legislation, he would vote against recommittal. "If the President in his wisdom and judgment sends back...a veto...I will support...the President."

Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) -- This bill will "be vetoed and any action...to support this measure in its present form would be an idle gesture...I am for the maximum increase that I feel has a chance of becoming law."

Tumulty -- "We ought to pass the conference report and send it to the President.... If he vetoes it we will be back with another raise...The one way to find out what he will do is to put the document in his hands..."

McCormack -- "Postmaster General (Summerfield) showed a complete lack of respect (in a May 8 letter to Rep. Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R Mass.) saying he could not recommend Presidential approval of the 8.59 percent raise). Not only is (Summerfield) undertaking dictation to the legislative branch of the people but he is also... undertaking to dictate to the President...Certainly we in the House should repudiate dictation of that kind by any Cabinet officer."

Martin -- "There was no dictation in the letter... When I write to a department official for his opinion, I expect to get the facts and...his honest opinion..."

Rees -- "The only reason there has been a threat of veto has been because the bill has been loaded with larger salary increases than seem justified and the pay schedules distorted..."

Senate Action

The Senate May 11 agreed to the conference report by a roll-call vote of 66-11. (For voting, see chart, p. 124.)

DEBATE -- John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- "I believe the bill ought to be acceptable to the White House. The difference between what has been said the President will sign and what the bill represents is less than 1 percent...To 325,000 of 495,000 postal workers the difference amounts to only 90 cents a week."

Carlson -- Opposed the conference report but wanted it adopted to get it before the President. If the raise was vetoed and the veto sustained, he said he would introduce a bill to grant a 7.6 percent increase.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to President Eisenhower, S 1 would have:

Raised the pay of postal employees an average of 8.59 percent by authorizing a 7 percent boost for all employees and reclassifying some in new salary schedules to bring them additional raises.

Created an additional salary step above Level 4 for clerks, carriers, and motor vehicle operators, thus making 21 salary levels for postal field service employees. Fourth-class postmasters and rural carriers would have separate salary schedules. Each salary level in the three schedules would have provisions for seven annual increments.

Provided that no employee's salary would be reduced under reclassification provisions.

Provided that field service employees working between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. would be paid an extra 10 percent of their salary.

Provided field employees in or below Level 8 with compensatory time off or time-and-one-half for working more than eight hours a day or on holidays.

Changed Post Office Department paydays from twice a month to once every two weeks.

Made raises retroactive to March 1, 1955.

Required the Postmaster General to report to Congress on the operations of the reclassification program by Jan. 15, 1956.

The conference report estimated the cost of the pay provisions at $173.2 million annually, while other provisions in S 1 would cost an estimated $6.6 million. Included in the $6.6 million would be $2 million for pay of substitute rural carriers, to be computed under a new formula, $3.6 million for travel allowances for Postal Transportation Service Employees, and $1 million for longevity payments for substitute employees.

Veto

President Eisenhower May 19 cast the first veto of the 84th Congress, sending S 1 back to the Senate and House. To override a veto requires the concurrence of two-thirds of those voting in each chamber. The chamber that originated the bill votes first on the veto.

In the veto message, Mr. Eisenhower gave three reasons for his action: the bill would create inequities for thousands of postal workers, force "awkward and unfair administrative practices" on the Department, and set heavier burdens on taxpayers than a fair salary raise would impose. He expressed hope that Congress would enact a bill meeting recommendations he made in a special message Jan. 11. He again urged Congress to raise mail rates.

GROUP STANDS ON VETO

The period between the veto of S 1 and the Senate vote was marked by intensive lobbying. Groups urging Senators to override the veto included:

Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO).

National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL).

National Association of Post Office and General Service Maintenance Employees (Ind.)

National Association of Post Office and Postal Transportation Service Mail Handlers, Watchmen, and Messengers (AFL).

National Federation of Post Office Clerks (AFL).

National Federation of Post Office Motor Vehicle Employees (Ind.).

National Postal Transport Association (AFL).

United National Association of Post Office Clerks (Ind.).

Supporters of the Administration's position included:

National Association of Postal Supervisors (Ind.).

National Association of Postmasters (Ind.).

National Association of Special Delivery Messengers and Mail Handlers (AFL).

National League of Postmasters (Ind.).

National Rural Letter Carriers Association (Ind.).

Senate

Action on Veto

The Senate May 24 upheld President Eisenhower's veto of S 1. The vote on whether to pass the bill, "the objections of the President...to the contrary notwithstanding," was 54-39, which fell eight votes short of the two-thirds majority necessary to override a veto. (For voting, see chart, p. 125.)

Two Virginia Democrats and 37 Republicans voted to uphold the President's position; 46 Democrats and eight Republicans voted to override it. Twenty GOP Senators who voted May 11 to send the bill to the President switched May 24 to support Mr. Eisenhower. No Democratic votes changed.

DEBATE -- Democrats stressed that Mr. Eisenhower twice had vetoed bills to raise postal workers' salaries. Republicans replied that there was still time to enact a pay raise bill that would be satisfactory to all sides.

Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.) -- The President, a "poor, misguided, and confused man...has placed himself in the ridiculous position of vetoing a 5 percent proposal in August (1954) and proposing a 5 percent increase in January (1955), and...vetoing an 8.5 percent proposal while advocating a 7.6 percent bill."

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- S 1 "includes inequitable salary schedules and creates monstrous and expensive administrative problems." The Senate should uphold the veto and enact a new bill "which I know could be approved and become law."

NEW BILL REPORTED

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

ACTION -- May 26 reported, with amendments, a bill (S 2061 -- S Rept 382) to give postal workers an average 8 percent pay raise based on an across-the-board 6 percent increase and reclassification provisions. S 2061 was retroactive to March 1, placed rural letter carriers and special delivery messengers in the same grade as city postmen and most clerks.

The Committee rejected, by a 4-5 vote, a similar bill (S 2062) by Carlson that he said had Administration approval. It differed from S 2061 in details regarding classification of certain postal jobs.

Floor Action (S 2061)

The Senate June 1 passed, by a 78-0 roll-call vote, S 2061. (For voting, see chart, p. 126.) An amendment proposed by John M. Butler (R Md.) to give government classified workers an 8 percent raise was ruled out of order under a debate limitation agreement which specified all amendments must be germane to the bill.

DEBATE -- Johnston -- "I am greatly disappointed that the bill does not provide a larger increase. I am not happy that we were compelled to accept the position classification plan of the Administration. However, that is the price we had to pay..."

Carlson -- S 2061 "omits the unworkable and unfair features" of S 1 that the President "rightfully" vetoed.

Also, the cost was reduced $14 million, to $166 million a year.

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

ACTION -- June 2 reported S 2061 (H Rept 728) with minor amendments.

Floor Action (S 2061)

The House June 7 suspended the rules and passed S 2061, amended, by a roll-call vote of 409-1. W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) cast the dissenting vote. (See chart, p. 152.)

DEBATE -- Rees -- "Some postal employees have complained that the President vetoed the bill (S 1) although on the average it represented only a slight difference in increased pay to individual employees over what the President would approve. Conversely, our bill (S 2061) provides the postal employees on the average nearly the same salary increase as the vetoed bill, and, at the same time, corrects inequities contained in the bill vetoed by the President."

George P. Miller (D Calif.) -- "I shall vote for this bill because I am poignantly conscious of the plight in which our faithful postal employees find themselves as a result of the Administration's lack of...understanding of them."

August E. Johansen (R Mich.) -- "It has been somewhat disconcerting that nearly two years have been required to arrive at a pay increase...The problem would have been resolved earlier...had it not been for the efforts of some who insisted on seeing if they could not go just a little further than the majority of the Committee...had voted."

SENATE CONCURRENCE

The Senate June 7 agreed, by voice vote, to minor House amendments to S 2061, thus clearing the bill for the President. He signed it (PL 68) June 10.

The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee July 21 appointed an advisory committee to "review and report classification actions" in the postal service. Members of the group included Hallbeck, legislative director, National Federation of Post Office Clerks, who was named chairman; William C. Doherty, president, National Association of Letter Carriers; William A. Thomas, president, National Postal Transport Association; Paul M. Castiglioni, legislative representative, National Federation of Post Office Motor Vehicle Employees; and Thomas G. Walters, operations director, AFL Government Employees' Council.

POSTAL DEFICIT

The Post Office Department Sept. 20, in its annual financial report, said it ended fiscal 1955 with a deficit of $362.7 million, $29.2 million below that of fiscal 1954 despite the postal workers' pay raise. Postal revenues totaled $2,349,500,000, up $88.4 million from fiscal 1954, the report said.

Summerfield Sept. 22 said the "only" way to "substantially reduce...a huge postal deficit" was to increase postal rates. He said postal workers' wage increases and other benefits would add about $200 million to the postal system's annual cost "so...we now face postal deficits of about one-half billion dollars a year."

FEDERAL PAY RAISE

S 67 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 58) March 10, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote March 25.
- Reported with amendments by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 857) June 16.
- Passed by the House, amended, on a 370-3 roll-call vote June 20. (See page 154.)
- Conference report (H Rept 910) agreed to by House and Senate by voice votes June 23.

P.L. 94 -- Signed into law June 28.

Congress in 1955 raised the pay of all but the top level of government classified workers by 7.5 percent. The estimated annual cost of the increases was $325 million.

President Eisenhower had proposed raises on a graduated scale that would benefit those in the middle and upper civil service grades more than those in the lower grades. On an average, the Administration plan would have meant a 5 percent increase.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, S 67:

Gave an estimated 1,073,262 classified civil service employees of the federal government a 7.5 percent pay increase retroactive to the first pay period after March 1.

Raised the pay of Foreign Service employees and Veterans Administration, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, employees for whom salaries had been set by administrative action, federal district court reporters, secretaries and law clerks of circuit and district judges, and officers and employees in the legislative branch of the government.

Maintained the existing ceiling of $14,800 for salaries of classified employees.

Specified that the salary increases would be permanent, subject to retirement deductions, and would be considered in computing overtime and night differential pay.

Granted a $5 annual pay boost for employees in seven civil service grades to simplify bookkeeping procedures.

Increased allowances for Senators' office help, according to the population of the state the Senator represents.

The last general wage increase for federal employees, a 10 percent boost, was in 1951 (PL 201, 82nd Congress).

In 1954 President Eisenhower pocket vetoed a bill that called for a 5 percent raise for classified and postal employees. He objected to the measure's failure to provide revenue to offset the cost of the proposed increases.

In a Jan. 11, 1955 message, Mr. Eisenhower asked Congress to raise the pay of government workers and put all federal civilian employees under a contributory health insurance program.

Discussing proposed pay adjustments, the President said the aim was to recognize differences in responsibilities between various grades, to relieve the current "compression between the lower and higher salaries," and offset "the decline in the real income of many federal employees." He said government pay should be in line with wages paid by private employers. While the lower grades under the Classification Act "are fairly well in line" with non-governmental pay rates, he said, "rates in the middle and upper grades have lagged behind." His proposals, therefore, called for a larger percentage increase for employees in the higher grades.

The cost of the recommended, average 5 percent increase for federal workers would be about $210 million a year, the President estimated. The health insurance program would cost the government $55 million annually.

Congress took no action in 1955 on the health insurance proposal.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 17 on S 67, which would have given classified workers a 10 percent pay raise.

TESTIMONY -- Endorsing S 67 were James A. Campbell, president of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFL); Russell Stephens, president of American Federation of Technical Engineers (AFL); Thomas Maddock, legislative committee chairman of the National Association of Mechanics (Ind.); Dillard B. Lasseter, executive officer of the Organization of Professional Employees, Agriculture Department; and Alfred F. Beiter, president, National Customs Service Association.

Also favoring S 67, but suggesting amendments, were Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.); and E.W. McCabe, legislative committee chairman of the Internal Revenue Employees Association, Nashville, Tenn.

ACTION -- As reported (S Rept 58) March 10, S 67 would have raised the pay of classified government employees by 10 percent with the exception of those in grade GS-18, who would have retained their $14,800 maximum. The raises would have been retroactive to the first pay day in 1955.

Floor Action

The Senate March 25 passed S 67 by voice vote immediately after passage of S 1, a bill to raise the pay of postal employees 10 percent.

An amendment offered by Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) to change the effective date for the increase was agreed to by voice vote. The Senate also agreed, by voice vote, to an amendment by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) adjusting the pay of employees in Senators' offices.

The Senate rejected an amendment to substitute for the provisions of S 67 the provisions of an Administration-backed bill (S 1490). The amendment, offered by Frank Carlson (R Kan.), would have provided a salary increase of an average 6 percent.

DEBATE -- There was little debate with the exception of explanation and questioning on the proposed increase for Senators' office employees. The Carlson amendment had already been debated during discussion of the postal employee pay bill.

A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "I strongly oppose the Carlson substitute on the basis of the Senate's action with regard to postal workers....It has been the custom and the tradition to carry forward pay increases on as uniform basis as possible.... To pass the Carlson substitute would give the classified workers 4 percent less (than the postal workers.)"

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Byrd -- Make the increase effective on the first day of the first pay period following enactment of the bill. Voice.

Dirksen -- Adjust basic compensation of employees in offices of Senators and make certain increases in amounts authorized for employees in such offices according to the population of the state from which the Senator is elected. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Carlson -- Substitute the provisions of S 1490, which would provide a salary increase of an average 6 percent, for the text of S 67. Voice.

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- March 15-18.

TESTIMONY -- March 15 -- Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission proposed an average 5 percent increase costing $202 million.

March 16-17 -- Officials of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFL), the National Federation of Federal Employees (Ind.), and other federal employee groups testified.

March 18 -- Appearing in support of pay raises were Reps. Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) and John F. Baldwin, Jr. (R Calif.). Statements supporting a pay boost were submitted by 11 other Congressmen.

Support for a pay increase also came from spokesmen for the National Association of Internal Revenue Employees and the Federal Employees Association for National Defense.

ACTION -- The Committee June 16 reported (H Rept 857) an amended version of S 67 that would raise the pay of classified employees 7.5 percent, retroactive to March 1, 1955. The salary ceiling of $14,800 was retained.

Floor Action

On June 20, the House, by a roll-call vote of 370-3, agreed to a motion to suspend the rules and pass S 67. The motion, which required a two-thirds majority, was offered by Chairman Tom Murray (D Tenn.) of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. (For voting, see p. 154.)

DEBATE -- Discussion centered on whether the 7.5 percent increase would treat classified employees as well as the postal workers, who had received an average 8 percent pay boost.

Murray -- "There is a consensus of opinion that the classified employees should have the same salary increase as that given postal employees.... Postal employees received a 6 percent increase of their basic salary...and...will receive a salary adjustment upon conversion into new salary schedules amounting on an average to 2.1 percent.... It is recognized by the Committee that all postal employees would not receive the total increases in the bill amounting to 8.1 percent.... It was the view of your Committee that the 7.5 percent increase for federal employees...was a fair and adequate comparison between salary increases given postal employees."

John E. Moss, Jr. (D Calif.) -- S 67 "fails to bring about equality of treatment between the classified employees and the postal field service employees. It is my conviction that these two large groups should be treated as nearly equal as possible."

Conference

REPORT -- The conference committee report (H Rept 910) recommended acceptance of the House version of S 67 with the addition of two minor provisions.

ACTION -- The Senate and House June 23 agreed, by voice vote and without debate, to the conference report on S 67.

EXECUTIVE PAY RAISE

HR 7619 -- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 1474) July 27, 1955.

• Passed by voice vote of the House July 30.

S 2628 -- Reported by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 1257) July 29.

The bills would have provided salary increases for 237 appointed federal officials, including Cabinet officers, and would have raised the maximum salary for top civil service employees. The House and Senate versions differed slightly on salary ranges.

No hearings were held in either house and the Senate Aug. 2 deferred action on the matter until 1956.

Background

Congress on June 7, 1955 voted an average 8 percent pay raise for postal workers (S 2061 - PL 68). A 7.5 percent increase for classified employees (S 67 - PL 94) was voted June 23. (See pp. 360ff.)

On July 15, President Eisenhower sent letters to the chairmen of the Senate and House Committees on Post Office and Civil Service requesting pay increases for certain appointive officials. He said "top pay scales in government must be improved sufficiently to enable the nation's most capable men to respond, when they are needed, to the call of public service."

He suggested that: Cabinet officers' pay be increased from $22,500 to $25,000; the assistant secretary level be fixed at $20,000, with the same rate for members of boards and commissions; and the maximum pay for civil service grade GS-18 be raised to $17,500 from $14,800.

House

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

ACTION -- July 27 reported a bill (HR 7619 - H Rept 1474) to increase salaries of 237 appointed federal officials, including Cabinet officers. The Committee recommended slightly smaller increases than the Administration proposed.

Floor Action

The House July 30 suspended its rules and passed HR 7619 by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- Major salary revisions in HR 7619 would:

Increase Cabinet salaries from $22,500 to $25,000 per year.

Set salaries of the Budget Director, Comptroller General, Under Secretary of State, Deputy Secretary of Defense, Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, and two White House assistants at $22,500.

Raise the ceiling on classified and postal employees' (GS-18) pay from $14,800 to $16,000.

Increase Assistant Secretary and board and commission members' pay level from $15,000 to $19,000.

DEBATE -- Tom Murray (D Tenn.) -- "The original suggestions of the administrative branch of the government were quite a bit in excess of the figures which are here suggested. But I think I can say to you that this measure is acceptable to the Administration."

H. R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "I know of no reason why a Cabinet officer should be paid more than a Member of Congress.... The taxpayers of this country are being loaded with debt and taxes. This bill ought to be defeated." (The pay of Congressmen was raised in 1955 to $22,500. See pp. 357ff.).

Edward H. Rees (R Kan.) -- "Never...has there been a President who has been more concerned that the Congress and its Members be given proper recognition at the highest level in our government."

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- "In recent years the classified employees and the postal employees have had successive raises, one after another, which have kept them pretty well in line with the advance in the cost of living. But these people we seek to deal with here have not had that treatment."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

ACTION -- July 29 reported an amended bill (S 2628 -- S Rept 1257) to increase rates of compensation for appointed federal officials.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, S 2628 would:

Increase Cabinet salaries to $25,000.

Increase to $25,000 the salaries of the Directors of the Office of Defense Mobilization and the Bureau of the Budget.

Raise the ceiling on GS-18 pay to a minimum of $16,000, plus three proposed pay rates ending at $17,500. The top postal rate would be $17,200.

Increase salaries, regulated by the Foreign Service Act of 1946, of Chiefs of Mission and top Foreign Service officers.

Floor Action

The Senate Aug. 2 -- the last day of the session -- deferred consideration of HR 7619 after Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) objected to its being considered by unanimous consent. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said he would support a move in 1956 to make the raises retroactive, after hearings were held on the bill and "inequities" were ironed out.

Morse then held the floor until the Senate adjourned sine die.

HOOVER COMMISSION REPORTS

The Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government filed its final report to Congress on June 30, 1955, marking the end of two years of work. The Commission issued reports on 17 subjects incorporating some 362 recommendations, of which, it estimated, 167 would require legislative action.

Former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the Commission, claimed that if its recommendations were followed more than $8 billion could be saved, enough to balance the budget and reduce taxes. He said the Treasury could recover a sum in excess of $10 billion of government capital tied up unnecessarily.

Legislation incorporating some of the Commission's recommendations was introduced in Congress in 1955 but received no action. Some administrative recommendations, i.e., those within the authority of the various departments, were adopted in 1955 and others were under consideration.

PROSPECTS FOR ADOPTION

Many of the Commission's recommendations would face a strong fight if brought up for action in Congress. Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.), a member of the Commission, said June 1 that Congress should "not do a hurried job in putting (the recommendations) into action."

The Commission's report on Water Resources and Power, which attacked 50 years of government policy in those fields, created a storm of opposition among Democratic leaders and in areas served by public power.

The Commission recommended the elimination of federal activities in other fields as well, including federal lending agencies, business-type enterprises and medical services.

EISENHOWER'S STAND

The "get government out of business" theme that echoed throughout the Commission's reports was espoused by Republican Candidate Eisenhower during the 1952 presidential campaign. He garnered applause for it and, presumably, votes.

As President, however, Mr. Eisenhower had broached nothing so far-reaching as the Hoover Commission's proposal that government lending agencies be "mutualized" or turned into private enterprises, or that federal power installations be disposed of. The two members of the Commission most closely associated with the Administration--Herbert Brownell, Jr., Attorney General, and Arthur S. Flemming, Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization, both appointed by the President--dissented frequently from those recommendations of the Commission which marked changes from established government policy.

But the honors as leading dissenter went to a Representative, Commissioner Chet Holifield (D Calif.), who registered dissents on 11 of the Commission's 17 reports. An entire volume was devoted to his separate statement on Water Resources and Power. Said Rep. Holifield: "The Commission has exercised little self-restraint in interpreting the statutory mandate. Any government function becomes 'nonessential' if a Commission majority is opposed to it. And since most government functions can be construed, in one sense or another, as competitive with private enterprise, they can be hired out, provided the government is prepared to pay enough."

FIRST HOOVER COMMISSION

The first Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government was established by Congress on July 7, 1947 (PL 162, 80th Congress). The Act specified a bipartisan membership of 12, four each to be named by the President, the president of the Senate and the Speaker of the House. The group was empowered to "study and investigate" any and all phases of the executive branch and to make recommendations. The Act, however, was vague as to how far such recommendations might go. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. III, 1947, p. 488.)

Former President Herbert Hoover, named a member by the Speaker, was elected chairman. The Commission's first task was to come to some agreement on the scope of its power. Some members felt the Commission's power extended to substantive fields of policy; others argued that it was limited to organizational matters. The latter view prevailed, and Hoover announced that "major functions of the government are determinable as needed by the Congress. It is not our function to say whether it should exist or not, but it is our function to see if we cannot make it work better."

The Commission assigned to 24 Task Forces, composed of prominent citizens, the job of studying organizational problems. Task Force reports were reviewed by the Commission, which sent its own reports to Congress during the early months of 1949. In all, the Commission made 273 recommendations. Of these, some 25 percent called for Presidential "plans," authorized under the Reorganization Act of 1949. Another 40 percent called for new legislation, while the remaining 35 percent could have been adopted simply by administrative action.

Some of the Commission's recommendations, although bearing on organizational matters, nevertheless stirred up policy controversy. Such was the case with the proposal that the rivers and harbors and flood control activities of the Army Corps of Engineers be transferred to the Department of the Interior. But the majority of the recommendations were sufficiently free of policy issues to gain widespread support.

By 1954, according to the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, a private organization, 116 of the 273 recommendations had been fully accomplished, another 35 mostly accomplished, and 45 partially accomplished. Of the remaining 77, the Committee classed 11 as obsolete and only 30 as of major importance.

Authorities agreed that no previous government reorganization effort had been so successful. The bipartisan make-up of the Commission and the stature of its members, plus the educational job done by the Citizens Committee, gave the Commission an exceptional degree of public support.

SECOND HOOVER COMMISSION

The Second Hoover Commission was established by the Republican 83rd Congress (PL 108), with bipartisan support.

The Second Commission differed from the first in two important respects:

Membership. PL 108, unlike the earlier law, did not specify that the two major political parties should be represented equally on the Commission.

Augmented powers. Like the previous Commission, the new Hoover Commission was authorized to study the organization and methods of operation of the executive branch with an eye to particular improvements in administration, including eliminating duplicating functions, effecting economies, and defining offical responsibilities. In addition, the Commission was to examine the necessity for:

(1) "abolishing services, activities, and functions not necessary to the efficient conduct of government"; and

(2) "eliminating nonessential services, functions, and activities which are competitive with private enterprise."

The Senate Committee on Government Operations, in reporting out the bill (S Rept 216, 83rd Congress), noted that, "Although the proposed Commission would be similar in composition to the earlier Commission...it would have added authority to study all activities of the federal government, and to make recommendations to the Congress and the President relative to changes in federal programs and policies."

Both Senate and House approved the bill by voice vote, without debate, and President Eisenhower signed the measure on July 10, 1953. It called for an interim Commission report by Dec. 31, 1954, and a final report by May 31, 1955, after which-date the Commission would expire. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 298).

COMMISSION NAMED

President Eisenhower named ex-President Hoover to the new Commission, which elected him chairman. All told, five of the 12 members had served on the first Commission. Seven were Republicans, five Democrats. (See box, adjoining column.) Former Rep. John B. Hollister (R Ohio, 1931-37) was named executive director.

As before, the Commission entrusted the basic studies to Task Forces made up of prominent citizens, many of whom had likewise served with the first Commission. On Dec. 31, 1954, the Commission reported that most of the Task Forces had completed their work and that final reports would soon be forthcoming.

Twelve Reorganizers

Seven Republicans and five Democrats were named members of the second (Hoover) Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, created in 1953. Five members had served on the first Hoover Commission (1947-49). Members listed under the authority by whom they were appointed, were:

By President Eisenhower:
- *Herbert Hoover (R), former President of the United States (1929-33).
- James A. Farley (D), former Postmaster General.
- Herbert Brownell, Jr. (R), Attorney General.
- *Arthur S. Flemming (R), Director, Office of Defense Mobilization.

By Vice President Nixon:
- Ex-Sen. Homer Ferguson (R Mich., 1943-55).
- *Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.)
- Solomon C. Hollister (R), Dean, School of Engineering, Cornell University.
- Robert G. Storey (D), Dean, School of Law, Southern Methodist University.

By Speaker of the House Martin:
- *Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio).
- Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.).
- *Joseph P. Kennedy (D), former ambassador to Great Britain.
- Sidney A. Mitchell (R), executive director of the first Hoover Commission.

 Members who served on first Hoover Commission.*

 Following the 1954 defeat of Sen. Ferguson and his appointment as Ambassador to the Philippines, he was replaced on the Commission by Sen. Styles Bridges (R N.H.)*

The interim report asked Congress to extend the Reorganization Act of 1949, which was to expire April 1, 1955. This Congress did: PL 16, signed March 25, extended the President's reorganization authority to April 1, 1958. The Commission subsequently asked for an extension of its own life for one month, until June 30, a measure (S 1763 -- PL 41) which the President signed May 23, and for more money, which was appropriated in a bill (H J Res 310 -- PL 48) signed May 27, bringing total appropriations for the second Commission, including travel funds, to $3,150,878.

Commission's Reports

Following are summaries of the final reports and their major recommendations, in the order in which they were issued.

PERSONNEL AND CIVIL SERVICE

Task Force Chairman -- Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University.

Commission Report Released -- Feb. 14, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "Officials responsible for establishing and defending government policies and programs, the non-career executives, should be selected by the successful (political) party...The other requirement is that there must be numerous trained, skilled and non-partisan employees in the federal service to provide continuity in the administration of the government's activities."

Major Recommendations:

More non-career executives should be hired "to take over the political tasks" now handled by many career administrators.

Congress should authorize a Senior Civil Service to embrace some 3,000 top career administrators, who would have personal status and rank, much like foreign service and military officers, and be paid from $10,800 to $17,500 per year.

Estimated savings from 19 Recommendations -- $50 million a year, if the turnover of federal employees, now 25 percent a year, could be reduced to 20 percent.

PAPERWORK MANAGEMENT (PART I)

Task Force Chairman -- Emmett J. Leahy, management consultant.

Commission Report Released -- Feb. 22, 1955.

Theme of Report - The government spends more than $4 billion a year to create and handle some 25 billion pieces of paper. This "enormous volume of paperwork imposed upon top federal executives interferes with their basic responsibilities."

Major Recommendations:

The General Services Administration (established on recommendation of the first Commission) should supervise all paperwork management in the executive branch.

Each agency should undertake to examine its paperwork procedures to improve and simplify them.

Estimated Savings from Recommendations -- $225 million a year.

(PART II)

Commission Report Released--June 29, 1955.

Theme of Report--Estimated savings of over $15 million were made in 26 completed cases where the Task Force acted as an intermediary between government agencies and business groups in an effort to reduce or eliminate reporting requirements. Some 244 target projects were set up for study, and agreement to change procedures was achieved in 49 cases.

Progress toward the accomplishment of the recommendations in Part I had been made, including the drafting of an executive order incorporating several of the recommendations.

Major Recommendation--The Bureau of the Budget and the General Services Administration should increase emphasis on the need to simplify and improve paperwork.

FEDERAL MEDICAL SERVICES

Task Force Chairman -- Chauncey McCormick, philanthropist, until his death Sept. 8, 1954; succeeded by Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp, pharmaceutical executive.

Commission Report Released -- Feb. 28, 1955.

Theme of Report -- Expenditures of more than $4 billion a year for medical services reveal considerable waste, much of it caused by lack of coordination among 26 agencies performing various health services.

Major Recommendations:

The President should appoint a Federal Advisory Council of Health to further coordination of programs.

Military hospitals and medical facilities should be organized into regions, each to be supervised by one of the armed services.

Veterans' Administration should stop building hospitals, close and sell certain others, and take steps to force veterans to pay for care received for non-service-connected disabilities.

Federal medical care for American merchant seamen should be ended.

Twelve Public Health Service general hospitals should be closed.

Estimated Savings from 29 Recommendations - $293 million a year.

LENDING AGENCIES

Task Force Chairman -- Paul Grady, partner of Price Waterhouse & Co., accountants.

Commission Report Released -- March 14, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "Lending or guaranteeing loans is a function which the government should undertake only when private enterprise cannot or will not perform the function, and then only in furtherance of a justifiable government purpose."

Major Recommendations:

Federal Housing Administration and Rural Electrification Administration should be "mutualized" to provide their own financing.

Loan program for college housing should be ended.

Commodity Credit Corporation should stop making loans to farmers under the price-support program, and make purchase agreements only.

Export-Import Bank should stop making commercial short-term loans.

Small Business Administration should be extended for two years, but should increase its interest charges.

Estimated Savings from 48 Recommendations -- Capital funds returned to the Treasury from lending agencies "mutualized" or liquidated would serve to reduce the national debt by more than $6 billion.

TRANSPORTATION

Task Force Chairman -- Perry M. Shoemaker, president, Lackawanna Railroad.

Commission Report Released -- April 4, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "There is general lack of modern traffic management in the federal government. Due to the lack of an overall plan, there results duplication, inefficiency, and waste."

Major Recommendations:

Military or civilian personnel assigned abroad should pay costs of transporting their own cars.

Military air services should be consolidated and cut back by turning to commercial carriers.

A director of transportation in the Defense Department should control traffic of all armed services.

Estimated Savings from 21 Recommendations -- $151 million a year.

LEGAL SERVICES AND PROCEDURES

Task Force Chairman -- James Marsh Douglas, former chief justice, Supreme Court of Missouri.

Commission Report Released -- April 11, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "The lack of effective coordination of legal staffs has created a fragmentation of legal services within the executive branch, with a resulting diversity of legal opinions and jurisdictional conflicts."

Major Recommendations:

All legal services of the armed forces should be under the control of a Defense Department general counsel.

An Administrative Court of the U.S. should take over functions of present Tax Court, various regulatory agencies adjudicating in trade matters, and adjudicating function of the National Labor Relations Board.

Estimated Savings from 52 Recommendations -- No specific estimate.

SURPLUS PROPERTY

Task Force Chairman -- Gen. Robert E. Wood, former chairman of the board, Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Commission Report Released -- April 18, 1955.

Theme of Report -- The government annually disposes of property costing $2 billion at average returns of 5 to 7 percent of cost. Thus "an additional 1 cent received on each dollar cost of property sold would yield an additional $20 million yearly."

Major Recommendations:

Steps should be taken to transfer excess property from one agency to any others needing it, before it is declared surplus.

All obsolete ships in the National Defense Reserve Fleet should be scrapped.

Estimated Savings from 23 Recommendations -- See above.

FOOD AND CLOTHING

Task Force Chairman -- Joseph P. Binns, managing director, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Commission Report Released -- April 25, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "There is little more semblance of unification in the supply of food and clothing" for the armed services than before Congress passed the unification act. The result has been "great waste, duplication, overlapping and an unnecessary number of agencies concerned with food and clothing."

Major Recommendations:

Secretary of Defense should centralize all food and clothing purchasing and storage for the armed services in one central agency.

Purchase by bids should be replaced by negotiated purchases.

Estimated Savings from Four Recommendations -- $340 million a year.

BUSINESS ENTERPRISES

Task Force Chairman -- Charles R. Hook, chairman of the board, Armco Steel Corp.

Commission Report Released -- May 16, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "The government is conducting a multitude of projects in competition with and to the injury of the very system upon which our future security and prosperity is based."

Major Recommendations:

Defense Department should cut back post exchanges and commissary stores in areas where private facilities are available, and raise PX and commissary prices.

Defense Department should close most of its bakeries, meat cutting plants, clothing plants, and laundries.

The Postal Savings System should be discontinued, and parcel post rates raised to cover costs.

The Tennessee Valley Authority should discontinue all chemical research, and charge higher prices for fertilizer.

Estimated Savings from 22 Recommendations -- Impossible to estimate.

DEPOT UTILIZATION

Task Force Chairman -- Clifford E. Hicks, president, New York Dock Co.

Commission Report Released -- May 26, 1955.

Theme of Report -- Government-operated storage space covers 31,000 acres, but because of "outmoded management systems and obsolete legislation" there is great excess, duplication, and waste.

Major Recommendation -- Congress should give the General Services Administration authority to coordinate all civilian agency storage space.

Estimated Savings from Two Recommendations -- $253 million a year.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Task Force Chairman -- Mervin J. Kelly, president, Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc.

Commission Report Released -- May 31, 1955.

Theme of Report -- "There is no tribute great enough to express the nation's obligations" to scientists contributing to "the strengthening of our national defense. And there can be no relaxation of this effort."

Major Recommendation -- Greater federal support should be given to basic and medical research.

Estimated Savings from Five Recommendations -- none.

OVERSEAS ECONOMIC OPERATIONS

Task Force Chairman -- Henning W. Prentis, Jr., chairman of the board, Armstrong Cork Co.

Commission Report Released -- June 6, 1955.

Theme of Report -- Foreign aid should be continued but "the time has come" when certain nations no longer need extensive U.S. support.

Major Recommendations:

Technical assistance to NATO countries should be terminated.

No large-scale industrial aid should go to Asia.

All foreign development loans should be made and managed by Export-Import Bank.

Foreign aid programs should be operated by various departments rather than by one agency.

Estimated Savings from 11 Recommendations -- $360 million a year in non-military aid programs.

REAL PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

Task Force Chairman -- John R. Lotz, former chairman of the board, Stone and Webster Engineering Corp.

Commission Report Released -- June 13, 1955.

Theme of Report -- The government exhibited "little in the nature of modern real property management" in connection with its vast holdings, of which there is not even an up-to-date inventory.

Major Recommendations:

The Commission made eight recommendations for the establishment of better central controls by the Bureau of the Budget and the expansion and improved use of the authority of the General Services Administration.

Three other recommendations related to the management of industrial properties owned or leased in relation to defense, and to the policy for the management of federal rural lands.

Estimated Savings: If all space were efficiently utilized, annual savings might be as much as $185 million. Another $1.2 billion could be returned to the Treasury through disposal of some properties.

BUDGET AND ACCOUNTING

Task Force Chairman -- J. Harold Stewart, partner of Stewart, Watts & Bollong, accountants.

Commission Report Released -- June 20, 1955.

Theme of Report -- The cost of budgeting and accounting for the federal government is almost incalculable.

Budgeting and accounting procedures have greatly improved in the last 10 years, but specific improvements should still be made.

Major Recommendations -- Twenty-five specific recommendations are made relating to budgeting and accounting procedures, the effect of which would be to strengthen and expand the authority of the Bureau of the Budget. A recommendation was made that the executive budget and congressional appropriations be in terms of estimated annual accrued expenditures (charges for the cost of goods and services estimated to be received).

Estimated Savings from 25 Recommendations--About $4 billion, or 8.5 percent of controllable budget expenditures.

BUSINESS ORGANIZATION, DEFENSE DEPARTMENT

Task Force Chairman -- Charles R. Hook, chairman of the board, ARMCO Steel Corporation.

Commission Report Released -- June 20, 1955.

Theme of Report -- The Department of Defense, which spends nearly 60 cents out of each taxpayer's dollar, has mushroomed in recent years. To that expansion, plus the encumbrance of traditions and static laws, may be traced its inefficient and outmoded systems of administration.

Major Recommendations:

Civilian duties and lines of authority in the Department should be re-defined.

Common supply and service activities of all branches of the military should be taken over by a separate, new, civilian-managed agency responsible to the Secretary of Defense.

Personnel in charge of the management of business activities of the Department should be improved.

Responsibilities in the financial management of the Department should be more clearly fixed and better carried out.

Estimated Savings from 19 Recommendations -- $2 billion a year.

WATER RESOURCES AND POWER

Task Force Chairman --Admiral Ben Moreell, chairman of the board, Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation.

Commission Report Released -- June 27, 1955.

Theme of Report (Volume I) -- The government lacks a "consistent national policy" in the regulation of water resources. In the field of electrical power, "federal legislation since 1902...has produced a multitude of inconsistencies and conflicts in policies and actions." Less than 10 percent of the population benefits from power programs which the federal taxpayer is subsidizing.

Major Recommendations:

Among 15 recommendations were proposals that:

The Federal Power Commission fix rates on government power sufficient to "amortize and pay interest on the federal investment in power" and also to pay federal, state, and local taxes "equivalent" to those paid by private utilities.

The government cease to build steam plants.

Private utilities be permitted to purchase "a fair share of federal power."

The Tennessee Valley Authority and other federal power installations finance their future improvements by issuing their own securities to the public, "thus relieving the taxpayers of this burden."

Estimated Savings from 15 Recommendations -- Impossible to estimate.

Volume II contained separate and dissenting statements by four Commissioners. Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.) charged that the Commission had exceeded its jurisdiction and that the report of the task force contained "facts which are distorted, findings which are unwarranted, conclusions which are inconsistent, and recommendations which are prejudiced." He charged that 20 years of private power company propaganda had been invested with the dignity of a government report.

Dissents on specific recommendations were registered by Commissioners Herbert Brownell, Jr. and Arthur S. Flemming, and a general dissent by James Farley.

INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Task Force Chairman -- Gen. Mark W. Clark, president, The Citadel.

Commission Report Released -- June 29, 1955.

Theme of Report -- Deep concern was expressed over the "lack of adequate intelligence data from behind the Iron Curtain." The Commission discovered "no valid ground for the suspicion that the Central Intelligence Agency...was being effectively contaminated by any organized subversive or Communistic clique."

Major Recommendation -- A small, bipartisan, permanent "watchdog" commission should be established to keep the intelligence agencies under the eyes of Congress. Revamping of the CIA was also recommended, but details were spelled out in a separate report which was not made public.

Estimated Savings from Recommendations -- none.

Action On Reports

A number of bills incorporating the Hoover Commission's recommendations were introduced before Congress adjourned. Rep. Frank Thompson, Jr. (D N.J.) sponsored six bills in May, four of them relating to the civil service proposals. On May 31, Rep. Bruce Alger (R Texas) introduced 14 bills, half of them designed to carry out proposals in the report on lending agencies.

Blocs of 39 and 15 bills were introduced July 11 and 13 by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.). The House received 53 Hoover Commission bills July 13 from Rep. Marguerite Stitt Church (R Ill.). Both Members said they acted at the Commission's request.

Hearings were held in July by the Senate Government Operations Reorganization Subcommittee on a bill (S 2367) to center virtually all authority for disposal of government surpluses in the General Services Administration, in accordance with the Hoover Commission's recommendation.

House Government Operations Subcommittees held hearings in May on the Commission's reports of waste in the armed services' use of food and clothing, in June on the report on federal lending agencies, and in November on the "Water Resources and Power" report. Hearings on waste in the armed services were also held in April by the House Armed Services Special Investigations Subcommittee, which was concerned with premature release of information to a magazine writer.

EXECUTIVE ACTION

On the executive side, the White House ordered all federal agencies to make studies, reports, and recommendations concerning Hoover Commission proposals affecting their operations. These reports would be screened by the Bureau of the Budget, then passed to the President's Advisory Committee on Government Organization, composed of Nelson A. Rockefeller, Milton S. Eisenhower and (Hoover Commissioner) Arthur S. Flemming.

Group Stands

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, a bipartisan organization of leaders in business and other fields, set out to mass public support behind the recommendations of the second Hoover Commission.

Committee spokesmen termed their drive a public-spirited move to carry out the widespread desire for better government. But critics in Congress and among pressure groups affected by Commission proposals called it a lobby drive, dominated by big business, to end "badly needed" federal activities in such fields as medicine and electric power.

Whichever view was correct, both sides agreed that the Committee was unusual in the field of politics and pressures. It had no registered lobbyists or legislative department, was financed by direct gifts mainly from corporations rather than by dues. Contributors could deduct their subscriptions for income tax purposes. The Committee was loosely organized and relatively small.

The list of Committee directors and advisers included prominent businessmen and bankers, former cabinet members, ex-Congressmen and governors from both parties, university presidents, and others. Among them; John Nance Garner, James A. Farley, General "Wild Bill" Donovan, Charles Edison, Henry Ford II, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, and Warren R. Austin.

OPPOSITION GROUPS

Powerful groups declared themselves opposed to some recommendations of the Commission.

Veterans' groups strongly opposed the recommendations to reduce federal health and medical services, the Disabled American Veterans terming the report "a brutal, unprincipled and sinister assault." American Legion officials said the report contained many "vicious and unjustified attacks on sick and disabled veterans."

At their annual convention in March, 1955, the Americans for Democratic Action asked Congress to "disapprove" the Commission's recommendation on credit programs, and to "carefully" examine the Commission with respect to the selection of its personnel and the content and political implications of its recommendations.

The recommendations of the Commission relating to Water Resources and Power were attacked in strong terms by consumers' organizations. The National Rural Electric Cooperative Association said the Commission had joined the "power lobby" and "Wall Street bankers", and the Electric Consumers Information Committee on August 26 charged that the Commission had "bowed to the greed" of private power companies in recommending that utilities "be permitted to purchase a fair share of federal power."

ECIC officials said private companies received 41.1 percent of all federally generated power in 1953. Should the Commission's proposals be followed, they declared, "competition within the electric industry would end, the public power 'yardstick' would be destroyed, and everyone's electric bill would be higher."

HAWAII-ALASKA STATEHOOD

HR 2535 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 88) March 3, 1955.

- Recommitted by the House May 10, by a roll-call vote of 218-170. (See p. 148.)

The House in 1955 recommitted a bill which would have granted statehood to both Hawaii and Alaska. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee held hearings during February but did not report a bill.

Statements by the President and testimony of witnesses before committees made it evident that security conditions entered strongly into the question of admission of either Hawaii or Alaska to the Union. The strategic situation of Alaska in the overall defense plans of the United States and the alleged influence of the Communist Party in Hawaii were cited by Congressmen as reasons for delaying any grant of statehood.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Hawaii-Alaska Statehood." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 394ff.)

Congress has been voting on admission of Hawaii to the Union since 1947, and on Alaska since 1950. Statehood bills have been introduced for decades. The House has voted three times in favor of Hawaiian statehood and once for Alaskan statehood. The first pro-statehood Senate vote came in 1954 on a bill to permit both territories to become states.

In 1947 the House passed a bill to grant statehood to Hawaii, on a roll-call vote of 195-133. The bill was not reported in the Senate. In 1948 an attempt to bring the bill to the Senate floor for action was defeated on a roll-call vote of 20-51. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IV, 1948, p. 289.)

In 1950 the House again passed a statehood bill for Hawaii, by a roll-call vote of 261-111. Again, the Senate did not act. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1950, pp. 410ff.) In 1951 the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee did report a bill favorably, but no floor action followed in 1951 or in 1952.

The House, on March 10, 1953, passed an Hawaiian statehood bill, as requested by President Eisenhower. The Senate amended the bill to include statehood for Alaska and passed it, by a roll-call vote of 57-28, April 1,

1954. The House Rules Committee rejected a move to bring the bill to conference. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X. 1954, pp. 394ff.)

The House passed an Alaskan statehood bill in 1950. A similar bill was recommitteed by the Senate in 1952. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 230ff.)

PRESIDENT'S REQUEST

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union speech on Jan. 6, 1955, declared:

"As the complex problems of Alaska are resolved, that Territory should expect to achieve statehood. In the meantime, there is no justification for deferring the admission to statehood of Hawaii. I again urge approval of this measure."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 25, 28, 31, Feb. 2, 4, 7-8 on identical bills (HR 2535, HR 2536) to admit both Hawaii and Alaska to statehood. The Committee Jan. 25 decided against extensive hearings, rejecting, 7-15, a motion by Rep. John R. Pillion (R N.Y.) to refer the bills to a subcommittee.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 25 -- Delegates E.L. Bartlett (D Alaska) and Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington (R Hawaii) urged early favorable action, noting that hearings had been held in prior Congresses.

Jan. 28 -- Sections of the bills dealing with Alaska were analyzed by Dr. John L. Taylor, consultant with the Subcommittee on Territories and Insular Affairs; Delegate Bartlett and George W. Abbott, Committee counsel.

Jan. 31 -- Taylor and Delegate Farrington analyzed sections dealing with Hawaii.

Jan Jabulka, executive secretary, Hawaii Statehood Commission, discussed Hawaii's alien population.

Testimony favoring the bills was offered by George Riley, of the American Federation of Labor legislative committee; Robert E. Kline, Jr., attorney for the U.S. Lines; and Ralph B. Dewey, Washington representative for the Association of Pacific Steamship Companies. Kline and Dewey discussed a proposed amendment dealing with shipping.

Feb. 2 -- Reps. Pillion and J. T. Rutherford (D Texas) questioned Hawaii's entitlement to two Representatives, as proposed by the bills.

ALASKA ADMISSION OPPOSED

Feb. 4 -- Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay endorsed immediate statehood for Hawaii but he opposed admission of Alaska before solution of problems involving the territory's "barren wildernesses" and development of resources.

Dr. Calvert Dedrick of the Bureau of the Census said the bills might increase House membership from 435 to 438, at least temporarily, and perhaps permanently.

Military jurisdiction over waterways between the U.S. and Hawaii was discussed by Lt. Col. N. L. Harvey of the Air Force, and W. J. Keating and Lt. Comdr. John Brock of the Navy.

Feb. 7 -- Provisions dealing with Alaska were discussed by Herbert J. Slaughter of the Department of Interior solicitor's office.

Feb. 8 -- R. R. Robbins of the State Department's office of dependent areas said admission of the territories would help foreign relations because it would show U.S. adherence to the principle of self-determination.

Lawrence E. Lindley of the Indian Rights Association, Philadelphia, suggested stronger provisions for protection of the rights of Alaskan natives.

Donald J. Chaney of the Interior Department's fish and wildlife service discussed Alaska's authority in controlling fisheries and wildlife.

AMENDMENTS VOTED

In closed session, the Committee agreed to the following amendment:

Mrs. Farrington -- Preserve subsidies granted to U.S. shipping lines serving Hawaii. Voice.

The Committee rejected the following amendments:

James A. Haley (D Fla.) -- Allot Hawaii one Representative, instead of two. 6-13.

Clifton Young (R Nev.) -- Reduce the grant of federal land to Alaska from 100 million to 50 million acres. 4-16.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Omit the requirement for approval of the Hawaiian Constitution by Congress, requiring only certification by the President. Voice.

Feb. 14 -- Rep. John R. Pillion (R N.Y.) urged that statehood for both territories be delayed pending adoption of a Constitutional amendment limiting their representation in the Senate (H J Res 30). Pillion also said "the extensive Communistic influences in Hawaii" would be a danger to the U.S. until an amendment was enacted to permit proportional representation in the Senate.

Feb. 15 -- Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said "it would be in the interest of the national security that Alaska remain a federal territory for the present." He saw "no objection to Hawaiian statehood." Wilson said Alaska's "great size...sparse population and limited communications, as well as its strategic location, creates very special defense problems..."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee Feb. 16 ordered favorably reported, with amendments, a bill (HR 2535) to admit both Hawaii and Alaska to the Union. The vote was 19-6. It was reported (H Rept 88) March 3.

PROVISIONS -- As amended, HR 2535 would have:

Specified that Alaska's constitution as well as Hawaii's should be forwarded to Congress by the President.

Required Congress to act on Hawaiian and Alaskan constitutions within 60 days after submission, with failure to act signifying approval.

Provided that Hawaii's and Alaska's representation in the House would increase that chamber's membership only until the reapportionment following the 1960 census, after which House membership would fall back to 435.

Permitted the President to establish a military reservation limited to 40 percent of the area of Alaska roughly north and west of the Yukon River.

The Committee deleted a provision which would have allowed Alaska 37.5 percent of the receipts derived from its national forests, as compared to the 25 percent allowed other states.

The Committee rejected amendments which would have permitted:

Approval by the President of the constitutions of the proposed states without further action from Congress.

Incorporation of Alaska into the state of Washington, and Hawaii into California and Utah.

(Hawaiian delegates in 1950 drafted a constitution to take effect upon admission to the Union. The constitution was approved by a 3-1 ratio in a plebiscite held in November, 1950. The Alaskan legislature voted in March, 1955 to call a constitutional convention on Nov. 8, 1955, to draft a state constitution.)

PRESIDENT'S OPPOSITION

President Eisenhower, at a news conference March 16, said he was not responsible for the security of the United States in 1950 when he made a statement favoring Alaskan statehood. He added that there were current national defense aspects to be solved before he could favor statehood.

In a March 31 letter to Rep. A. L. Miller (R Neb.) the President wrote, concerning Alaska: "I am in doubt that any form of legislation can wholly remove my apprehensions about granting statehood immediately. However, a proposal seeking to accommodate the many complex considerations entering into the (Alaskan) statehood question has been made by Secretary of the Interior McKay, and should legislation of this type be approved by the Congress, I assure you that I shall give it earnest consideration."

(McKay had advanced a plan to retain a large area of Alaska as a federal reservation for the use of the Department of Defense if statehood were granted.)

COMMITTEE -- Rules.

HEARINGS -- Intermittently from March 16 to April 19.

ACTION -- April 26 granted a closed rule (H Res 223) prohibiting amendments to HR 2535 and providing for seven hours debate on the bill. The Committee's action precluded any attempts to deal separately with either territory or to alter the terms under which each would be admitted to the Union.

Floor Action

The House May 9 adopted the closed rule (H Res 223) for debate on HR 2535 by a roll-call vote of 323-66.

On May 10 the House recommitted the bill by a 218-170 roll-call vote. There were 105 Democrats and 113 Republicans voting for Rep. Pillion's recommittal motion. Opposed were 107 Democrats and 63 Republicans. The action returned HR 2535 to the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. (For voting, see chart, page 148.)

DEBATE -- May 9 -- Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- If HR 2535 became law it would "change permanently the legal structure of our country...refresh the proof of the belief of the American people in the principles of self-determination, self-government, and freedom...bring to a conclusion a half century of tutelage in economic and political growth for the territories of Hawaii and Alaska..."

A. L. Miller (R Neb.) -- The FBI in 1951 "placed the number of Communists in Hawaii at 36...Since then, seven Hawaiian residents have been convicted of violating the Smith Act...Hawaii has fewer Communists percentagewise than New York, Chicago, Boston, or several other large cities of the United States."

May 10 -- James C. Davis (DGa.) -- The House Un-American Activities Committee and the Senate Judiciary Internal Security Subcommittee "defined and documented the existence of a hard core of Communist infiltration in both territories as recently as 1953. No member of this House believes that the short space of two years is adequate to eliminate and destroy the ideological roots of such a tenacious and insidious political concept."

George M. Rhodes (D Pa.) -- "To oppose statehood by raising the Communist issue is grist for the Communist propaganda mill. The Communists do not want statehood for Hawaii and Alaska. They prefer the present status because it gives them such an excellent argument in telling the...dark-skinned races that our talk about democracy and equality is insincere."

Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) -- Statehood "has become the tradition and practice of these United States and everywhere on this continent except in Alaska. It is high time...the United States should cease to practice colonialism, and instead practice what it preaches by conferring statehood on Alaska."

John R. Pillion (R N.Y.) -- "Hawaii can be fairly compared in population and area to an average congressional district. I am sure that every Member of this House would view with greatest alarm the prospect of having the same degree of communistic power in their districts, as now exists in Hawaii. In Hawaii, communistic power is centered in and its influence emanates from two unions, the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union -- the ILWU -- and the United Public Workers Union -- the UPW.... The CIO expelled both the ILWU and the UPW in 1950 on the ground that they were Communist controlled."

President Eisenhower May 11 said that he would have preferred to see Congress act on separate bills to bring statehood to Hawaii and Alaska because each should be considered on its merits.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Territories and Insular Affairs Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 21, 22, 28 on a bill (S 49) to admit both Hawaii and Alaska to the Union.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 21 -- Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay said Hawaii was "clearly ready for statehood" but Alaska presented separate problems. McKay indicated he would favor Alaskan statehood if a large area of land was set aside as a military reservation. Delegate E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska) said Alaska should be given 100 percent of her land, rather than 30 or 40 percent. Bartlett backed the proposed bill, as did Delegate Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington (R Hawaii).

Feb. 22 -- James H. Douglas, Under Secretary of Air Force, said statehood for Alaska had "no apparent advantage" and "can't help but create new problems." Douglas said Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson was reluctant to see Alaska become a state because he felt a defense problem would be created. Douglas said the Defense Department would not object to Hawaiian statehood because of the island's "stability."

Miles Brandon of Anchorage, Alaska, and William Zimmerman, representing the Association on American Indian Affairs, urged an amendment "to make certain there is no danger to native land claims." Robert E. Kline, Jr., attorney for the United States Lines, and Ralph

B. Dewey, representing the Pacific American Steamship Association, requested an amendment extending to "island states" privileges currently reserved for steamships serving island territories. Elmer Bennett, legislative counsel of the Department of Interior, testified on technical phases of the bill.

COMMONWEALTHS PROPOSED

Feb. 28 -- Sens. A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) and J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) suggested the adoption of a substitute proposal which would provide some form of commonwealth status for the two territories. Monroney said "there is a grave doubt" that the citizens of the territories were united in favoring statehood. Granting commonwealth status, he continued, was the "best means of giving to these two territories a workable program for effective self-government...without breaking the precedent heretofore observed for granting statehood only to contiguous areas within the land mass of the United States."

Delegates Bartlett (D Alaska) and Farrington opposed the commonwealth proposal. They argued that the existing territorial status of Hawaii and Alaska was not subject to withdrawal in favor of a lesser political status.

Bartlett said that the people of both territories defeated the commonwealth proposal at the polls. Mrs. Farrington also contended that the people of Hawaii wanted full American citizenship.

The Committee took no action on S 49 in 1955.

CAMPAIGN SPENDING

S 636 -- Reported, amended, by the Senate Rules and Administration Committee (S Rept 624) June 22, 1955.

S 636 would revise federal election laws and increase campaign spending limits. It was introduced by Sen. Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.), who said existing laws "are so inadequate, so antiquated, and so riddled with loopholes that they invite evasion." Extensive hearings were held in April and May, 1955, but no action was taken on the Senate floor.

Major changes in existing laws proposed in S 636 were:

Campaign costs in primary elections, currently excluded from federal regulation, would be included as amounts both to be reported and to be weighed in determining whether a candidate had exceeded legal spending limits.

All committees active in campaigns for federal office would have to file financial reports. Only political committees active in two or more states were required to file under existing law.

No committee could operate without the written authorization of the candidate for whom it was acting. Although not required by federal law, this feature was embodied in Florida's law.

Spending limit for Senatorial candidates would be raised to $50,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying 10 cents by the total vote cast for that office in the last primary or general election. This limit would govern total spending, including that of committees, but it would apply separately to primary and general elections. The existing limit for Senate races was $10,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying 3 cents by the total number of votes cast for that office at the last general election, but not more than $25,000.

Spending limit for House candidates would be raised to $12,500, or the sum obtained by the 10-cent formula. Existing limit for House races was $2,500, or the sum obtained by the 3-cent formula, but not more than $5,000.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE LIMIT

S 636 also would raise the existing $3 million limit placed on the spending of national political committees such as the Republican and Democratic National Committees and their Senate and House campaign committees. The new limit would equal the sum obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total vote cast for President in any one of the last three elections. With a vote of more than 61 million in 1952, this formula would raise the committee spending limit above $12 million.

Another spending limit proposal was submitted by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.). His bill (HR 1767) proposed fixing the national committee spending limit at $10 million, holding the limit for Senatorial candidates to $50,000, for House candidates to $5,000. Neither of the latter limits would include committee spending.

The first comprehensive federal statute dealing with corrupt practices in elections was adopted in 1870, when the Enforcement Act outlawed fraudulent action in connection with elections. In 1894, however, Congress repealed most of the Act's provisions. In 1907 the Tillman Act prohibited corporations and national banks from making money contributions for elections.

The first Federal Corrupt Practices Act, enacted in 1910, provided that all political committees attempting to influence Congressional elections in two or more states must file statements with the Clerk of the House of Representatives covering contributions and expenditures. Persons, firms, associations, and committees spending more than $50 also were required to submit statements. This act was amended in 1911 to limit campaign expenditures of candidates for the House to $5,000, for the Senate to $10,000. Candidates were bound by state limits, however, if these were lower. The amendment also extended coverage to nominating campaigns as well as elections.

A new Federal Corrupt Practices Act was enacted in 1925, retaining many features of the earlier legislation, but specifically exempting primaries and conventions from coverage. It also set these limits on candidates' spending:

Senator -- $10,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying 3 cents by the total number of votes cast at the last general election for that office, but in no case more than $25,000; Representative -- $2,500, or a sum calculated as above, but in no case more than $5,000. No limits were placed on committees.

HATCH ACT

In 1939 the Hatch Political Activities Act was passed prohibiting active participation in politics by federal employees and the use of relief funds for political purposes. Certain provisions of this act were extended in 1940 when limits were set at $5,000 for annual political contributions by individuals and $3 million by political committees in a federal election.

Congress in 1943 extended the 1907 prohibition against political contributions by national banks and corporations to include certain financial activities by labor unions when it passed the War Labor Disputes Act. This prohibition was made permanent by the Taft-Hartley Labor Management Relations Act of 1947, and was extended to apply to primaries, conventions, or caucuses on federal elections.

The Taft-Hartley law apparently left unmolested contributions by political affiliates with separate treasuries. However, the Wisconsin legislature in 1955 passed a law sponsored by State Assembly Leader Mark Catlin, Jr. (R) which was modeled on the Corrupt Practices Act but designed to ban all labor campaign spending.

In 1953, the Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee recommended an increase in national spending limits from $3 million a year to $10 million a year. The recommendation was in the form of a Jan. 24 request to the full Committee, but no bill was reported to the Senate floor.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Rules and Administration, Privileges and Elections Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 12, 13, 19, 20, 26; May 10, 17, 19 on S 636.

TESTIMONY -- April 12 -- Paul M. Butler, Democratic national chairman, and Leonard W. Hall, Republican national chairman, agreed that existing election laws should be revised, particularly the $3 million limit on campaign spending by a national committee. Existing spending limits, they agreed, were out-dated because of television, air travel, and the decreased value of the dollar.

Butler suggested the limit be increased to $6 million. Hall, while not suggesting any specific figure, said the GOP could "get along with" the $12 million figure proposed in S 636. He also proposed that reasonable and equal free TV time be allotted each party in a Presidential election, and that some federal funds be made available for Presidential campaigns.

Hall asked for a change in the Hatch Act to allow a national political committee to sell material, particularly, he said, a magazine. He said the Republicans had been thinking of publishing and selling a magazine, but did not do so because their attorneys said it would be a violation. Butler said the "Democratic Digest," a magazine, was published by the Democratic Digest Corp., and not by the Democratic National Committee.

Hall criticized a provision in S 636 which would make a candidate for federal office responsible for all spending in his behalf and put an over-all limit on the amount of this spending. He said dozens of committees were set up in some large states, extending as far as the precinct level, and it would be virtually impossible for a candidate to keep track of all of them.

April 13 -- Samuel Lubell, political scientist and author, and Marvin A. Harder, Kansas state Democratic chairman, agreed that laws must be modernized to meet increased campaign costs, then enforced rigidly to prevent fraud.

FULL PUBLICITY NEEDED

Lubell, who said he did not think Congress would be able to pass one law that would be completely foolproof, suggested a continuing study with first legislative steps to include punishment for those who break the law, full publicity on contributions and expenditures, and periodic revision of the law to plug loopholes.

Harder said he did not think S 636 provided sufficient penalties. He suggested a penalty of forfeiture of office for candidates if their expenditures exceeded legal limits. He also said the bill should apply to any group whose purpose was to influence elections, even though it might not be classified as a political organization.

Another Harder suggestion would ban expenditures for newspaper advertising at rates above commercial rates. He also advocated uniform election laws in all states to make spending, reporting, and ceiling regulations applicable to state and local candidates as well as federal candidates.

April 19 -- Harold E. Fellows of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters said if free radio and TV time were granted candidates "there would be no time on the air for anything else for a couple of months." He said the industry had experienced no great difficulty with libel suits arising from political talks, even though it was unable to censor such talks and was subject to libel suits as a result of what a candidate said.

Prof. Alexander Heard, University of North Carolina, suggested the government "guarantee that responsible political competitors have balanced and limited access to radio and television time, either at reduced cost or at no cost to themselves." He also suggested allowing candidates to deduct part of their campaign expenses for income tax purposes and that political organizations be required to report only those campaign contributions above $250 or $500.

Neal Staebler, Michigan state Democratic chairman, said under existing campaign expense laws, "the limits don't really limit." He suggested limits only on TV, radio, and newspaper advertising which, he said, took the bulk of campaign funds.

April 20 -- Rep. Harlan Hagen (D Calif.) and Mrs. Clara Shirpsen, California Democratic National Committee member, generally supported S 636. Hagen said he doubted if any campaign spending limits would be effective, but "we can require timely, compulsory disclosure" of campaign contributions.

FREE RADIO-TV TIME ASKED

April 26 -- Federal Communications Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock said she felt free television and radio time should be made available to major political parties in important elections. If free time proved an excessive burden on networks, she advocated the use of public funds to help share the cost.

"Present law," she said, "fails to meet the critical issue...that at election time the ability of the candidate to present his case...frequently depends...on the length of his purse or his party's purse. The costs of reaching the public over television and radio at election time are so great that there is grave danger that the outcome of our elections will depend on the war chests of the candidate and his party and not upon...their qualifications."

She suggested establishment of a joint Congressional and Presidential committee to work out a practical program of free time. Emphasizing that she spoke for herself and not the FCC, she added she was not advocating free advertising space in the press because the press was not licensed by the federal government.

Richard S. Salant of the Columbia Broadcasting System called free time proposals "unsound, unwise, and unworkable." He said his own firm did "not profiteer or even profit" from political campaigns and assailed an existing requirement that free time be shared equally, on grounds that "splinter party" demands could be excessive.

May 10 -- Warren E. Baker FCC counsel, said existing procedures to assure equal air and television time to all candidates were working fairly. Warren Olney, III, Assistant Attorney General (Criminal Division), approved the bill generally but suggested more specific definitions in some cases and elimination of duplication in others. Olney said the federal government "actually plays a minor role" in policing elections because of lack of needed powers.

May 17 -- Clarence Mitchell of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People urged legislation to penalize anyone interfering with another person's right to vote. He also supported a section of S 636 designed to fix responsibility for literature published in behalf of candidates. Through this provision, he said, it might be possible to expose those who financed what he described as "scurrilous material" used to stir up racial issues in election campaigns.

John Feikens, chairman of the Michigan Republican Committee, urged provisions to prevent union members from being forced to pay dues for political purposes. He accused CIO leaders in Michigan of using "vast amounts of union dues, money gathered for the purpose of advancing the cause of labor," to support political candidates.

Feikens said some of the contributions made to the 1954 campaign of Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.) violated the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, which barred unions from contributing directly to political parties or candidates. The GOP leader said he was not accusing McNamara of any law violation. McNamara later said he knew nothing about the source of funds received in his campaign so far as any unions were concerned.

May 19 -- Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) said S 636 would require such detailed reporting of campaign funds that it would be an "open invitation to evasion" or would cause persons to drop out of political activity completely.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee June 22 reported S 636 (S Rept 624).

The report termed S 636 "realistic, workable and adequate." It said "the requirements imposed by the bill on political committees and candidates...are not excessive or burdensome. In fact, these requirements would assist such candidates and political committees by increasing public confidence in the conduct of election campaigns.... The time has long passed when Congress could afford to temporize on a matter so important as the realistic control of corruption in campaigns for elective federal office...."

In minority views on S 636, four Republican Senators -- William E. Jenner (Ind.), Frank A. Barrett (Wyo.), Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.), and Carl T. Curtis (Neb.) -- called the bill "cumbersome and unworkable." They said it would expand federal power by "transferring more functions to the federal government and relieving the states and local governments from their responsibilities." They criticized S 636 for failing to deal with what they termed "the widespread abuse wherein millions of laboring men and women are compelled to give financial aid to candidates and to a political party not of their own choice" through labor unions. The four Senators said they also thought many features of S 636 would be unconstitutional.

PRIMARIES, CONVENTIONS AFFECTED

PROVISIONS -- As reported, S 636 would:

Apply to primary elections, conventions, and nominating caucuses as well as direct elections for President, Vice President, and Members of Congress.

Apply to all political committees which accept contributions or make expenditures of more than $100 in any calendar year for the purpose of influencing or attempting to influence the election of candidates.

Prohibit any political committee outside the regular party organization from accepting contributions or spending money in behalf of a candidate -- except those for President or Vice President -- until the candidate or his designated representative authorized the committee to support him.

Permit a candidate to withdraw his authorization from any committee in order to disassociate himself from questionable activities.

Require each political committee to have a chairman and treasurer and prohibit contributions to or expenditures by the committee until these two officers were chosen.

Require expenditures to be made only by the chairman or treasurer of a political committee.

Require persons accepting a contribution in behalf of a political committee to report the contribution to the treasurer within five days.

Require the treasurer to record all contributions and expenditures and keep receipted bills for every expenditure exceeding $100. The records and receipts would be kept for three years.

Require political committee treasurers to report their spending and contributions to the Clerk of the House or Secretary of the Senate three times a year during an election year and twice in other years. Committees backing candidates for the Presidency, Vice Presidency, and Senate would report to the Senate, all others to the House.

Require persons spending more than $100 a year for influencing an election, except by contribution to a political committee, to file a report.

Require a candidate to file reports of his contributions and spending.

Require candidates to report promises made by him or his representative which would pledge a person employment for his support.

Provide that copies of all reports filed with Congress would also be filed with the clerk of the U.S. district court in the district in which the candidate lived or had his main office.

Require that statements be made under oath.

Require the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate to make statements available for public inspection and to periodically publish summaries of the statements.

Require these summaries and reports by the Clerk of the House and Secretary of the Senate to be transmitted to the House Administration Committee and the Senate Rules and Administration Committee so the Committees might check them and supervise the administration of the election laws.

SPENDING LIMITS

Permit candidates for nomination or election to the Senate to spend $50,000, or the sum obtained by multiplying by 10 cents the number of votes cast in the last prior election for all candidates for the office sought.

Permit candidates for nomination or election to the House to spend $12,500, or an amount equal to the number of votes cast in the previous election multiplied by 10 cents.

Require that expenditures on behalf of a candidate by a political committee be included in the above-listed limits.

Set $10,000 as the maximum contribution by any person to federal election campaigns in any one year.

Permit national political committees to receive contributions and spend up to the amount obtained by multiplying 20 cents by the total number of votes cast for all candidates for Presidential elector in any one of the last three final elections for that office.

Require all publicity materials concerned with federal elections to have the names and addresses of the persons or organizations responsible for them.

FEDERAL-STATE REPORT

The Commission on Intergovernmental Relations June 28, 1955 issued a 311-page report on its two-year study of federal-state relationships. The report said a "fundamental objective of our system of government should be to keep centralization to a minimum and state-local responsibility to a maximum." The strengthening of state and local governments was essentially a task for the states themselves, the Commission said. It recommended that states overhaul their constitutions to give them and their local units enough authority to make federal intervention unnecessary.

Although sprinkled liberally with dissents, the report mustered a majority on all major issues. Democratic Sens. Wayne Morse (Ore.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.) were the chief dissenters, with Morse filing a general dissent on the ground that the report "goes too far in playing down the doctrine of federal responsibility."

Background

REFERENCES -- "Federal-State Relations Study." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp 438ff.); "Intergovernmental Relations Study" (Vol. X, 1954, pp. 406ff.).

The 25-member Commission was established in 1953, at the request of President Eisenhower, to make the first official full-scale study of the complex relations among federal, state, and local governments since the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Meyer Kestnbaum, Chicago businessman and president of the Committee for Econimic Development, replaced Clarence E. Manion as chairman, April 21, 1954. Manion resigned Feb. 17, 1954, after a policy dispute with the White House.

The Commission was originally scheduled to make its report by March 1, 1954, but Congress in 1954 gave it a one-year extension. Rep. Brooks Hays (D Ark.) in 1955 introduced a bill (HR 2010) to extend the deadline to June 30, 1955. HR 2010 was passed by the House Jan. 27 and by the Senate Feb. 1. Signed by the President Feb. 7, it became Public Law 5.

MEMBERSHIP

Of the members who signed the final report to President Eisenhower, these were appointees of the President:

Meyer Kestnbaum, chairman.
Ex-Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll (R N.J., 1947-53), vice chairman.
Prof. William Anderson, University of Minnesota.
President Lawrence A. Appley, American Management Association.
Ex-Gov. John S. Battle (D Va., 1950-54).
Vice President John E. Burton, Cornell University.
Marion B. Folsom, then Under Secretary of Treasury, later Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.
Ex-Mayor Charles Henderson (R) of Youngstown, Ohio.
Oveta Culp Hobby, then Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.
Ex-Gov. Sam H. Jones (D La., 1940-44).
Chancellor Clark Kerr, University of California.
Alice K. Leopold, Department of Labor.
Administrator Val Peterson, Federal Civil Defense Admisistration.
Gov. Allan Shivers (D Texas).
Ex-Gov. Dan Thornton (R Colo., 1951-55).

Appointees of Vice President Richard M. Nixon, as President of the Senate:

Sen. Alan Bible (D Nev.).
Sen. John Marshall Butler (R Md.).
Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.).
Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.).
Sen. Andrew F. Schoeppel (R Kan.).

Appointees of the Speaker of the House:

Rep. John D. Dingell (D Mich.), who died Sept. 19, 1955.
Rep. James I. Dolliver (R Iowa).
Ex-Rep. Angier L. Goodwin (R Mass., 1943-55).
Rep. Brooks Hays (D Ark.).
Rep. Harold C. Ostertag (R N.Y.).

Major Recommendations

The Commission's findings were, for the most part, general and noncontroversial. Exceptions were recommendations concerning civil defense, school aid, highways, and soil conservation. The major recommendations:

Special Assistant -- "There should be a special assistant in the executive office of the President to serve with a small staff as the President's chief aide and advisor on state and local relationships.... He would be the coordinating center."

Advisory Board -- "An Advisory Board on Intergovernmental Relations would be appointed by the President....

"In addition to calling regular and special meetings of this board, the special assistant would act for the President in convening meetings of governors, mayors, and others. He would collaborate with the Treasury Department in arranging conferences for the over-all consideration of national-state-local fiscal adjustments."

Assistant Secretaries -- "The Bureau of the Budget could profitably intensify its concern with over-all fiscal aspects of national-state-local relations....

"In certain of the departments, at least, assistant secretaries should be designated to deal with broad questions of national-state-local adjustments arising in the department's work." (The Departments of Agriculture and of Health, Education, and Welfare already had such arrangements.)

ROLE OF CONGRESS

"Congress is urged to provide the funds necessary to accomplish these objectives." (No amount is suggested in the report.) "It is hoped that Congress, even more than in the past, will give attention to the over-all aspects of intergovernmental relations when considering particular measures, and will systematically invite representatives of state and local levels to participate in all relevant hearings. It may be helpful to maintain active subcommittees on intergovernmental relations in the Committees on Government Operations." (The House Government Operations Committee already had an Intergovernmental Relations Subcommittee.)

MINIMUM STANDARDS

"When a national minimum standard is imposed in a field where uniformity is not imperative, the right of states to set more rigorous standards should be carefully preserved."

STATE FINANCES

Reappraisal -- "The Commission believes that each state should undertake a searching reappraisal of its fiscal policies, including the constitutional and statutory limitations on its taxation and borrowing activities, the limitations on the fiscal powers of local governments, the systems of property tax administration, and the financial aids it is providing its subdivisions."

Overlapping Taxes -- "When further tax reductions are possible, the Commission urges the Congress to give full consideration to the problems of tax overlapping along with the other factors...which must also be weighed in tax reduction decisions. While the Commission believes that complete separation of revenue sources is not practical at this time, it sees merit in reducing the overlapping which now exists."

Payments in Lieu of Taxes -- "The Commission recommends that the national government inaugurate a broad system of payments in lieu of property taxes to state and local governments." (Congress in 1955 provided for such payments on property formerly owned by the now defunct Reconstruction Finance Corporation. RFC paid taxes, but the agencies which took over the property did not.)

PROGRAMS AND POLICIES

Highways -- "The Commission recommends that the expanded highway program be financed substantially on a pay-as-you-go basis and that Congress provide additional revenues for this purpose, primarily from increased motor fuel taxes." (A bill along these lines, sponsored by Rep. George H. Fallon (D Md.), was rejected by the House July 27, as was the Administration's plan for bond financing. See story, pp. 431ff.)

Education -- "The Commission does not recommend a general program of federal financial assistance to elementary and secondary education, believing that the states have the capacity to meet their educational requirements. However, where, upon a clear factual finding of need and lack of resources, it is demonstrated that one or more states do not have sufficient tax resources to support an adequate school system, the national government, through some appropriate means, would be justified in assisting such states temporarily in financing the construction of school facilities -- exercising particular caution to avoid interference by the national government in educational processes or programs."

Civil Defense -- "The Commission recommends that Congress amend the Federal Civil Defense Act as follows:

"a. To reallocate responsibility for civil defense from a primary state and local responsibility to a responsibility of the national government, with states and localities retaining an important supporting role.

"b. To provide that the national government will be responsible for over-all planning and direction of the civil defense effort, development of civil defense policies and technical doctrine, and stimulation of interstate cooperation; and that states and localities will be responsible for day-to-day planning operations and the adaptation of national policies and doctrine to local situations."

Soil Conservation -- "It is recommended...that the present program of soil conservation technical assistance to farmers be continued as presently organized and operated; with the provision, however, that in any state which, in order to improve, expand, and participate more fully in the program, submits a plan...satisfactory to the Secretary of Agriculture, and which agrees to appropriate funds sufficient to provide for such expansion and improvement..., the program may be placed upon a grant-in aid basis, with state administration...under the supervision of the Soil Conservation Service."

Soil Conservation Payments -- "It is recommended that the Secretary of Agriculture implement...those provisions of the basic legislation governing agricultural conservation payments that call for state administration of the payments... Federal payments would be rendered to the states, based upon state plans approved by the Secretary of Agriculture."

FEW DISSENTS

Although dissents from the foregoing and other recommendations were expressed by varying numbers of Commission members, only one dissent was registered on the report as a whole. Sen. Morse dissented on the degree of emphasis placed upon the respective roles of state and national governments, saying the report "goes too far in playing down the doctrine of federal sovereignty." Rep. Dingell said that, because he had been unable to participate fully in the Commission's work, he disassociated himself from the report without indicating approval or disapproval.

Action Taken

Following the report, these actions were taken to implement the recommendations.

• The White House June 15 appointed ex-Gov. Howard Pyle (R Ariz., 1951-55), an administrative assistant to the President, as deputy assistant to the President, for intergovernmental relations.

• The White House July 11 appointed Commission Chairman Kestnbaum a consultant to the President, to follow through on recommendations both of the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and the Second (Hoover) Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the government. (See p. 367.)

• Budget Bureau Director Rowland R. Hughes Aug. 25 directed all federal departments and agencies to submit by Sept. 30 their views on Kestnbaum Commission recommendations relating to their own areas of activity.

HOUSE APPOINTMENTS

S J Res 8 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 229) April 25, 1955.
• Passed by the Senate on a 76-3 roll-call vote May 19. (See p. 124.)

The Senate in 1955 voted to amend the Constitution to provide for temporary appointments to the House of Representatives. The proposed amendment was intended to insure "continuity of representation" in the House in the event of a national disaster.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S J Res 8 called for a Constitutional amendment to:

Permit governors to appoint temporary House members "on any date that the total number of vacancies... exceeds half of the authorized" House membership.

Permit a member so appointed to serve until a special election was called by the governor as provided in the Constitution.

BACKGROUND -- The subject had been under consideration by the Senate Judiciary Committee since the 81st Congress. A similar measure was passed by the Senate on June 4, 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 412ff.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee.

HEARING -- March 15 on S J Res 8.

TESTIMONY -- Representatives of the Office of Defense Mobilization and Civil Defense Administration, Charles McKinley of the American Political Science Association, C. Herman Pritchett of the University of Chicago, and C.D. Robson of the University of North Carolina supported the idea of letting governors replace dead or disabled Congressmen after a nuclear weapons attack or other disaster.

ACTION -- The resolution was reported by the full Committee April 25 (S Rept 229), with an amendment to eliminate specific reference to a disaster.

S J Res 8 was needed, reported the Committee, because "when the Constitution was drafted, the ability to destroy people on a mass basis...had not been developed. It was, therefore, highly unlikely that the membership of the House...could be so decimated as to render that body incapable of exercising its Constitutional function."

The Committee noted that existing law assured that vacancies in the Presidency, the Senate, and the judiciary, could be quickly filled, thus leaving only the House in need of some way to fill vacancies without delay in the event of a disaster.

Floor Action

The Senate May 19, by a roll-call vote of 76-3, passed S J Res 8. (For voting, see chart, p. 124.)

DEBATE -- Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- "With some knowledge of the tremendous destructive power of thermonuclear weapons it would...be the height of folly to delay submitting this amendment."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- The resolution was "a form of insurance which we hope...never to be called upon to use" but, if a disaster did happen and the House could not act, "it would handicap the proper functioning of the government under our Constitutional processes."

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- By things such as S J Res 8 "we help create a sense of fear in the minds of ourselves and in the minds of all the people...It is one of the great heritages of the House...that no person has ever taken a seat or cast a vote in that body except by virtue of election by the people...If that great heritage of the House...is to be destroyed, let the suggestion come first from the House..."

HOUSE ACTION

The House May 23 referred S J Res 8 to the Judiciary Committee. No further action was taken in 1955.

TRAVEL EXPENSES

S 1580 -- Reported by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 348) May 11, 1955.
• Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, amended, May 19.
HR 6295 -- Reported by House Government Operations Committee (H Rept 604) May 19.
• Passed by the House, by a 320-41 roll-call vote, June 20. (See p. 154.)
• Passed by the Senate June 22, amended, by voice vote.
• Conference report (H Rept 1088) agreed to by the House July 12 and the Senate July 13, by voice votes.
P.L. 189 -- Signed into law July 28.

Congress enacted legislation in July, 1955, raising travel and subsistence allowances for government employees and consultants. President Eisenhower Jan. 11 requested Congress to enact such legislation.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law and amended the Travel Expense Act of 1949, HR 6295:

Increased the daily travel and subsistence allowance for government employees from $9 to $12.

Raised the mileage rate for privately owned vehicles used for official business, from 4 to 6 cents for motorcycles, from 7 to 10 cents for automobiles and airplanes.

Increased the daily expense allowance for "without compensation" workers, such as consultants, from $10 to $15.

Authorized heads of departments to prescribe conditions where expenses "due to the unusual circumstances of a travel assignment" would be reimbursed up to $25 a day.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Post Office and Civil Service.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- May 11 reported S 1580 (S Rept 348) to provide for a daily expense allowance up to $13.

Floor Action

The Senate May 19, by voice vote, passed S 1580, amending it to provide a $12 maximum daily expense allowance.

DEBATE -- Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "The military pay bill...provided a maximum of $12 (for daily travel expenses). It is the belief...of...members of the (Armed Services) Committee which handled the...(military pay) legislation that there should be a uniform per diem allowance."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Johnson -- Decrease from $13 to $12 the maximum daily travel expenses allowed. Voice.

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations.

HEARINGS -- Held April 26 on HR 6295.

ACTION -- The Committee May 19 reported HR 6295 would have provided a maximum daily expense allowance of $13.

Floor Action

The House June 20 passed HR 6295 by a 320-41 roll-call vote, without amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 154.)

DEBATE -- Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.) -- "The (allowance) increase...is necessary in view of the increase in the cost of travel...and subsistence from 1949 to the present date." The provision for a $25 subsistence allowance in special cases would correct an "inequitable situation" where Secret Service men accompanying the President must stay at the same expensive hotel.

J. Vaughn Gary (D Va.) -- The agents "have been forced to pay the high hotel rates out of their own pockets because the allowance (of $9) was not sufficient."

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- "I do not believe these federal employees are in such hard straits. If they were, they would not accept their jobs." The government should cut expenses, not add to the national debt.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate June 22, by voice vote, passed HR 6295, amending it to conform with S 1580 as adopted May 19. The amended bill went to conference.

Conference

REPORT -- In a July 11 report (H Rept 1088) Senate and House conferees agreed on the Senate version of HR 6295.

ACTION -- The House July 12 agreed to H Rept 1088 by voice vote, without debate, and the Senate followed suit July 13.

ANTI-COMMUNIST PROBES

S Res 18 -- Adopted by the Senate Jan. 14, 1955, by a 84-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 115.)

The resolution recognized the U.S. Communist Party as part of an "international Communist conspiracy" and placed the Senate on record as favoring continued committee investigations of subversion.

PROVISIONS -- S Res 18 declared:

"The Communist Party of the United States is recognized to be a part of the international Communist conspiracy against the United States and all democratic forms of government. It is the sense of the Senate that its appropriate committees should continue diligently and vigorously to investigate, expose and combat this conspiracy and all subversive elements and persons connected therewith, including the completion of all pending and unfinished investigations of such nature."

BACKGROUND -- A similar resolution was offered during the November, 1954, session of the Senate, as an amendment to the resolution to condemn Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), but it was ruled non-germane. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 466ff.)

Senate

S Res 18 was introduced Jan. 10 by Sen. Price Daniel (D Texas) with 53 co-sponsors -- 31 Democrats and 22 Republicans. Daniel said language of the proposed resolution was broad enough to imply approval of completion of the investigation into the honorable discharge of Major Irving Peress. (See p. 516.)

Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.), Chairman of the Government Operations Committee and its Permanent Investigations Subcommittee said his group considered the Peress case "unfinished business" that warranted further action.

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) placed in the record a 10,000-word "chronology," released by the Army Jan. 7, listing 62 persons involved in the induction, promotion and discharge of Peress. The report said that the final decision to discharge Peress had been made by Army counselor John G. Adams and Lt. Gen. Walter L. Weible, deputy chief of staff for operations and administration.

Daniel said the Senate should make clear that its 1954 condemnation of McCarthy did not mean that the Senate "would terminate or soften its investigation of communism and subversion."

Floor Action

S Res 18 was ordered to lie on the table, and was taken up Jan. 14 without referral to a committee.

After adoption of the resolution Jan. 14 by an 84-0 roll-call vote (see p. 115), McCarthy -- one of the sponsors -- debated with Daniel and others the question of the sincerity of Democrats who had supported the measure.

McCarthy -- "Such a resolution is meaningless except as a political gesture....There are those who signed that pious resolution who are opposed to digging out Communists, and who are attempting...to remove the stench from their hands and the mud from their skirts (left from the vote to condemn McCarthy's conduct)."

He expressed doubt that the Democratic leadership would energetically pursue exposure of communism.

Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.), who was presiding, twice ordered McCarthy to be seated for violating, Long said, Senate rules forbidding a Senator to impugn the motives of his colleagues.

The Senate vote completed action on the resolution, which had no binding effect.

NATO DELEGATION

H Con Res 109 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 452) April 28, 1955.

• Adopted by the House June 20 on a 337-31 roll-call vote. (See p. 154.)

S Con Res 29 -- Reported by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 548) June 14.

H Con Res 109 -- Reported by Senate Committee on Rules and Administration June 30 (S Rept 693).

• Adopted by the Senate July 1, by voice vote.

Congress voted in 1955 to send a 14-member delegation to Paris to attend a Parliamentary Conference of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as a "tangible demonstration of the continuing desire of the American people to support the Organization." The delegation would "meet jointly with the representative parliamentary groups from other NATO members" to discuss "common problems in the interests of the maintenance of peace and security in the North Atlantic area."

PROVISIONS -- As adopted, H Con Res 109:

Authorized appointment of a maximum of seven House and seven Senate members, no more than four from either house to be of the same political party, to attend the meeting.

Provided $15,000 for the expenses of each chamber's delegation.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

ACTION -- April 28 reported H Con Res 109 (H Rept 452), which was introduced by Chairman James P. Richards (D S.C.).

Floor Action

The House June 20 adopted the resolution on a roll-call vote of 337-31. (For voting, see chart, p. 154.)

DEBATE -- Richards -- The meeting's purpose is to "try to accomplish better civil unity...in regard to the parliamentary bodies which passed the laws by which NATO has the authority to operate."

Karl M. LeCompte (R Iowa) -- "NATO is costing the taxpayers of America a great many millions of dollars annually. In my opinion, it will be an economy measure for us to have a delegation there to find out what is going on in NATO and report back to the Congress."

H. R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "Is not our viewpoint known to these people? Must we spend $15,000 to send a bunch of Congressmen junketing to Paris?"

Senate

COMMITTEES -- Foreign Relations, and Rules and Administration.

ACTION -- On June 14 the Foreign Relations Committee reported a concurrent resolution (S Con Res 29) similar to H Con Res 109 (S Rept 548).

H Con Res 109 was reported by the Committee on Rules and Administration on June 30 (S Rept 693).

Floor Action

The Senate July 1 adopted, by voice vote, without debate, the resolution reported by the Rules Committee (H Con Res 109).

CONFEREES NAMED

The following House members were appointed July 12 by Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) in accordance with the resolution. Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio), Frank E. Smith (D Miss.), Victor L. Anfuso (D N.Y.), Leroy Johnson (R Calif.), Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.) and Frank J. Becker (R N.Y.). On July 13, Smith resigned and Stewart L. Udall (D Ariz.) was named to replace him. Hays headed the delegation which attended the conference in July, 1955.

The legislative schedule of the Senate made it impossible for any of its members to attend the meeting. A cablegram addressed to Hays by Vice President Richard M. Nixon July 18 explained the Senate's situation and assured the conferees that it did not "imply any lack of interest in the undertaking."

HOUSE COMMITTEE RULES

H Res 151 -- Reported by House Rules Committee (H Rept 159) March 8, 1955.

• Adopted by voice vote of the House March 23.

H Res 151 amended House Rules to provide a minimum standard of conduct for House committees. The question of the right of witnesses before Congressional investigating committees had been studied, and a number of proposals scrutinized, by the Legislative Procedure Subcommittee of the House Rules Committee in 1953 and 1954. H Res 151, introduced by Rep. Clyde Doyle (D Calif.), was the first to be reported by the House Rules Committee. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 375-9.)

PROVISIONS -- As adopted by the House, H Res 151:

Required a quorum of not less than two committee members for taking testimony and receiving evidence.

Obliged the chairman to announce at the outset the subject of investigation.

Allowed witnesses at investigations to be accompanied by counsel.

Permitted citation for contempt of witnesses breaching decorum, and counsel breaching "professional ethics."

Required a committee, if it found that evidence "may tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person," to receive the evidence in secret session and to allow the person injured to appear as a witness and to request subpenas of other witnesses.

Required committee consent for release of evidence taken in secret session.

Permitted witnesses, in the committee's discretion, to submit additional sworn statements for inclusion in the record.

House

COMMITTEE -- Rules.

HEARINGS -- March 1-3 on fair committee practices.

TESTIMONY -- Nine House members gave their views on fair committee procedures. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) said March 2 that Congress must develop procedures which would not interfere with its own investigative powers and, at the same time, insure "maximum fairness, dignity, and efficiency" and public confidence in hearings.

ACTION -- March 8 reported H Res 151 (H Rept 159).

Floor Action

The House March 23 adopted H Res 151, with committee amendments, by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Howard W. Smith (D Va.), Rules Committee chairman -- "This resolution is intended to lay down the general groundwork that will, perhaps, avoid some of the criticism that has taken place in the past." He called attention to the proviso that "abolishes the custom of one-man subcommittees" and to the requirement that "when a person is named in a committee hearing and his good reputation besmirched, he shall have a prompt opportunity to appear and refute the charges."

George Meader (R Mich.) -- Questioned whether witnesses might not stall investigations with demands for counsel.

Edwin E. Willis (D La.) -- Supported the requirement for a two-member quorum. "Some witnesses are tough...resourceful...cunning...offensive and...downright insulting. Two heads are better than one in situations of this kind. I am opposed to a one-man hearing, not only for the protection of the witness but more importantly for the preservation of orderly proceedings and the dignity of the committees of Congress."

Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) -- Praised past House investigations, saying, "...if there have been any general public complaints as to any violation of individual or civil rights by any congressional committee they have not... been directed in any volume toward the work of the House committees."

"TOTALLY INADEQUATE" REVISION

Hugh Scott (R Pa.), former chairman of the Legislative Procedure Subcommittee -- "The Doyle resolution does not do anything which was not already in the discretion of committee chairmen...except as to the two-man quorum, and that is bad." (He would have made that requirement operative only on a witness' prior demand.) "The Doyle resolution is totally inadequate to curb the abuses of congressional investigating committees. Far from being the conscience of the House, it is a sop designed to head off effective legislation."

Citing abuses the resolution would be powerless to combat, Scott said a committee could make public derogatory information about individuals without notice or hearing, would not be required to permit cross-examination of accusing witnesses by a person accused, would not protect witnesses by requiring notice of hearings, or from harassment by radio, TV or film coverage; and that the resolution contained no enforcement provision. "Most important," he said, "it would not prevent the committee from sitting as a legislative court, trying guilt or innocence of individuals, or inquiring into matters wholly unrelated to any function or activity of the U.S. government."

Keating -- Protested the rule under which the bill was being considered, which did not permit amendment. "This resolution...is loosely drawn and if we do not amend it now, we shall have to do so later." Assuring witnesses secrecy and a chance for rebuttal in cases where the committee determines that evidence may tend to "defame, degrade, or incriminate" might be "self-defeating, in that the harm would be done before the committee could provide the intended protection." He feared also that "the secret hearing may be used as a truly terrible reincarnation of the star chamber."

Doyle -- "We need basic House rules below which House committees cannot go.... Committees can make any rules they want as long as they are not inconsistent with this basic foundation."

Martin Dies (D Texas) -- "You have gone as far as you can safely go without hamstringing the effectiveness of investigating committees."

SECURITY COMMISSION

S Res 21 --	Reported by Senate Government Operations Committee (S Rept 581) June 17, 1955.
•	Passed by voice vote of the Senate amended, June 27.
H J Res 157 --	Reported by House Judiciary Committee, amended, June 23 (H Rept 911).
•	Passed by the House June 29, amended, by voice vote.
•	Passed by the Senate July 20, amended.
•	Conference report (H Rept 1407) agreed to by the House and Senate July 27, by voice votes.
P.L. 304 --	Signed into law August 9.

On July 27, 1955, with wide bipartisan support, Congress passed a measure (H J Res 157) establishing a bipartisan commission to review the government security system.

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the President, the joint resolution:

Established a 12-member bipartisan commission to study "the entire government security program." The President, Vice President and Speaker of the House each were to appoint four members, not more than two from the same political party. Six appointees would be from private life, and two each from the House, the Senate, and the executive branch of the government.

Declared it the policy of Congress that there should be a sound program for screening government and defense employees and for enforcing existing security laws, and that it should be administered in "a manner which will protect the national security and preserve basic American rights."

Directed the Commission to study all statutes, Presidential orders, regulations and directives pertaining to security, and the way they were administered, and to report on their "adequacy or deficiencies."

Authorized the Commission to recommend "such changes as it (might) determine necessary or desirable."

Granted the Commission authority to subpena witnesses, records and materials.

Directed the Commission to submit its final report not later than December 31, 1956.

COMMISSION NAMED

Members of the Commission were named Nov. 10:

By the President --

James P. McGranery, former Attorney General under President Truman.

Franklin D. Murphy, chancellor of the University of Kansas.

Louis S. Rothschild, Under Secretary of Commerce.

Carter Lane Burgess, Assistant Defense Secretary.

By the Vice President --

Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.).

Sen. Norris Cotton (R N.H.).

Loyd Wright, past president of the American Bar Association.

Dr. Susan Riley, professor of education at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

By the Speaker of the House --

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.).

Rep. William M. McCulloch (R Ohio).

James L. Noel, Jr., Houston, Texas, attorney.

Edwin L. Mechem, former governor of New Mexico (R).

Background

REFERENCE -- "Security Risks." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 379 ff.)

How best to protect vital government secrets and property, and in particular the methods of screening government and defense employees, had become a political issue. Republicans had capitalized on it in Presidential and Congressional election campaigns, some terming the Democratic tenure in the White House "twenty years of treason." Smarting under the label, Democrats protested "fraud" when the Civil Service Commission periodically announced the number of "security risks" dismissed from government service.

While creation of the 1955 Commission represented a bipartisan effort to take the security problem out of the political arena, it also reflected wide agreement that the problem had been handled in piecemeal fashion, resulting in much confusion and loss of efficiency, and that it deserved extensive impartial study. President Eisenhower, who first objected that no need for such a study existed, said June 29, "I have no objection" to the Commission.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), one of the sponsors of the bill, said that the security program had evolved from a "series of uncoordinated Congressional enactments and executive orders and regulations...The resulting conglomeration...does not add up to an effective, efficient, and sound security system."

EARLIER COMMISSION

President Harry S. Truman in January, 1951 had created an Internal Security Commission headed by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz to recommend ways of strengthening laws against treason, espionage, sabotage and other subversive activities. Republicans strongly criticized its establishment as an attempt to circumvent the Internal Security Act of 1950 and succeeded in forcing the members to resign in May by blocking legislation exempting them from application of the conflict-of-interests law. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, p. 352.)

The chief problem area recognized in 1955 concerned security programs affecting U.S. government employees and defense-contractor personnel. For the most part, these programs had been established by executive order, first by President Truman on March 21, 1947 (Executive Order 9835), later modified by President Eisenhower April 27, 1953 (Executive Order 10450). The programs included methods of investigating employees and applicants, criteria for evaluating background data, procedures for the dismissal of security risks, and avenues of appeal.

The Department of Justice on March 5, 1955 announced, with President Eisenhower's approval, seven revisions in procedures to be followed regarding government employees accused as security risks. One revision provided that, when national security would not be threatened, accused employees would be permitted to question witnesses testifying against them. Another revision provided that an accused employee be made fully aware, by prepared statement, of charges against him.

President Eisenhower in his 1953 order set up the criterion that no person should hold a government job whose employment was "not clearly consistent with the national interest." The program was subsequently criticized on several grounds: first, that the criteria were vague and that security officers, boards, and department heads tended to "play it safe" when confronted with hard cases; second, that different departments interpreted the criteria by different standards; third, that there was no real appeals machinery; fourth--and this also had been leveled against the Truman program--that in most cases the accused was denied the right to face his accusers.

CRITICISM FROM WITHIN

Some of the most outspoken criticism came from ex-Sen. Harry P. Cain (R Wash., 1946-53), a member of the federal Subversive Activities Control Board set up under the Internal Security Act. Cain accused both parties of mixing politics with the security program which, he said, failed to balance security with justice. He favored "a detached and distinguished nonpartisan commission" which would study and handle the security program in a uniform and consistent manner.

Increasing concern over injustices in the security clearance program for government employees was also evidenced in hearings before a Senate Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee dealing with individual security dismissals. (See pp. 518ff.)

Highlighted in these hearings was the running controversy over what Democrats called the "numbers game" being played by the Administration. At issue were the statistics on "security risks" issued periodically by Civil Service Commissioner Philip Young.

Following issuance of Executive Order 10450 in 1953, the Civil Service Commission announced separation of 1,456 security risks from government service, a figure raised to 9,270 by Sept. 29, 1955. Democrats charged the Administration was trying to convince the public that the federal service had been infested with subversives under the Democrats, and challenged the Commission to produce figures showing how many of the total were in fact subversives, as distinguished from other categories of security risks judged unsuitable for government jobs. The Commission stated that it was unable to provide such a breakdown.

In September, Young said that of 37,450 persons dismissed for cause from the government between May 28, 1953, when the President's new security program took effect, and June 30, 1955, a total of 3,586 had been dismissed for security reasons. Another 5,684 had resigned with derogatory information in their files.

Asked for the name of a single discharged employee convicted as a Communist, he replied, "We wouldn't have any names. We just deal in numbers."

The point at issue in the interpretation of Young's statistics was the definition of "security risk." Under Executive Order 10450 the term was broadened to include alcoholics, habitually indiscreet individuals, sex perverts, and other individuals judged unsuitable for employment. The broad definition was criticized on the grounds that all persons labeled as "security risks" were looked upon as subversives by the general public and were ostracized economically and socially.

WORK FOR COMMISSION

The work of the Security Commission would include sifting the statistics, reviewing the definition of "security risk," and in general appraising the procedures for clearance of personnel under the maze of legislative and executive instructions.

Another problem for the Commission would be the question of codifying the statutes relating to internal security, among them the Espionage Act of 1917, the Atomic Energy Acts of 1946 and 1954, the Smith Act of 1940, the McCarran Internal Security Act of 1950, and various appropriations provisions barring payment of salaries to subversives.

Two private studies of the security system were authorized in 1955 by the Fund for the Republic, established by the Ford Foundation. One, published in August, was a factual study of 50 selected loyalty-security cases. They were culled from over 300 cases, some of which involved information which could not be made public. The second study, a "nonpartisan and independent review" of loyalty and security program, was undertaken by a special committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

COURT ACTION

Over several years a large number of security cases had been appealed to the courts. At issue were not only questions of the correct application of security laws and regulations, but also the underlying constitutional questions posed by them.

In 1951 in the Bailey case and again in 1955 in the Peters case, the Supreme Court had under consideration --but failed to rule on--the question whether the loyalty board procedure constituted an abridgment of an individual's right to due process of law, i. e., whether the defendant in a loyalty-security case has the right to confront and cross-examine his accusers.

The Court's policy, as expressed by Justice Felix Frankfurter during consideration of the Peters case, was one of reaching constitutional questions "last, not first."

Senate

COMMITTEE--Government Operations Reorganization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 8-18 on S J Res 21, co-sponsored by Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) and John C. Stennis (D Miss.).

TESTIMONY -- March 8 -- Assistant Attorney General William F. Tompkins, head of the Justice Department's Internal Security Division, defended the Eisenhower Administration's personnel security program as "basically sound." He said "such mistakes that may have been made...have been due to occasional errors in administration of the program," but "percentage-wise there have been no more mistakes in this program than in any other."

Tompkins said "the current attack against government witnesses and informants of the FBI has its roots in a Communist effort" bent on "hamstringing...the FBI's informant system."

March 9 -- Wilber M. Brucker, general counsel of the Defense Department (confirmed July 11 as Secretary of Army), said: "Achieving a proper balance between the demands of security for all of the people and the traditional rights of individuals is one of the most difficult problems of our age. There is no panacea. It calls for the wisdom of Solomon and the patience of Job and presents a challenge which all must strive to meet."

Brucker defended the "framework within which the internal security programs operate as sound." To further the program, he urged enactment of a proposal to bar "subversive individuals" from plants not engaged in defense work, but which in time of war would be.

Fred Ayer, security officer for the Air Force, said many Defense Department employees listed as discharged as "security risks" were not dismissed under the security program's procedures. Brucker said the Defense Department included such persons on its list of security discharges under Civil Service Commission orders.

March 11 -- Scott McLeod, chief security officer of the State Department, said he would hire a person classified as a security risk if he were needed "to get the job done." The final criterion, he said, was "whether a person's employment is clearly consistent with the national interest."

March 16 -- Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission said 2.2 million federal employees had met the security risk standards of the Administration, and the remaining 100,000 were being checked. He said existing regulations had operated "exceedingly well," adding that he saw no need for a special commission to study the program. Young, when asked if applicants for federal jobs were not being prejudged if they were rejected on security grounds without a hearing, said: "I'm more interested in seeing the government operate efficiently and securely."

ORGANIZATION VIEWS

Also testifying at the March hearings were representatives of various private organizations interested in the problems arising from the security program. Following are excerpts from the statements of major witnesses:

Ernest Angell, chairman of the board, American Civil Liberties Union -- "The executive order setting up the security program does not provide for any minimal procedural guaranty, nor does it spell out the criteria to be applied in determining whether a person's retention in employment poses a threat to national security.... We have found in many cases that persons have been suspended who have been accused of the most trivial matters, and are in positions where they could not pose any threat to the national security.... All security determinations today are made by government employees. It is difficult to understand how one can expect a fair and impartial decision to be rendered, one completely free from prejudice, when the person making the decision knows that he himself may be investigated as a security risk or charged with disloyalty should he make a determination which later becomes unpopular."

Thomas E. Harris, associate general counsel, CIO -- "The extension of the security program to all government employees reflects, first, a Congressional sentiment that disloyal persons or Communists do not deserve government jobs, and, second, fear by the executive branch that it would be charged, however unjustifiably, with being 'soft' on Communism or indifferent to security. Neither of these reasons relates to the nation's real, as distinguished from its emotional, security needs.... It seems likely that an actual loss in security may be included in the price paid for this wide extension of the security program. When the government tries to watch everyone, it can't watch anyone very well."

Lincoln W. Lauterstein, chairman of commission on national affairs, American Veterans Committee -- "Mr. Tompkins states in his testimony that one of the defects of the Truman program was that, since there was prevalent feeling that loyalty was the basic test for the removal of an employee, there was hesitancy to take any action which would brand an individual as a disloyal person. The motive for a single category of 'security risk' may have been good, but the result has been that persons discharged as security risks are generally in the minds of future employers and of the American public suspected of disloyalty, a suspicion abetted by irresponsible demagogery."

M. Stanley Livingston, chairman, Federation of American Scientists -- "The Security program is based on the assumption that the primary threat to our national security is loss of secrets, through espionage or accident .... The importance of scientific or technical secrets is almost insignificant compared with the value of trained minds and an environment in which imaginative thinking can flourish. With the present emphasis on secrecy, spreading widely into the many fields in which security is not essential, the problem of personnel security and clearance is greatly magnified. If the areas requiring secrecy could be reduced, the number requiring clearance would be much smaller and the problems would be more easily solved."

David A. Rose, chairman of national civil rights commission, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith -- "We interviewed eight Washington law firms which have handled a total of more than 450 security cases under the Truman and Eisenhower directives. The most striking finding developed by the survey is that these lawyers won more than 90 percent of the cases. In other words, in nine cases out of 10 the formal charges brought by the government against an employee proved to be groundless.... It seems clear that security officers have failed to stop a thin or hollow case in its tracks, but have preferred to let the issue go to a hearing board for determination."

ACTION -- S J Res 21, as reported by the full Committee June 17 (S Rept 581), provided that the Commission report by Dec. 31, 1956.

Floor Action

The Senate June 27 passed, by voice vote, the amended joint resolution (S J Res 21) to create a special bipartisan commission to study the federal security system.

DEBATE -- Humphrey -- Passage of S J Res 21 "represents an indispensable first step in...establishing a well-reasoned, effective, orderly, uniform, and consistent security program.... Without experience and without the time to undertake an exhaustive study and definition of the perils we faced, we were forced to adopt stop-gap security measures....The result was an uncoordinated conglomeration of laws, orders, regulations, and practices which do not add up to an effective, efficient, and sound security system."

Stennis -- "Let us recognize...that Democrats and Republicans...the Congress and the executive branch, have all made mistakes in the field of security.... These mistakes have not been caused by evil motivation or inept discharge of public responsibilities, but rather were the necessary and inevitable consequence of the necessity to erect immediate defenses...against the insidious and imminent perils of Communist imperialism. Let us all resolve to wipe the slate clean of past fumbling with security issues, of past recriminations, in order that we may decide as a matter of considered national policy what security is and how a realistic and effective security program should be conducted."

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- "It was...the unanimous opinion of the Subcommittee which considered the measure (S J Res 21) that it would be greatly for the good of the nation to have a commission review, dispassionately and without partisanship, the entire security system...and to recommend...such measures and steps as...would coordinate and solidify it, and make it even more effective than it now is."

Thomas E. Martin (R Iowa) -- "There are two compelling reasons for this. First, we cannot in the interest of national security have any but the best security program. Second, we cannot tolerate any abuses being perpetrated upon individuals to whom a program may be applied, either because of its structure or its administration."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Set March 31, 1956, as the date the commission would report. Voice vote.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary Committee.
HEARINGS -- None.
ACTION -- H J Res 157 which had been introduced by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) was reported June 23 (H Rept 911), amended.

Floor Action

The House passed H J Res 157 on June 29 by voice vote without debate.

The Senate July 20 passed H J Res 157 by voice vote. Although the similar Senate measure, S J Res 21, had been passed on June 27 and in accordance with practice would have been the measure sent to conference, its sponsor, Sen. Humphrey, waived its precedence in favor of the House measure on grounds that Walter had submitted a similar bill in the 83rd Congress.

Conference

REPORT -- As filed July 26, the conference report (H Rept 1407) resolved minor differences in wording and adopted the date fixed by the House for the final report: December 31, 1956.

ACTION -- The House and Senate July 27 agreed to the report by voice votes.

BRIDGE INVESTIGATION

An investigation of the White County Bridge Commission was authorized May 25, 1955, when the House adopted a resolution (H Res 244) introduced by Rep. Winfield K. Denton (D Ind.). The resolution provided for creation of a three-member select committee to conduct the investigation. Committee members, named June 7, were Denton, Melvin Price (D Ill.), and Sid Simpson (R Ill.). The Committee late in 1955 held hearings and planned to issue a report early in 1956.

PROVISIONS -- H Res 244 directed the Select Committee to:

Investigate the financial position of the White County Bridge Commission.

Determine when the New Harmony bridge would become free of tolls.

Use subpena power, if necessary to procure witnesses and records.

Background

The White County Bridge Commission was created by Congress in 1941 to buy and operate a toll bridge and ferry over the Wabash River between Indiana and Illinois. The Commission was authorized to issue 25-year bonds and eventually turn over the bridge to Indiana and Illinois. No provision was made for governmental auditing of the Commission's financial records.

House

COMMITTEE -- Rules.
ACTION -- Reported H Res 244 May 24 (H Rept 614).

Floor Action

The House May 25 adopted H Res 244 by a 205-166 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 150.)

DEBATE -- Denton -- Congress did not provide for an accounting of the Commission's financial records by any government agency. The Commission issued bonds for $945,000 and "has collected almost $3.2 million in tolls," and the people of the area want to know why the bridge is not yet toll-free. Adoption of H Res 244 would mean that the General Accounting Office would make a free audit of the Commission's books.

Charles W. Vursell (R Ill.) -- The Commission "has done a splendid job...All bonds will be paid off by July 15, 1955...No investigation...is necessary or justified."

HEARINGS HELD

COMMITTEE -- Select Committee to Investigate and Study the Financial Position of the White County Bridge Commission.
HEARING -- Oct. 5.
TESTIMONY -- Oct. 5 -- The Committee in a closed hearing questioned ex-Rep. Roy Clippinger (R Ill., 1945-49), manager of the Bridge Commission; J. Madison Pomeroy, Commission chairman; and Mrs. Dorothy Brown, Clippinger's secretary.

The Committee Oct. 5 released a transcript of the hearing and a report by the Comptroller General on the Commission's activities. The report said that certain transactions between the Commission and the Carmi (Ill.) "Times" had been of "questionable propriety." The report said Clippinger was president of the Carmi "Times" and that he and two members of the Bridge Commission were stockholders in the publishing company.

VETOES

President Eisenhower vetoed 11 bills in 1955, three of them during the Congressional session. The remaining eight were pocket vetoed after Congress adjourned. Mr. Eisenhower vetoed 42 bills in 1954, 10 in 1953. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 409-11; Vol IX, 1953, pp. 310-11.)

Congress in 1955 for the first time attempted to override a veto by President Eisenhower. But the Senate upheld the veto, which killed a bill (S1) to raise postal workers' salaries an average 8.59 percent. The vote was 54-39, eight votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

One bill, a private relief measure (S 432), became law July 5 without President Eisenhower's signature. It went to the President June 23, "and not having been signed by him within the 10-day period prescribed by the Constitution" became law without his approval.

Of the vetoed measures, six originated in the House, five in the Senate. Pocket vetoes killed five House bills, three Senate bills. Four of the bills were private relief measures.

The President pocket vetoes a bill by withholding his approval of it after Congress has adjourned. When Congress is in session, a bill becomes law without the President's signature if he does not act upon it within 10 days, excluding Sundays, from the time it is received by him. But if Congress adjourns within that 10-day period, the bill dies by pocket veto if the President fails to sign it.

REGULAR VETO -- HOUSE

HR 5188 -- To prohibit publication by the government of any prediction with respect to apple prices. The President said he believed it was a "vital responsibility" of the government to gather and disseminate economic information. "This legislation would reduce or seriously limit the ability of fieldworkers to counteract price rumors detrimental to the farmers' interests," he said. Passed by the House June 7 and by the Senate June 17, the measure was vetoed July 1, 1955.

REGULAR VETOES -- SENATE

S 1 -- To increase rates of basic compensation of officers and employees in the field service of the Post Office Department. The Senate passed the bill March 25, the House April 20. The House adopted the conference report May 9, the Senate May 11. President Eisenhower vetoed the bill May 19, and the Senate failed to override the veto May 24. (See "Postal Pay Raise," p. 360.)

S 143 -- To provide for the relief of Kurt Glaser. In vetoing the bill to give Glaser immigration status as a permanent resident, the President recommended enactment "of a clear statutory requirement that exchange personnel return home and remain there for a minimum period before being eligible to re-enter the United States for permanent residence." The Senate passed the bill March 28, the House May 17. It was vetoed June 3.

POCKET VETOES -- HOUSE

HR 1393 -- To provide for the relief of the E. J. Albrecht Co. "There are no circumstances in this case that would serve to distinguish it from others wherein contractors with the United States have suffered losses for which the government was not responsible," Mr. Eisenhower said. The House passed the bill April 19, the Senate July 28. The President refused to sign the bill, and it died Aug. 16.

HR 6232 -- To include as Spanish-American War service under laws administered by the Veterans' Administration certain service rendered by Stephen Swan Ogletree during the Spanish-American War. The President said military records clearly showed that Ogletree was not at any time during the Spanish-American War in the service of the United States. He added that Congress had "determined that cases of this character should be considered by the Army Board for the Correction of Military Records rather than by the legislature itself." The House passed the bill July 5, the Senate July 27. The measure died without the President's signature Aug. 13.

HR 6373 -- Amend Domestic Minerals Program Extension Act of 1953 to extend programs to encourage the discovery, development, and production of certain domestic minerals. The president vetoed the bill because he said it would require the purchase of greater quantities of minerals than necessary for defense purposes. (See "Mineral Stockpile," p. 470.) The House passed the bill July 21, the Senate July 29. Both houses agreed to the conference report Aug 1. The bill was pocket vetoed Aug. 17.

HR 6887 -- To safeguard certain bequests to charity from the pyramiding effect of state and federal inheritance taxes; and to extend for one year a portion of the Internal Revenue Code designed to facilitate railroad reorganizations. The President said he was sympathetic with the purposes of the bill, but that it would often increase federal tax liabilities on estates containing charity bequests in certain situations, would benefit other heirs, and would disturb existing well-established relationships between federal and state inheritance and estate tax liabilities. The House passed the bill July 21, the Senate July 28. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 17.

HR 7195 -- To provide for adjustments in the lands or interests therein acquired for reservoir projects in Texas, by the reconveyance of certain lands or interests therein to the former owners thereof. The President refused to sign the bill because he said it would "unjustly expose the Secretary (of Army) to a series of burdensome and time-consuming administrative proceedings which are entirely alien to his statutory responsibilities." Mr. Eisenhower said lands no longer needed for project purposes should be turned over to the General Services Administration for disposal. The bill was passed by the House July 29, the Senate Aug. 2. It died Aug. 17.

POCKET VETOES -- SENATE

S 204 -- Provide for the relief of Fred P. Hines. The bill was similar to one vetoed by President Eisenhower in 1953. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 311.) In a statement, the President said no new evidence had been submitted to justify a change in his position. The Senate passed the bill July 22, the House Aug. 1. It was pocket vetoed Aug. 17.

S 1041 -- To amend the Civil Service Retirement Act to include certain periods of service rendered to states. The President refused to sign the bill because it would "(1) make improper use of federal funds to pay for services never received by it, (2) result in an unsound shifting of fiscal responsibility from state to federal government, (3) set an undesirable precedent, and (4) constitute an unsound approach to a desirable goal of increased employee mobility." He said he would substitute in 1956 a proposal to bring federal employees under the social security system. The Senate passed the bill June 29, the House July 30. The conference report was agreed to by the Senate Aug. 1, the House Aug. 2. The bill was pocket vetoed Aug. 17.

S 2171 -- To amend the Subversive Activities Control Act to provide that a Board member shall continue to serve after the expiration of his term until his successor is appointed and qualified. The President let the bill die because its provisions were incorporated in another measure (S 2375) signed Aug. 5. The Senate passed the bill June 24, the House July 27. It was pocket votoed Aug. 12.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER

The first business of the House of Representatives, when the 84th Congress convened Jan. 5, 1955, was to elect a Speaker as presiding officer.

Rep. John J. Rooney (D N.Y.), Chairman of the Democratic Caucus, nominated Sam Rayburn (D Texas). Rep. Clifford R. Hope (R Kan.), head of the Republican Conference, nominated Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.), who had held the post in the 83rd Congress. The Rayburn nomination was approved on a roll-call vote in which 228 Democrats voted for Rayburn, and 198 Republicans voted for Martin. Rayburn and Martin voted "present." (For voting, see chart, p. 136.)

BACKGROUND -- Rayburn had been Speaker for more years than any other lawmaker in U.S. history. He was first elected to the office on Sept. 16, 1940 and served until the 80th Congress (1947-48), when Martin became Speaker. Rayburn resumed the post in the 81st Congress and held it until 1953.

D.C. ELECTIONS

HR 191 -- Reported by House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 606) May 20 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House May 23.
- Reported by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 695) June 30.
- Passed by voice vote, amended, by the Senate July 12.
- Conference report (H Rept 1619) agreed to by the Senate Aug. 1 and the House Aug. 2, by voice votes.

P.L. 376 -- Signed into law Aug. 12.

The bill regulated election of District of Columbia delegates to national political conventions. A similar bill was vetoed by President Eisenhower in 1954 because it would have exempted federal employees in the District of Columbia from the Hatch Act, governing political activities. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 410.)

The 1955 legislation set up the first official election machinery for the District in 81 years.

PROVISIONS --- As enacted, HR 191:

Provided for election of party national committeemen, delegates and alternates to national Presidential nominating conventions, and local party committee officials.

Created an independent District Board of Elections with three members, serving staggered three-year terms, to be appointed by the District Commissioners.

Provided for elections in the District on the first Tuesday of May in Presidential election years.

Limited candidates' expenditures to $2,500; independent or party committee receipts or expenditures to $100,000; and individual contributions to $5,000.

Provided maximum penalties of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine for violations of the election rules.

The Senate-House conference report deleted minor Senate provisions relating to a Presidential preferential primary and to absentee ballots. Conferees agreed that consideration of absentee voting should be postponed pending further study of the problems involved.

D.C. HOME RULE

S 669 -- Reported, amended, by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 253) April 28, 1955.
- Passed, by a 59-15 roll-call vote of the Senate, June 29. (See p. 130.)

The bill would provide an elected mayor, city council, school board, and non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives for the District of Columbia. It was introduced by 17 Democratic and 17 Republican Senators. After Senate passage, the bill was sent to the House District of Columbia Committee, which took no action on it in 1955.

Background

REFERENCE -- "D.C. Delegate, Home Rule." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 363ff.) "D.C. Primary" vetoed (CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 410.)

Bills to grant the District of Columbia some measure of home rule have been introduced in each Congress since the 80th, but all have failed to become law.

Home-rule legislation cleared the House District Committee in the 80th Congress, but got no further. The Senate passed a home-rule bill in the 81st Congress, but the House District Committee did not act upon it. Again during the 82nd Congress, the Senate passed home-rule legislation and the House Committee failed to act. In 1953, the Senate passed a bill calling for the election of a delegate to the House, but it was tabled by the House District Committee. The Senate Committee also voted to report a home-rule bill in 1953, but it did not reach the Senate floor.

In 1954, Congress approved a bill to set up primary elections in the District through which residents could elect Party National Committeemen and delegates to the national conventions. It was vetoed by President Eisenhower who said he disapproved of a provision which would have allowed federal employees in the District to engage in partisan political activity, thus amending the Hatch Act. The 84th Congress Aug. 2, 1955, passed a bill (HR 191 -- PL 376) similar to the measure vetoed by the President in 1954. (See story, above.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia

HEARINGS -- On S 669, Feb. 3, 16, and 22.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 3 -- District Commissioners Renah F. Camalier and Samuel Spencer recommended an amendment to include a provision for adequate federal payment to the city. Enactment of the bill also was favored by 17 other witnesses.

Feb. 16 -- Representatives of organizations both favoring and opposing the bill were heard. Groups favoring S 669 included the American Association of University Women, Progressive Party of D.C., Washington Central Labor Union, and Central Suffrage Conference. Opponents included the Washington Board of Trade and the D.C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Feb. 22 -- Those supporting S 669 included Sens. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine), Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.), Francis Case (R S.D.), Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), J. Glenn Beall (R Md.), Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.), and Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.).

ACTION -- The Committee April 28 reported S 669, amended, (S Rept 253).

Floor Action

The Senate June 29 passed S 669 by a 59-15 roll-call vote. Eleven of the votes against the bill were cast by southern Senators. (For voting, see chart, p. 130.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 669, the District of Columbia Charter Act, would:

Set up a five-member Board of Elections, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, to conduct elections in October, 1956, for a mayor, a nine-member City Council, school board, and non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives.

Define the functions and powers of the city officials.

Provide for a referendum on Aug. 3, 1956, to determine whether D.C. residents would accept the charter.

DEBATE -- All speakers favored the bill.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- "Unless the people of the District of Columbia are given a voice in their local government, a mockery is made of the protestations of this country that we believe in representative government."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "The privileges granted by the bill are long overdue." But the "greater objective" is to work out constitutional problems so that D.C. citizens may vote for President and have "voting representation in Congress."

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Endorsed home rule but opposed extending D.C. voting rights further.

D.C. TRANSIT STRIKE

S 2576 --	Reported by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 1152) July 26, 1955.
•	Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, amended, July 30.
HR 7718 --	Reported by House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 1603) July 30.
S 2576 --	Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Aug. 2. (For roll-call vote, see p. 160.)
•	Conference report (H Rept 1632) agreed to by voice votes of House and Senate Aug. 2.
P.L. 389 --	Signed into law Aug. 14.

Employees of Washington's Capital Transit Co. struck July 1 for higher pay. Before adjourning, Congress passed legislation designed to give the District of Columbia commissioners authority to intervene in the strike and settle it. Transit employees returned to work Aug. 22.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, S 2576:

Cancelled the transit company's franchise one year after the bill became law and revoked the company's corporate charter.

Empowered the District commissioners to contract with CTC or some other company for transit service in the District of Columbia.

Authorized the commissioners to enter into agreements with Maryland authorities to continue transit service in nearby sections of Maryland served by CTC.

Permitted CTC to continue operation of a small spur railroad handling freight.

Authorized the commissioners to negotiate with striking CTC employees.

Required the District to pay any loss the transit line might suffer during the year as a result of pay increases.

Prohibited pay raises to company officials.

Permitted the District to increase fares, with the consent of the District Public Utilities Commission.

Required CTC, on termination of its charter and franchise, to remove at its own expense track used in its operation.

Background

REFERENCE -- "D.C. Transportation." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 416.)

Complaints about the service rendered by the private corporation owning Washington's Capital Transit Co. led to a Congressional investigation in 1953, attempts at legislation in 1953 and 1954.

CTC employees struck July 1, 1955, seeking higher wages. The 51-day strike ended Aug. 21. Employees agreed to accept a 15-cent-an-hour pay raise, to be offset by a fare rise.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia Subcommittee on Public Health, Education, Welfare, and Safety.

HEARINGS -- July 7, 12, 21 on S J Res 87, which proposed to cancel the franchise of Capital Transit Co., and on the employees' strike.

TESTIMONY -- July 7 -- Financier Louis E. Wolfson, Capital Transit board chairman, wired the Subcommittee he would appear before it July 11. Subpenas had been issued for his appearance, but none had been served. A Subcommittee member, Wayne Morse (D Ore.), said Wolfson adopted "seclusive and fugitive tactics" to avoid the subpenas.

Appearing before the Subcommittee were Samuel Spencer, President, and Robert E. McLaughlin, member, of the D.C. Board of Commissioners; J.A.B. Broadwater, CTC president, and Walter J. Bierwagen, president of National Capital Local, Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electrical Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America (AFL).

July 12 -- Wolfson disputed contentions by Morse that Wolfson had been ducking a subpena. Wolfson said the company was willing to accept a plan advanced by Reps. John L. McMillan (D S.C.) and Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) to end the strike. Under it, a 120-day cooling off period would be called, the strikers would get a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase, and the company would be granted a fare increase.

Wolfson said the company could not afford a wage increase without a fare increase. If other private capital could be found to operate the transit system, Wolfson said, he would be glad to step out.

July 21 -- Testimony was given by Brig. Gen. Thomas A. Lane, engineer commissioner for D.C.; Vernon West, District corporation counsel; and E. Erwin Dollar, Associated Taxicab Operators, Inc.

ACTION -- The Committee July 26 reported a bill (S 2576 -- S Rept 1152) to revoke the CTC franchise and authorize seizure of the company. The vote was 6-1 to report the bill, with Gordon Allott (R Colo.) opposed.

PROVISIONS -- The bill would revoke the 1933 franchise, authorize District Commissioners to seize and operate the transit vehicles, and permit operations in nearby Maryland, subject to that state's approval.

Floor Action

The Senate July 30 passed, by voice vote, S 2576, amended.

DEBATE -- Morse - "What we are really dealing with is a request on the part of the city administration of the District of Columbia to be allowed to exercise the right of home rule in connection with operating a transportation system."

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- "I do not like the idea of either the federal government or a state government interfering in a strike, at least within five weeks' time. If we get in the habit of having the federal government step in whenever there is a dispute between labor and management, we may well make an end of collective bargaining entirely...."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Allott -- Permit CTC to continue operating a spur railroad known as the East Washington Railway Co. Voice.

J. Glenn Beall (R Md.) -- Permit the commissioners to negotiate with Maryland authorities for the continuation of CTC service. Voice.

Morse -- Permit the commissioners to contract with companies other than CTC to operate the Washington transit system. Voice.

Morse -- Permit CTC to sue for damages or for the use of its property under the due process clause of the Constitution. Voice.

House

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.

HEARINGS -- July 25, 26 on various proposals for handling the Washington transit strike.

ACTION -- The Committee July 30 reported an amended bill (HR 7718 -- H Rept 1603) calling for the Capital Transit Co. to surrender its franchise.

PROVISIONS -- As reported, HR 7718 authorized the District of Columbia commissioners to enter into a contract with Capital Transit Co. under which the commissioners would accept relinquishment by the company of all its rights in one year. (The Senate bill called for expiration of all rights in one year).

The Commissioners were authorized to enter into a contract with the company to continue to operate as provided in its franchise.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 1 failed to muster a two-thirds majority to suspend the rules and pass S 2576. The standing vote was 94-75; a subsequent roll-call vote was 215-150. Both were short of the necessary two-thirds majority. (For roll-call vote, see chart, p. 164.)

The House Aug. 2 passed S 2576 by voice vote. The measure was amended by substitution of provisions of HR 7718, passed earlier Aug. 2 by voice vote. The House then vacated passage of HR 7718.

Prior to final action a motion to recommit HR 7718 to the House District of Columbia Committee, offered by Shepard J. Crumpacker (R Ind.), was rejected by a standing vote of 29-130. A move by Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) to strike the enacting clause of HR 7718 was rejected by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Aug. 1 -- John L. McMillan (D S.C.) -- S 2576, amended, "contains no seizure features, and it does not involve the federal government in the transit business..."

Aug 2 -- Hoffman -- "This a strike-breaking measure.... We will either end the strike by granting the (pay) increase to the employees, or the commissioners, being a branch of the federal government, or under the supervision of the federal government, will say to the strikers, 'You are through. You cannot strike against the government. Get back to work.' "

Conference

REPORT -- Conferees Aug. 2 agreed to a report (H Rept 1632) which eliminated provisions of the Senate bill to authorize seizure of the Capital Transit Co.

ACTION -- The House Aug. 2 agreed to H Rept 1632 by a standing vote of 140-60. The Senate agreed to the report by voice vote.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

On signing the bill Aug. 14, President Eisenhower said he opposed any attempt to settle labor disputes through legislation, but the law granting Capital Transit the D.C. franchise established a direct relationship between the company and Congress. He said Congress reserved for itself the power to terminate the franchise, and both Congress and the District commissioners had concluded that the company "has failed to measure up to its responsibilities as a public utility...."

SENATE COMMITTEES

S Res 14 -- Adopted by the Senate Jan. 6, 1955 by voice vote.

S Res 19 -- Adopted by the Senate Jan. 10 by voice vote.

By adopting the two resolutions, the Senate continued for the 84th Congress the apportionment of committee seats agreed upon for the second session of the 83rd Congress (1954).

PROVISIONS -- S Res 14, as corrected by S Res 19:

Allotted the majority party 114 committee seats and the minority 99.

Permitted 16 majority Senators and five minority Senators to serve on three committees provided one or more of their assignments was on the District of Columbia, Government Operations, or Post Office and Civil Service Committees.

PARTY LINE-UP

The line-up of the 84th Congress when it convened Jan. 5, 1955, was 48 Democrats, 47 Republicans and one Independent.

Independent Wayne Morse (Ore.) had announced he would vote with the Democrats on organization matters (selection of Senate officers), thus giving the Democrats a 49-47 margin over the GOP. The Democrats reciprocated by assigning Morse to the influential Foreign Relations and Banking and Currency Committees as well as to the so-called minor District of Columbia Committee. Morse formally became a Democrat Feb. 17.

BACKGROUND -- In 1953, Morse, who had bolted the Republicans in 1952 and become an Independent, was "bumped" by the Senate from posts on the Armed Services and Labor and Public Welfare Committees -- where he had built up seniority as a Republican -- and assigned as low man to the Public Works and D.C. Committees. By roll-call votes in 1953 and 1954, the Senate turned down attempts to reinstate Morse on the Armed Services and Labor groups. (See CQ Almanacs, Vol. X, 1954, p. 414; Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 312ff.)

When the Senate convened in 1954, it numbered 48 Democrats, 47 Republicans and Morse (just as in 1955). But Morse had said he would vote with the GOP on organizational matters, the Democrats did not attempt to challenge GOP control of the Senate, and the Republicans continued as majority Party, through the 83rd Congress.

D.C. JUDICIAL PAY

S 727 -- Reported by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 254) April 28, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate May 5.
- Reported by House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 586) May 12.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 283-33 roll-call vote May 23. (See p. 150.)
- First conference report (H Rept 635) recommitted May 26 by the House on a 170-165 roll-call vote. (See p. 150.)
- Second conference report (H Rept 920) agreed to by a 197-42 standing vote of the House June 29; by voice vote of the Senate June 30.

P. L. 139 -- Signed into law July 11.

S 727 adjusted the salaries of judges in the District of Columbia, granting annual increases of $4,500 to municipal court of appeals judges and judges of the municipal and tax courts, and $5,700 to the judge of the Juvenile Court.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, S 727 set the following annual salaries:

D.C. municipal court of appeals judges -- $18,500, with $500 more for the chief judge.

D.C. municipal, tax, and juvenile court judges -- $17,500, with $500 more for the municipal court's chief judge.

BACKGROUND -- Earlier in 1955, Congress enacted a bill (HR 3828 -- PL 9) raising federal district court judges' salaries to $22,500, as well as granting Congressmen a pay raise. (See pp. 357ff.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.

ACTION -- April 28 reported S 727 (S Rept 254).

Floor Action

The Senate May 5 passed S 727 by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 727 provided the following annual salary increases:

Chief judge, municipal court of appeals -- from $14,500 to $20,000.

Associate judges, municipal court of appeals -- from $14,000 to $19,500.

Chief judge, municipal court -- from $13,500 to $19,000.

Associate judges, municipal court -- from $13,000 to $18,500.

Judge of Juvenile Court -- from $11,800 to $18,500.

Judge of District of Columbia tax court -- from $13,000 to $18,500.

DEBATE -- Alan Bible (D Nev.) -- "In recommending adjustment of the salaries, the Committee...felt that since the judge of the juvenile court and the judge of the tax court are a part of the municipal judiciary, their salaries should be the same as those of the municipal court...The salary increases involve 18 judgeships, and the cost to the District government would be $100,200 annually."

House

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.

ACTION -- May 12 reported S 727, (H Rept 586), recommending smaller increases than had the Senate.

Floor Action

The House May 23 passed S 727 by a 283-33 roll-call vote, with Committee amendments. (For voting, see chart, p. 150.)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, S 727 called for:

A $3,000 annual salary increase for judges on the four D.C. courts.

A salary range of from $14,800 a year for the juvenile court judge to $17,500 a year for the chief judge of the appeals court.

DEBATE -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "This proposed salary is fantastic as compared with the salaries of municipal judges in...Iowa or South Carolina."

Joseph P. O'Hara (R Minn.) -- D.C. municipal judges have a jurisdiction much broader than those in the states. Congress, in PL 9, raised federal district judges' salaries by $7,500, to $22,500, and traditionally, D.C. municipal court salaries are "just $2,000 under the federal courts."

Conference

FIRST REPORT

Senate and House conferees May 25 issued a conference report (H Rept 633) calling for the following annual salary increases:

D.C. municipal court of appeals -- $19,000, with $500 more for the chief judge.

D.C. municipal, tax, and juvenile courts -- $18,000, with $500 more for the municipal court's chief judge.

ACTION -- The report was recommitted May 26 by a 170-165 roll-call vote of the House, which instructed its conferees to insist on a $3,000 increase, instead of the $5,000 raise called for in H Rept 633. The recommittal motion was offered by John Bell Williams (D Miss.) (For voting, see chart, p. 150.)

SECOND CONFERENCE

Senate and House conferees June 27 filed a second report (H Rept 920), cleared June 30 for the President.

Action

The House June 29 agreed to the second conference report by a 197-42 standing vote. A recommittal motion by Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.), with instructions to conferees to insist on the salary level set in the House version of the bill, was defeated by a 158-226 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 156.)

DEBATE -- Williams -- House conferees were instructed to stand firm. Yet "after 15 minutes (in the second conference) the House went up $1,500 and the Senate came down $500."

Woodrow W. Jones (D N.C.) -- "If this conference report is adopted, these judges will be the highest paid municipal judges in this nation," receiving more than supreme court judges in 41 states.

Louis C. Rabaut (D Mich.) -- Congress has raised the pay of itself, government employees, servicemen, and federal judges. "Now we come down to the District of Columbia, and the attitude of some is that we are going to push them around."

O'Hara -- "The difference between what the House passed and the conference report is the grand total of $27,000 in annual salaries...I hope we are not going to be niggardly and treat these judges unfairly, because they are doing a marvelous job."

SENATE CONCURRENCE

The Senate June 30 agreed to the second conference report by voice vote, without debate. The action cleared the bill for the President's signature.

CONGRESSMEN IN COURT

A former Republican Representative and a Democratic Member of the House were involved in court actions during 1955. Their names:

- Ex-Rep. Ernest K. Bramblett (R Calif., 1947-54).
- Rep. John J. Bell (D Texas).

BRAMBLETT CONVICTION

The Supreme Court of the U.S. April 4 reinstated Bramblett's conviction on charges of making false statements in connection with alleged payroll "kickbacks" from an employee in his office.

Bramblett, indicted in 1953 on 18 counts, was convicted on Feb. 9, 1954, on seven counts of making false statements relating to the salary of an employee who did no work. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 384.) A Congressman at the time of his trial, Bramblett asked the U.S. District Court to set aside his conviction; he also appealed his case to the Supreme Court, contending the false statement law did not apply to the legislative branch of the government.

The high court, in a 6-0 decision, held that the false statement law did indeed apply to the legislative branch. Bramblett June 15 was fined $5,000 by the District Court and given a four- to 12-month suspended sentence.

BELL INDICTMENT

Bell was indicted July 8 on a charge of conspiracy to commit theft in a land transaction. A Guadalupe County (Texas) grand jury accused the lawmaker of conspiring with two other persons to steal $154,810 from the state in a veterans' land transaction. The indictment was dismissed Dec. 12 on a technicality.

At a state probe in March, Bell told a legislative investigating committee he had received attorneys' fees calculated to total $28,112 in a series of land transactions. He said he had received $3,500 from T.J. McLarty of Denver, Colo., for legal services in a deal involving 24 veterans. McLarty also was indicted.

When news of the indictment reached Bell in Washington, he said: "I deny any guilt. I'm shocked and surprised. I violated no law." Bell, who helped set up the land program when he was a state legislator, was elected to Congress in 1954 from Texas' 14th District.

In moving to dismiss Bell's indictment Dec. 12, the government conceded that the grand jury had been selected improperly -- a juror had not paid his poll tax. McLarty's indictment was quashed for the same reason.

By July, 319 indictments were returned against 21 persons. The case broke in November, 1954, in a newspaper story by Kenneth Towery of Cuero, Texas. Towery was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for his efforts.

The deal involved 3,701 acres of land for which the state paid $177,530. Under the plan, veterans who wanted to purchase land went through the necessary formalities, then the state bought the land and sold it to them. The veterans obligated themselves to repay the state in extended installments. In some cases, the supposed sellers merely passed around blank application forms to veterans, and then filled in the blanks without their knowledge. Often the land was appraised at excessive amounts.

CONTEMPT CITATIONS

Congressional committees recommended six citations for contempt of Congress in 1955. Five were voted by the Senate or House. The sixth, involving Harvey Matusow, was dropped when Matusow was indicted for perjury by a federal grand jury. As in 1954, when Congress cited 36 individuals for contempt (29 of them on recommendation of the House Un-American Activities Committee), most of the 1955 cases resulted from refusals to testify concerning alleged Communist activities or affiliations. (For 1954 citations, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 364.) Citations in 1955:

Legal Background

What constitutes contempt of Congress by witnesses? Where do the legal milestones point? Key court decisions and statutes:

POWER TO COMPEL DISCLOSURE

"There is no provision (in the Constitution) expressly investing either house with power to make investigations and exact testimony to the end that it may exercise its legislative function advisedly and effectively.... In actual legislative practice power to secure needed information by such means has long been treated as an attribute of the power to legislate.... (This) view has prevailed and been carried into effect in both houses of Congress and in most of the state legislatures." (McGrain v. Daugherty (1927) 273 U.S. 135, 161.)

LEGISLATIVE PURPOSE PRESUMED

"The only legitimate object the Senate could have in ordering the investigation was to aid it in legislating; and we think the subject matter was such that the presumption should be indulged that this was the real object." (McGrain v. Daugherty, supra.)

SCOPE OF INQUIRY

"A legislative inquiry may be as broad, as searching, and as exhaustive as is necessary to make effective the constitutional powers of Congress.... Within the realm of legislative discretion, the exercise of good taste and good judgment in the examination of witnesses must be entrusted to those who have been vested with authority to conduct such investigations." (Townsend v. U.S. (1938) 95 F 2d 352, 361.)

LAW ON CONTEMPT

"Every person who having been summoned as a witness by the authority of either house of Congress to give testimony or to produce papers upon any matter under inquiry before either house, or any joint committee established by a joint or concurrent resolution of the two houses of Congress, or any committee of either house of Congress, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the question under inquiry, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 nor less than $100 and imprisonment in a common jail for not less than one month nor more than 12 months." (2 USC 192.)

WHAT IS PERTINENT?

"It may often be proper, justifiable, and ultimately helpful in the accomplishment of its investigative purposes for a Congressional committee to address to witnesses questions which it cannot demonstrate to be pertinent. But in branding a refusal to answer as a misdemeanor, Congress was careful to provide that the question must be 'pertinent to the question under inquiry.' It follows that, when a witness refuses to answer a question and the government undertakes to convict him of a criminal offense for not answering, then pertinency must be established. Presumption or possibility of pertinency will not suffice." (Bowers v. U.S. (1953) 202 F 2d 447, 448.)

PRIVILEGE MAY BE DENIED

"No witness is privileged to refuse to testify to any fact, or to produce any paper, respecting which he shall be examined...by any committee of either house, upon the ground that his testimony to such fact or his production of such paper may tend to disgrace him or otherwise render him infamous." (2 USC 193.)

Self-Incrimination

How are witnesses protected against being forced to incriminate themselves? How has Congress dealt with claims of immunity from self-incrimination?

IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION

The Fifth Amendment provides that no person "shall be compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against himself." In 1954, Congress revised the statute relating to immunity from prosecution. Public Law 600 provided that in the course of any investigation relating to national security, witnesses who seek Fifth Amendment protection may be compelled to testify, whether before Congressional committees, grand juries, or the courts, if they are granted immunity from prosecution. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 333.)

"No such witness," says PL 600 "shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is so compelled, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence, nor shall testimony so compelled be used as evidence in any criminal proceeding" (except for perjury or contempt committed while giving testimony) "against him in any court."

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

In reporting the bill which became PL 600, the House Judiciary Committee reviewed the history of immunity. Excerpts from the report (H Rept 2606):

"Under court decisions it has been well settled that the privilege against self-incrimination is not limited merely to criminal prosecutions but also investigations and proceedings conducted by various agencies of the government, such as administrative agencies, Congressional committees, and grand juries.... The courts have ruled that a person can properly claim his privilege under the Fifth Amendment if a criminal charge, no matter how remote, may possibly be the aftermath of any testimony he has given....

"The privilege against self-incrimination...has been construed so that one is not a witness against himself if he is immunized against prosecution for crimes about which he is compelled to testify.... But the immunity must be complete, that is to say, it must equate the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. The mere prohibition against the use of actual testimony in a subsequent criminal proceeding on a matter upon which he has been compelled to testify is not coextensive with the constitutional protection.
